"Caterpillar" Twenty-Two pulling 7½" Killefer cover crop disk working along terrace contours preparing for cotton planting on farm of H. H. Bailey near Luella, Ga. This Twenty-Two has plowed and harrowed over 1000 acres at a cost of $1.00 per acre, according to the owner.

THOUSANDS of farmers the world over have proved that lowest fuel costs are only part of the amazing savings these tractors give! Many "Caterpillar" Diesel Tractors have already done 10,000 hours and more of heavy-duty farm work, which is longer than ordinary tractors last! Still saving on fuel like new! Multiplying fuel saving 60% to 80% hour by hour, month by month! And sustaining these savings by upkeep so low as to be the marvel of the tractor building industry!

WRITE us—NOW—and we will tell you where you can see a Twenty-Two on the job—doing the work you do and under conditions like yours.

Brief Farm News

Cotton seed treated with mercury dust generally gives better yields of lint than untreated seed, reports the Bureau of Plant Industry. "Our experience last year with the Ceresan treatment of cotton seed was highly satisfactory," says H. B. Tisdale of the Alabama Experiment Station. Alabama farmers are being advised to grow sufficient sorghum to cut next summer to store in trench silos. Goose-neck sorghum, sometimes called Texas seeded ribbon cane, is the variety recommended.

Local Store Keeps Step By Handling Popular Clothing Brands

Women shoppers and men shoppers of this section have learned sometime ago that when in search of the very latest in styles in wearing apparel, the firm of J.R. Mullins & Sons is the place to go.
Whether it be just a pattern for making a new dress or a tailored suit for men, J.R. Mullins & Sons trained clerks have their minds right on that business—and keep them there.
Women shoppers especially are delighting in the new spring and summer prints from which many of the attractive dresses are now being made. Patterns, cloth, thread and buttons to match are found right at the fingertips of shoppers at this well known Clanton store.
One of the largest stocks of shoes, from which the smallest infant to the biggest man in the county can be fitted, will be found at J.R. Mullins & Sons. The well known Brown-Bilt shoes are stocked there, with the Buster Brown shoes for children.
One outstanding feature of the merchandise carried by this old Chilton County firm, is the fact that their selections are made from stocks of reliable manufacturers and direct from samples.

AUTHOR OF AMENDMENT INTENDED ALL FLOURS TO BE TAX FREE

Due to the differences of opinion in reference to the amendment to the Chichester Sales Tax Act exempting flour, B. C. Apperson, secretary of the Alabama Independent Merchants Association, in a letter asked Representative J. N. Poole of Butler County, author of the amendment exempting flour, coffee and sugar, side meat and meal, for an expression setting out his intentions when he offered this amendment.

Mr. Apperson's letter to Representative Poole follows:
"Hon. J. N. Poole
Butler Springs, Ala.
Dear Mr. Poole:

"There appears to be some discussion between Tax Commissioner Henry Long and Attorney-General Carmichael with reference to the exemptions of flour under the Chichester Sales Tax Act. "It was my understanding that your intention was to exempt all flours, as per your amendment in the Bill.

"If convenient for you to do so I will appreciate an expression from you as to your intention in offering this amendment.

"Thanking you and with kindest personal regards, I am

Yours very truly,

"Ala. Independent Merchants Ass'n, Inc
B. C. Apperson, Sec'y-Treas."

Representative Poole's reply to Mr. Apperson's letter reads as follows:
"Mr. B. C. Apperson, Secretary,
Alabama Independent Merchants Assn., 604-5 Lyric Building,
Birmingham, Alabama.

"In reply to yours of March 17 I wish to say that it was certainly my intention to exempt all flours when I introduced my amendment and in my opinion the members of the Legislature who voted for the amendment certainly thought they were voting to exempt self-rising flour. If self-rising flour is not flour then what is flour?
Yours very truly,
J. N. POOLE."

CROSS-ROW CULTIVATION OFFER MANY ADVANTAGES

Many farmers are using spring tooth weeder, rotary hoes and drag harrows to a great advantage in cross-row cultivating their young corn, cotton, soy beans and peanuts on lands not infested with Johnson grass, nut grass, bermuda grass or bind weeds.

Actual experiences have shown that cross-row cultivation often reduces production costs, makes cultivation a much easier task and greatly increases the number of acres that each farmer and his helpers can cultivate.

The weeder is one of the most useful implements to use in cross cultivation. It is a low cost unit and can be secured by most farmers for a very few dollars. The drag harrow can be used on soil that will support the harrow with the teeth angles backward if the operator is careful to see that it does not destroy the stand by cutting too deeply into the soil or by dragging sticks, stalks and other trash. The rotary hoe is very effective on level land but to be most effective it must be drawn at a rapid rate. These three implements do better work when used across the rows and not with the rows.

By starting shortly after the crops are planted these tools can be used very effectively in killing young grasses and weeds and in breaking soil crusts so that young crops can come through.

Cross-row cultivation is recommended by A. Carnes, head, and E. G. Disker, assistant professor in agricultural engineering of the Alabama Extension Service, and John W. Randolph, agricultural engineer of the Bureau of Agricultural Engineering.

ALL CARS ON THE ROAD NEED MOTOR OIL CHANGE

Every motor vehicle that has been in operation during the winter months should have its engine oil drained, the crankcase should be flushed, and re-filled with new oil of the proper grade for the spring season, Mr. H. G. Meador, Division Manager for the Gulf Oil Corporation, has advised motorists. "Engine oil in cars that have been running during the cold months is certain to be diluted and contaminated to the extent that its lubricating value is badly impaired, and in a good many engines this contamination has reached the point where damage to bearings, cylinders and pistons is likely to result if the oil is not changed," the Gulf official continued.

"During winter months considerable water gets into engine oil and contaminates it. Over a gallon of water is produced in an auto engine with the burning of a gallon of gasoline, and during warm weather most of this water is dissipated through the exhaust in the form of vapor or steam. Moisture in the crankcase is condensed to water much more rapidly in cold weather. "Motor oil is further diluted by the action of automatic chokes. With cold engines, automatic chokes may remain in operation throughout the period of a short run and permit too rich a mixture, or even raw gasoline, to get into the cylinders and thereby cause dilution of the motor oil.

"Leakage of anti-freeze solutions, collection of dust and abrasives, and the chemical change that constantly is taking place in motor oil in an engine, in addition to water contamination, makes it very necessary that every car owner have his winter oil drained without delay," Mr. Meador concluded.

Mrs. Frances Rauley of Evansville, Ind., received a divorce from her husband when she testified that he hadn't taken a bath in four months.

THE RICH FARM FAMILY

Alabama farmers have no assurance that cotton prices will remain firm until picking time. The cotton market is subject to a variety of factors and to conditions in many scattered sections of the globe.

But whether it rains in Brazil or snows in Russia, men, women and children will have to be fed in Alabama. To depend on profitable prices for cotton as a guarantee for the grocery bill is to gamble. To plant a field of peas and potatoes and a patch of sugar cane is to insure a supply of food.

Many Alabama farmers must be considering a choice between producing an extra bale of cotton to buy livestock feed and raising enough corn for the same purpose. The latter is the safest, and in the long run the most economical method.

A "cash crop" carries with it little advantage if the returns must be spent for food and feed which could be produced at home.

The depression was regarded by some as a blessing in disguise since it demonstrated the wisdom of a garden, a hog and a few chickens. Those who would forget the lessons of the depression and stake everything on the illusion of a few dollars in "real money" will be making a mistake.

While the carry-over of American cotton has been reduced, it is still considerably above what is considered the normal supply. If production is increased this year and conditions remain favorable, a drop in the price is sure to follow. Few responsible authorities believe that the price of cotton will ever go beyond 15 cents again. The competition from foreign sources and the competition from synthetic substitutes are factors which must be considered.

Those farm families in Alabama will be considered richest next fall who have a pantry stocked with canned goods, a smokehouse filled with home-cured meat and a crib filled with corn, soybeans, velvet beans or peanuts. That

It is appropriately named—Delight Cocktail. To prepare servings for six, mix two cups canned Hawaiian pineapple juice, one cup unadulterated tomato juice and the juice of two lemons. Chill and shake well before serving.

Every woman likes to have a list of easily prepared main dishes from which to choose on those days when she has but a few minutes to spend in the kitchen preparing dinner. Nothing could be more satisfactory at such a time than this recipe for pan-fried oysters. Drain one pint of oysters, place in a heavy frying pan and cook over a low fire until the edges curl. "BEAUTIFYING CLANTON"

There seems to be a general trend of beautifying and improving all Southern cities and communities just now. With the same in view Clanton should be included. Landscaping and growing flowers and shrubs are very contagious, and once started spreads like wild fire. All other places having their share of improvements Clanton, likewise is entitled to hers. There is enough for all. Our roadsides need planting. A play ground or park needs to be developed or planted and ever so many other things could be done, but the best of all to inspire ones interest would be to have a garden club and there study various shrubs, and flowers and their landscaping. Let's select the needed things to do and work on them. What do you think of this?

Clanton is to be complimented by so many beautiful homes, grounds and gardens developed. There are a number that show extensive expense and efforts in both the general planting and outdoor living rooms and gardens developed. The years required in developing gardens and grounds show that every years growth is important. Along with the care and attention they require what beautiful interest and untold knowledge develops along with the gardens.

With the many beautiful homes that have been built on the Maplesville highway and other parts of Clanton in the past few months will give the home makers much to do in the yards for the next several years and there is so much to be learned about landscaping and why should England have all the beauty anyway. We are here in the sunny South, we have everything that is needed to be just as beautiful or more so than England.

A friend once said "One is happiest nearest nature and God." So my friends let's get busy to nature and God.

"The Farm"

I've heard folks say they loved to farm. Out far and far away. Among the hills and crystal streams. In Sunshine and in May. They say they love to plant their corn. And watch the rows bob up. And breathe the air of fresh, cool pools. And drink of Nature's cup. They say it's fun—I'm going to see. I wait a country life. Where joy shoots forth in spring's first buds. And Nature knows no strife.

HOME DEMONSTRATION CLUB NEWS Minooka Club

The Minooka Home Demonstration Club met at the home of Mrs. Brady with twenty members and two visitors present. Mrs. Stockdale gave a good reading on Citizenship, describing a good citizen as one who cooperates in all good works of community country and state. Also in law abiding and helpful in every way possible.

Mrs. Spencer gave a good reading on "Peace" which was enjoyed by all. The leaders then took charge and their demonstration was on food for the sick and convalescent. Valuable instruction was given for menus for the diabetic, the tubercular, the anemic and those with pellagra.

Refreshments were served by the hostess after which plants and seeds were exchanged. The happy and profitable meeting adjourned to meet with Mrs. W. B. Broadhead next month.

Articles made of corn sacks, were so few that the contest was carried over until next meeting.

A report on "Overweights and Underweights, their causes and remedies" was given by Martha Kennedy.

The meeting was closed by singing the "Smile Song" and repeating the pledge.

At our next meeting, which will be held at Mrs. Fannie Collins, we will study "Special Diets."

We wish to acknowledge with sincere thanks the kindness and sympathy shown during the illness and death of our wife and mother, Mrs. Eliza C. Jones.

We shall not forget the beautiful floral offerings, the consolation given us by Bros. Emfinger, Bass and Truett, the great kindness of Mr. J. Mell Martin, and the sweet singing of Mr. W. M. Devaughn, his son and daughter.

PAIN

Get rid of it

When functional pains of menstruation are severe, take CARDUI. If it doesn't benefit you, consult a physician. Don't neglect such pains. They depress the tone of the nerves, cause sleeplessness, loss of appetite, wear out your resistance. Get a bottle of Cardui and see whether it will help you, as thousands of women have said it helped them. Besides easing certain pains, Cardui aids in building up the whole system by helping women to get more strength from their food.

MAKES APPEAL TO PEOPLE

Mr. Editor:

Please allow me space in your paper to say to the fathers and mothers of Clanton County to take it home to themselves concerning our son, Albert, and if you know anything on our boy please come to us about it and not go to the other fellow. Suppose it was your boy that everybody was saying those horrible things about. We don't want to hurt anyone's feelings but it almost breaks our hearts for everyone to talk like they have talked and we would certainly appreciate it if anyone knows anything to come tell us and not tell the world.

The Bible says if we have any enemies to pray for them. We have tried our best to raise our children right. We don't know what they have done, but it grieves our hearts to think he is gone and such things being told, so we just ask that all the praying people will pray for us and that this awful thing will come right some day.

The school is sorry to hear of the death of Mr. Honeycutt and Mr. Conner this week. Several students have been affected by these deaths.

County Wide Program A Success
Last Friday night the representatives from the various schools of the county came together to compete for the prizes given in a recent county-wide amateur contest.

Those winning prizes were: Helen Hayes, song and dance, representing Clanton, first prize; Dorothy Jenkins, Maplesville High School Contortionist, second prize; Ella Ruth Walton, C.C.H.S., reading, third prize.

There were several others who did well in this contest. Proceeds from all these programs will be for the benefit of the crippled children of Chilton County.

Miss Simpson spent the week end with her family in Anniston. Mrs. Coplin spent the week end in Albertville and Guntersville.

Mr. Hicks announces that there will be a summer school provided there is a sufficient demand for it. Today only five students have asked for a summer school.

The Physics Class made a trip to Mitchell Dam Power Plant Monday, with Mrs. Coplin in charge. This was very educational.

Seven students have enrolled since Tuesday, April 20. They are: R.C. Smith of Thomas Jr. High, Jewell Moore, Elizabeth Culp, Lennell Eubanks, Margaret Lowery and Sybil Littlejohn, all of Baker school; Vernonia Head, of Cloverdale school, Montgomery.

The Home Economics building has been greatly improved during the year by screening the windows and doors, polishing the floor, and much new equipment selected. Mr. Williams' shop boys have been most helpful in making these improvements.

Track Meet Today

The track meet will be held Thursday, April 29. There is a large group of boys entered in the different events and most everyone seems interested in the activities. We wish all of you to attend. If any boy shows outstanding ability they will be entered in the state meet at Birmingham, May 7 and 8. If anyone is entered they need to do their best to win for Chilton County.

Baseball Game

C.C.H.S. defeated Maplesville in Maplesville, Wednesday, April 21, by the score of 6 to 1. Williamson pitched a beautiful game for Clanton, fanning eight men and allowing only three hits, running his winning streak to three straight. Williamson was in trouble only once during the whole game. This was in the sixth inning when with three men on and nobody out. He struck out two and one grounded, scoring only one run. Clanton drew first blood when in the sixth Easterling walked and stole second and third, and scored on Reynold's infield out.

Clanton's big inning was the "Lucky Seventh" when Lawrence singled to open the inning. Locklear then walked. Aldridge grounded out. Williamson singled and Lawrence scored. Marcus sacrificed and Locklear scored. Marcus was safe, Johnson doubled and Williamson and Marcus scored; Johnson stole third, Easterling sacrificed and Johnson scored. Reynold's and Armstrong were out to end the inning. Williamson was the leading hitter for Clanton, getting two for three.

Clanton plays Holtville there, April 28, and here April 30.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles Lanier of Verbena were guests Sunday afternoon of Mrs. Willie Jones.

become quite noticeable that new people are driving their trucks up too close to the front of the Baptist Church building there, so we have been also noted that this is causing some damage to the building in front of the church. The idea is that if you park your truck in front of the church, at the curb and not on the sidewalk. We have been requested to tell the people about this matter.

Our hat to the person responsible for the campaign to aid our children in this county to begin with health as good as possible. Boys and girls in the rural areas are getting the breaks in the county. We certainly hope the "Summer" campaign receives the support of parents of children of the age of six years, as planned in the program which includes free health and more just what Chilton Health Unit means to the people in the future.

Our earliest congratulations this year to the officers and enrollees of our own Citizens Conservation Club having the most outstanding in this district composed of the camps. We must, at this time, pay attention to the excellent work of the young men who are in this training camp and the officers there. We have the privilege of being with some young men, seeing them at the camp and just relaxing. But we have heard a bit when we think of the attitude of the people of Clanton toward these fine young men who come from excellent homes and are receiving the highest training for future citizens.

Our friends who conceived the idea might do well to mention the machine making machine at the State. We mentioned it in this column and Mr. Lancaster had several of the same day this column and we enjoyed some of the ice cream. Now, Mr. Lancaster decided it pays to advertise making special Sunday ice cream fresh, daily made ice cream.

The recipient of an artist's picture of himself—a real surprise in charcoal we and we cannot doubt the like of it. We are indebted to our friend, Mr. McIntire for this rare portrait. A fine artist, although he spends his time carrying out his duties in the lighting department of the Alabama Power Company office. We are proud of this portrait of McIntire. Now it reposes in our own suitable frame. It is much to have any camera has been able to do.

You, Mr. Martin, acknowledge with many thanks, the most interesting book, "The Power And The State," from our Thomas W. Martin president of the Alabama Power Company and one of our county's benefactors. This book by Charles Penrose, has given us new ideas and has thrown new light on the problems we have learned in Alabama regarding industry. Mr. Penrose: "You will be surprised when, in closing, I tell you Alabama within itself holds full of possibilities which offer challenge to that lies in you."

This year's team should be stronger than last year, although the loss of Cobb at first will be sorely felt. All infield positions except first are well filled with Clint Jones at third, Teck Galloway at short and Thomas (Shorty) Marcus at second. The first base position will be filled as soon as possible.

Hon. Grady Reynolds, of the firm of Reynolds & Reynolds, counsellors for the Court, stated he knew of no new developments in the matter Tuesday.

Mr. Arledge stated to the News that he appreciated the people of the county being patient with his department in the road work and especially the repairing of bridges and water boxes, following the recent heavy rains. He stated that they would get around to these repairs as quickly as possible and as soon as the Commissioners Court could get the lumber necessary for the repairing of the bridges and water boxes.

"Because He Saw A Thousand Coolies Lift a Weight"

Two great men are being honored in Alabama this year, which marks the Silver Anniversary of Alabama Power Company. The names of these two pioneers in hydro-electric development in our state are James Mitchell and Capt. Wm. P. Lay. James Mitchell would have helped develop hydro-electric resources in Japan 25 years ago, but he saw a thousand coolies used like so many beasts of burden and apparently satisfied. He decided the Japanese were not ready for hydro-electric development.

Capt. Wm. P. Lay was piloting a steamboat through the treacherous and churning waters of the Coosa river and dreaming of the time when its thousands of horsepower would be harnessed to life the burdens of Alabama people.

This man of technical knowledge, James Mitchell, and this man of vision and dreams Capt. Lay, joined forces and capital was interested. Lock 12, now appropriately named "Lay Dam" was the first result. Then followed "Mitchell Dam," Lock 19, Martin Dam, etc.

Alabama may well honor these two men and the company they helped start. They pioneered well in this state. Long after these men have left the realm of mortality their memories will be brightened by the turn of a button in a million and more homes of Alabama, the burdens will be lightened on the shoulders of Alabama motherhood by the use of electric appliances, and the whizzing wheels of industry will be more numerous in our state because of the visions they saw. The gigantic pile of concrete, harnessing the power of Alabama rivers will stand for many decades to come as glistening monuments to them, and no man could have a better.

Their writer extends sincere good wishes to Alabama Power Company upon its twenty-fifth, its "Silver Anniversary." This quarter of a century has been fruitful. May the years which are to follow see no lessening of the power, nor dimming of the lights which emanate from your plants on Alabama's rivers.—Chambers Co. News.

A Good Rule

The golden rule would operate effectively in business. We suggest that some men give it a trial. For example, if you desire to make a decent living out of your own business don't try to chisel the other fellow out of all profit when you need the goods or service he has to offer.

The fellow who thinks it is smart to buy below cost and sell at a big profit has caused a lot of us some pretty serious headaches in recent years.

Where To Trade

"I'd rather trade with an up-to-date, enterprising merchant than a conservative back-number any time," a friend of ours observed the other day.

"You usually get a better deal—you get up-to-date merchandise—you get more careful service," he elaborated. We have given the matter some thought and have concluded that he is right and that there is a reason for this observation.

The enterprising merchant can offer better values, because he keeps his capital at work. He can offer up-to-date merchandise because he does not carry stock over from season to season. He is out for business and therefore must give better service to get it.

Incidentally he finds that advertising fits directly into his scheme of operations. It is the one medium by which he can tell the public about what he has to offer.

There are a lot of young musicians in this country who should go far, a writer observes. Maybe that applies to some of them that live next door.

Dame Rumor Is Not Reliable

Maybe you have heard other variations of this story but all of them serve to illustrate a point.

It seems that the report spread that Jones had made $50,000 in a stock market transaction. Investigation proved that this was correct except for a few minor details.

It wasn't Jones who won it, it was Smith. It wasn't in the stockmarket but was a real estate deal. It wasn't $50,000 but $15,000. He didn't win it he lost it.

And this is the way with rumor. The boys in the army had a term for it. Other rough and ready citizens have equally effective terms that are not exactly suitable for publication. But rumors, stories, and fantastic products of mere imagination circulate through Clanton from time to time. If we were to make an effort to consider all these seriously we would spend most of our time following trails that lead nowhere.

And when we consider this prevalence of rumor, some of it started with malice aforethought and some of it quite innocent in purpose, we feel that there is a positive need for a newspaper in any community.

It is said that in times of national stress the press is a stabilizing influence. Without some source of authentic information the people would be whipped into dangerous panic by the flood of rumors.

Newspapers, to be sure, do make mistakes. But contrast the few errors which do appear in print with the gross libel, the malicious slander, and the abundance of misinformation, even harmless, that can be charged to dame rumor.

They Make Me Laugh

People are strange creatures.

Our captains of industry and finance enjoy telling how they rose from the ranks, of their early experience on the farm or in the factory. They like to make us believe that they are democratic in interest and feeling.

But now comes the British coronation. On May 12 the new ruling family will be officially elevated with pomp and pageantry that harks back to days that we learn about only in the musty records of history.

And some of these American citizens who talk loudly about democracy are all aflutter over coronation plans. Big men with expensive waist development and spindly shanks are employing British tailors to make knee length breeches suited to the occasion. American women are trying to find what is appropriate to wear and are leaning how to curtsy before royalty.

And they will all go to England for the great event, and they will mingle with crowds of British citizens with real titles, or they will sit in bleachers for hours to watch a parade reminiscent of middle ages. Then they will return home with the feeling that they are made of different material from the common American folks with whom they must associate.

We don't condemn anyone for enjoying a trip to England. We don't denounce one for a desire to witness an interesting show. We don't scoff at the English people for their love of pomp and pageantry. After all they know better than to give the King any real power.

But we can't forgive American business men for hiring English tailors to squeeze them into knee length breeches so that they can resemble English aristocrats of long ago.

We'd like to witness the show just to greet these sycophants with a hearty, American guffaw.

Hobbies

Times of stress and strain, of nerve tension, of worry and uncertainty. Times of rapid development, so fast and so startling in fact that even those of flexible minds find it difficult to adapt themselves.

For relief we turn to hobbies. Hence today people are collecting stamps, antique furniture, Indian relics, old iron work, in fact almost everything that can be imagined. We heard not long ago of a man who has spent several years collecting old hinges, and strange as it may seem his hobby has proved to be highly interesting.

We wouldn't advise a friend of ours to go out deliberately to develop a hobby. A good hobby that absorbs your attention and interest doesn't come that way. It comes naturally, easily and without deliberate planning. It is just the pursuit of a special interest. Then it becomes so all absorbing that the cares of life do not intrude upon every waking hour.

But if you haven't a hobby and know of some special interest that might easily and naturally develop, better give it a chance. It may protect your nervous system against the shocks and strains of a time of unrest.

MORAL ECHOES

D. W. Haslow

An Alabama sportsman bought a new gun and went to the fields to try it out. He fired it at game for a few shots and discovered that it scattered the shot so badly that he could have no success. That night he was reading his paper from New York and ran across an advertisement that said that a Company in the far away city would tell any one how to stop a gun from scattering its shot for twenty-five cents. The man sent the money and in a few days he had this reply: "Dear Sir: To keep a gun from scattering put in but one shot." That reply sounded like the Company was in a "racket" business, but they held up a fine philosophy of life. It is the men who do one thing in this world who come to the front. When any individual scatters out to be "A Jack-At-All Trades," he is not likely to succeed man must concentrate all the faculties of his mind upon one unwavering aim. "That day we sailed westward which was our course" were the simple words of Columbus as he wrote his diary day by day. Do not scatter, but have one aim and stick.

The Scientists estimate that there is enough energy in less than fifty acres of sunshine to run all the machinery in the world if it could be concentrated. But the sun might blaze out upon the world forever and set nothing on fire. However, if a burning glass is used to gather up the rays of the sun from over a fifty acre field the heat would be enough to melt any solid granite into a vapor in a moments time. In my observation of men I see them every day who have faculties and powers to make life a great success, but they are failures and all because they lack concentration. They spread out over too much territory and scatter their talents over too many pursuits. A thimble-full of powder behind a ball in a rifle will do more execution than a ear load of powder unconfined. It is fashionable to ridicule the man of one idea, but the men who have changed the front of the world have been men of a single aim. Learn how to concentrate and you will gather the power that will make life a success.

Some people think that if they keep "everlastingly at it" that they will succeed, but this is not so. Working without a plan is like going to sea without a compass. A ship in mid-ocean that has broken its rudder may "keep everlastingly at it" churning the water and running in all directions, but it will find no port for its cargo. It takes the rudder linked up with intelligence and moving machinery, to direct that ship to the port where its cargo is in demand. It takes all of these forces to drive the ship steadily through sunshine and storm, tempest and fog and make the landing where success stands with beckoning hands. So a man who would succeed must not drift about rudderless on the ocean of life. It is not enough to "keep everlastingly at it." In addition to our work, we must have an aim in life, we must sail a straight course, we must stick to our line of travel, we must use our will power to carry us on against gales and waves and winds. It is not so much from whence did you come, but what are you carrying and where are you going, that counts.

I went trout fishing with two men. One of them talked the most of the time about his bad luck. He confessed without shame that he never caught any fish. He thought that all fish had a grudge at him and that they would turn up their noses at the bait that he offered to them. He even doubted his ability to land a fish should one take his hook. So poor was his luck that he never studied the habits of fish, he never thought out what fish liked and he never made his hook attractive. The other man never had a doubt about his ability to catch fish. He said that if there were any fish in that stream that he was going to take some of them. He had studied the habits of fish and knew where they were to be found. He knew all about what the fish liked and he baited his hook to please the fish. Well, this fellow pulled the fish in while the other man sat in the boat and moaned over his poor luck. It matters not what we may undertake in life if we carry failure along with us and lament all the time about our doubts to succeed, we will not succeed. The fellow who thinks that he can succeed and then prepares himself for success, he is the one who will come to the end of the way on top of the world.

While I was talking to the pilot of a sea plane he made this remark "It takes twice the power to lift a ship out of the water as it takes to carry it on its flight." The earth and the water combine to hold it down, but once it lifts itself out of the waves into the air, then she glides away with ease and speed. This I know; it takes twice the power to break with the world in a spiritual sense, as it does to live above the world after worldly ties are broken. It is the "take off" in the Christian life that is the testing time. Many a ship of the soul breaks to pieces in the offtake of the new birth. This is what we call "Infant Mortality" in the Kingdom of God. Too many souls die in the infancy of the spiritual life. It takes a lot of power to lift a soul above the world, but after that it takes careful living and not much trouble about speed.

FACTS FROM THE RECORD

Written by

Southern Democrat, Oneonta
County Almshouses

The Regular Session of the 1935 Legislature passed a law which allowed the remaining twenty-two are in the State Department of Public Welfare to close almshouses. Forty-five counties have closed their almshouses and ten remaining twenty-two are in the process of closing—that is, have closed almshouses and are gradually placing the present inmates in homes outside the almshouses.

A survey of the almshouses made by the Department of Public Welfare in 1935, revealed that 63 per cent of the almshouse population was above 65 years of age before was qualified for old age pensions if and when removed from the almshouse. It also revealed that the average per capita cost of keeping these almshouses was estimated to be more than $20.00 per month. The counties could be diverting the expenditures for the almshouses to the departments of public welfare for the aged group $3.00 per month per State dollar and two dollars. This enabled the departments to provide for the care of them funds to provide for the removal from the almshouses of an additional number of needy aged people. For example, one county which closed its almshouse and made an appropriation of $500.00 monthly to the County Department of State and Federal funds received Public Welfare was enabled from making the local fund to take care of 40 inmates of the almshouse and their own homes and in the care of relatives and friends, and in addition to grant financial assistance to 10 aged persons and 105 dependent children.

IN MEMORY OF MRS. W. M. WRIGHT

On Saturday, April 24 the death angel visited the home of Mrs. W. M. Wright and carried her soul on to heaven. Everybody who knew her loved her for that sweet kind and sympathetic manner, but God thought it best to take from us our dear wife and mother.

Forever will linger with us the memory of that sweet smile she always gave to whomever she met. Grief is great and hard to bear by her loved ones, though God had need of her in that beautiful home up there. Life is short and sweet but we must bear the sorrows and the sting of death after life's fitful fever. She was very beautiful in her peaceful sleep.

Our last wish is that we may all meet this wonderful mother in heaven. —A niece who loved and adored her, Gladys Turner.

Former inmates of almshouses have been placed in their own homes or in the homes of relatives. The other thirty-five per cent have been placed in the homes of friends. The former inmates of closed almshouses are constantly visited by representatives of the county departments of public welfare.

Hayes-Maples Wedding Is Solemnized

An event of charm and beauty in its simplicity was the marriage of Miss Susie Mae Hayes of Maplesville and John Maples, Jr. of Birmingham. The wedding took place at the home of the bride's parents in Maplesville, Saturday afternoon, April 24, at 4:00 o'clock in the presence of close relatives of the couple.

The house was beautifully decorated with spring flowers, ferns and snailax. The ring ceremony was performed before an improvised altar of banked flowers, interspersed with tall white candelabra.

Bernice Yeager lighted the candles. Mrs. E. C. Washburn sang "I Love You" accompanied by Mrs. Floyd Dorsey. The bride and groom entered alone to the strains of "Lohengrin's Wedding March." The marriage vows were read by the Rev. C. H. Hildreth.

During the ceremony Mrs. Dorsey softly played "Trauerlied." The bride was lovely in a gown of powder blue chiffon, with matching straw hat, and other accessories of white. Her flowers were a lovely shoulder corsage of pink rosebuds and sweet peas.

Immediately following the ceremony Mr. and Mrs. Maples left for a wedding trip to the Gulf Coast and New Orleans. On their return they will be at home at 317-11th St. Southwest, Birmingham, Ala.

Both young people are members of old Alabama families. Mrs. Maples is the only daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. J. Hayes of Maplesville. She was educated at Alabama College, University of Alabama and Livingston. Until recently she was a member of the faculty at Maplesville School.

Mr. Maples attended Alabama Polytechnic Institute, Auburn, where he was a member of Theta Chi Social Fraternity, and is now connected with Birmingham Trust and Savings Co.

Out of town guests at the wedding included:

MISS RUTH EDGAR IS BRIDE OF ROOSEVELT DANSBY

A late afternoon ceremony marked the marriage of Miss Ruth Edgar, only daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. H. Edgar, of Butler, and Roosevelt Reggie Dansby, of Mobile and Shreveport, La., which took place Saturday, April 24, at 5:30 o'clock at the home of the bride's parents in Butler, Ala.

The marriage vows were read by the Rev. Jack Edgar, of Birmingham-Southern and pastor of East Thomas Methodist Church, youngest brother of the bride, assisted by the bride's father, J. H. Edgar, in the presence of the immediate family and a few intimate friends.

The bride was lovely in a navy suit with gray accessories. Her corsage was of talisman roses, orchids and lilies of the valley.

Mrs. Dansby is a graduate of the State Normal School at Livingston and has attended A. P. I. at Auburn, and the University of Alabama, where she was much admired. For the past three years she has taught in the city school at Butler.

Mr. Dansby is the oldest son of Mr. and Mrs. Ovid Dansby, of Mobile. He is a graduate of the University of Alabama and a member of the Delta

Future Farmers Plan Sidedressing Demonstration

Varro, an old Roman philosopher who lived 116-28 B.C., observed that "nature gave the principle of germination to seed, the rest of agriculture was left for the experience of man to discover." So down through the ages man has been studying and experimenting to improve agriculture.

For centuries the farmer had to work and make his own observations. Progress came slowly but surely with such methods. However, in more recent years with the aid of the U. S. Department of Agriculture and our State Agricultural Experiment Stations more rapid strides have been made. As facts about crops and fertilizers are discovered their practical applications are demonstrated in the field.

Here in Alabama progress in determining the amount and kind of fertilizer to use and methods of application has been rapid and the results highly beneficial to farmers everywhere.

Not so many years ago farmers were using low analysis mixed goods such as 2-10-2 or a mixture of acid phosphate, cottonseed meal and kainit. Then these were discarded as mixed goods containing 3-4 per cent nitrogen and more potash or home mixtures of phosphate, nitrate of soda and muriate of potash came into general use with better field results due to the increased nitrogen content and the practice of sidedressing. The next step was to further increase the nitrogen content of cotton fertilizers. Methods of application changed; some farmers applying fertilizers under cotton while others continued the safe and profitable practice of applying one-half to three fourths of the nitrogen as a sidedressing after chopping or before first squares are set.

According to vocational teachers A. R. Fouts, Clanton and H. H. Denson, Jemison, the Future Farmer Chapters at the above schools will employ their cotton demonstrations the best features of both plans by applying 3-8-5 or 4-8-4 before planting and sidedressing with Chilean Nitrate after chopping.

In case corn is the demonstration crop the Future Farmers will use only a sidedressing of Nitrate of Soda when the corn is 40-50 days old.

Every farmer is urged to watch the progress of these demonstrations and to encourage these young farmers in their efforts.

Farm Efficiency Is Improving Rapidly

Farm efficiency has improved to the extent that each farm worker can now produce enough for himself and 11 others, reports the Bureau of Agricultural Economics to P. O. Davis, director of the Alabama Extension Service.

"The improvement is very noticeable when we consider that in 1820 each farm worker produced for himself and four others, while in 1930 each farm worker produced enough for himself and 11 others," comments Mr. Davis.

The use of more mechanical equipment in farming is enabling each farm worker to handle more land and to produce more farm products, points out the Bureau in discussing unemployment in agriculture.

"One example of this progress is very striking. Wheat farmers of one Kansas county report that it now requires only about a fourth as much man labor to produce and harvest an acre of wheat as was needed at the close of the war.

"And farmers in the South look to the future of the cotton picker. Southern farmers know that if a cotton picking machine is perfected it will enable them to cut down their labor costs in cotton fields. Yet southern laborers know that a cotton picking machine may cause for them serious problems of readjustment," state bureau officials.

WOODS FIRES DESTROY JOBS

In the year of 1934, eight out of every one-hundred persons working in the State of Alabama were employed in some kind of wood industry, says C. E. Haigler, Senior Foreman of Laborers of the Soil Conservation Service Camp S.C.S.A.7 at Clanton, Ala. In the past more people were employed. In the future there will be more, if we care for the trees, cut them wisely, and protect them from fire, insects,

Three Reasons Given For Mowing Pastures

Mowing weeds in pastures helps to control weeds, builds up a better turf, and aids in controlling erosion, report agronomists of the Alabama Extension Service and Soil Conservation Service.

When weeds are mowed and brush and other tall weeds are cut down, the spread of more beneficial grasses, clover, and lespedza is encouraged. In this way a turf is developed which resists soil and water losses.

Maynards Chapel

The weather conditions are favorable for farming now. It is that not a few farmers will be planting to do.

There was not a very large turnout to church services Sunday, account of the rain.

Members of the Senior B.Y.P.U. enjoyed a social hour at the home of Mrs. W. A. Horton Saturday night, though several didn't come because of rainy weather.

Mr. and Mrs. Curtis Hurns and his father, Mr. Hardy Hurns, and Mr. Martin Pruitt preached at the Benson Springs Sunday morning preaching hour.

Miss Rubye Vaughn of Birmingham visited Mr. and Mrs. Maynards last week end.

Prof. J. C. That's What I Think

We know differently. We know that thousands of human beings have died at early ages of disease which could have been prevented by the use of modern medicine. We know that the ravages of disease which throughout the land. Those who died away before they had reached the allotted spans of life were deeply regretted by a society of friends and relatives who never gave a thought to the possibility that they themselves were responsible indirectly for that centuries ago those who lived to because nature endowed them a constitution strong enough to ward off the ravages of disease which throughout the land. Those who died away before they had reached the allotted spans of life were deeply regretted by a society of friends and relatives who never gave a thought to the possibility that they themselves were responsible indirectly for that can our small communities afford to overlook that vital point? Let us take an example in point: If school authorities learn that a child in school has members of its family suffering from a contagious disease, those authorities take steps to immunize the child or remove it from possibility of contagion—all well within the provisions of the law. But often teachers know that certain families are living under a moral code in conflict with that accepted by society, and yet can do nothing to immunize or remove the child of that family who attends the school. Our social evils—crime, lawlessness, prostitution—are just as contagious as our physical evils of smallpox, diphtheria and typhoid. What can we expect of children exposed to such social evils?

The answer is the establishment of social health departments functioning with the same authority as our present physical health departments. Then you can hope to clean out some of our social evils as we have cleaned out physical plagues.

At least, that's what I think.

WITH YOUR HOME Demonstration Agent CONDUCTED BY MISS META GRACE

ISABELLA CLUB MEETS Diseases And Diet Discussed

The Isabella Home Demonstration Club held its regular April meeting at the home of Mrs. A. L. Smith, with eighteen members present, four of these being new ones.

After a few songs the program on "Citizenship" was given with Mrs. Wells in charge, assisted by Miss Bernice Jones. Miss Callan was appointed by the president to have charge of the program in May.

Miss Grace talked on different common diseases and ways of effecting a cure through diet. Also she went a little further into the subject of "Underweights and Overweights."

The leaders, Mrs. Oden and Mrs. White, assisted by Miss Grace, prepared several dishes suitable for a sick person to have. These consisted of cracker gruel, eggnog, lemonade and peach whip. Miss Grace suggested others which could also be served.

The hostess served cookies and punch, after which the meeting was dismissed with the club pledge. The next meeting will be at the home of Mrs. Gracie Foshee, Friday May 21st, at two o'clock.

If you want to come, don't stay at home on account of the children. Bring them along. We are always having "little demonstrators" playing out in the yard now that we are having pretty Spring weather.

Why can't we have thirty members next time instead of eighteen? We can, if you'll be there.

"I DON'T HAVE A STOVE IN MY KITCHEN -- I HAVE AN ELECTRIC RANGE!"

HOW proudly you can say that! Because you are telling that your kitchen is modern, that you keep it clean easier, that food tastes better, that you are enjoying the advantages that Alabama's CHEAP ELECTRICITY makes possible.

Electric Ranges, Water Heaters and Electricity Today Cost Only HALF AS MUCH As They Did A Few Years Ago

And the range you get today is prettier, cooks faster, operates more economically, because the cost of electricity for household use is almost half what it was a few years ago. That's possible because so many people have been electrifying their kitchens and homes with electric refrigerators, ranges, water heaters, radios, better lighting, and dozens of other electrical appliances.

Place One Of These Electric Ranges In Your Kitchen And Begin Enjoying Life More!

MARION—STANDARD—GRAYBAR—CRAWFORD—L&H
M-W—UNIVERSAL—GENERAL ELECTRIC—MONARCH
KENMORE—ESTATE—KELVINATOR—ENTERPRISE
WESTINGHOUSE—NORGE—HOTPOINT

You'll find them on display at general, hardware, furniture, department, and electrical stores in almost every town in Alabama. Prices are moderate—terms will fit any pocketbook.

With an electric water heater in your home, of the type approved by the Alabama Public Service Commission, ALL of the electricity you use in excess of 200 kilowatt hours a month, under the A-B rate, comes to you at the lowest rate—10 a kilowatt hour—whether you use the electricity for heating water, cooking, refrigeration, lighting, operating your radio, or other electrical appliances.

INSPECTOR IS SELECTED FOR NEW DOG LAW

Inoculation Against Rabies
Now Compulsory; Parrish Named Inspector

Owners of dogs in Chilton County will not have the opportunity of inoculating the animals through the services of a licensed veterinarian, according to an announcement made this week by the Chilton County Board of Health.

The Board recently appointed Dr.
W. L. Parrish well known veterinarian of the county as Rabies Inspector of this county. This appointment which was made official last week, is in conformity with a recent Act of the Legislature calling for this action and which gives the Inspector the same authority as an officer of the law.

This new law regarding dogs, pet foxes, etc., is now in effect and Dr.
Parrish is calling on every dog owner of the county to cooperate in this movement to protect the lives of the people of the county.

During the past several years, Dr.
Parrish has, on his own accord, set days for the inoculation of the animals in the county, and this will be done, he stated, again this year. Each dog inoculated against rabies will wear a tag so denoting. A record of all dogs so treated shall be kept by the Inspector. The new law also carries a penalty of dog owners who fail to comply with its provisions, and provide for the confinement of animals bitten by other animals believed rabid.

CHILTON COUNTY SCHOOL STUDENTS ARE SHOWING OUTSTANDING RECORDS

More Discoveries Are Made On Records Of Perfect Attendance Of Schools

Following the publication last week of the excellent record made in school attendance of a youth at Cooper school the News has received letters calling attention to other outstanding records made by pupils in local schools.
Miss Adell Scott, of Mapleville, Ala., Rt. 2, is another pupil who has a good attendance record, at the Isa-bella School. She has attended five school terms in succession without missing a day, the information dis-closes. Two of the terms were nine months and three of seven months duration. Miss Scott is to be congratulated on this fine record.

The attention of the News comes to Walter Junior Kendrick, a pupil of the Vermont Junior High School, who also has attended school for the past five years without missing a day. Nothing kept this young man away from his studies. Rain, sleet, or sunny days found Walter at his desk in school. He is the son of Mr. and Mrs. R.W.
Kendrick, of Plantersville, Ala., Rt. 2, which is some distance from the Vermont school. Walter is ten years of age. The News congratulates him.

Grand Jury Investigation Looms As Ropes Tighten

Sheriff Hardy Makes Public Statement In Regard To Apparent 'Wide Open' Selling Of Beer, Whiskey In This County

The ropes are beginning to tighten around those who are buying and selling beer and whiskey in Chilton County, according to a statement made this week by Sheriff J. R. Hardy, even the beer and whiskey carries the State tax stamp which makes it possible to possess the beverages legally in this county.

grocery and market owner of Clanton was victim of what is believed to have been an attempt at robbery last Saturday night at his home here.

Mr. Broadhead had just arrived at his home late Saturday night after closing his store, and on stepping to his porch was struck several times over the head by his assailant, said to have been a white man. Mr.
Broadhead's wife, upon hearing him yell, rushed out as the assailant ran.
No money was taken. Mr. Broadhead has been confined to his home due to the blows he received.

Man Is Nabbed Here, Stolen Automobile

Highway Patrolmen Earl Henley and Wallace Waites brought to the county jail here Sunday night a man giving his name as Joe B. Ingram of Birmingham. He was picked up on the highway on a charge of driving while intoxicated.

Ingram confessed Tuesday morning to having stolen the car which he was driving. Patrolmen Waites and Henley checked up on the license number of the car and found it belonged to a Destein Constantine, of Birmingham. Ingram will be held here to face charges of driving while intoxicated before being returned to Birmingham on the stolen car charge.

HIGHWAY PATROLMEN REPORT MANY ARRESTS RECENTLY

The report of Highway Patrolmen Waites and Henley from April 25th to May 9th, includes the following arrests: 5 for driving while intoxicated;
2 for violating flag and flare law; 6 for no drivers license; 4 for violating carrier act; 4 for speeding; 1 for no clearance lights; 4 for public drunkenness; 4 for reckless driving; 1 for no tag and 2 for no trip ticket.

Youth Disappears From Home Rect'ly

R. V. Smith, sixteen year old son of Mr. and Mrs. Julius Smith, of Maples-ville, Ala., Rt. 2, disappeared from his home Tuesday afternoon of last week, according to his father.

He was last seen in company with another youth. Mr. Smith gave the description of his son as follows:
weight approximately 120 pounds, red hair, red complexion with a few freckles, height five feet, 2 inches.
Was wearing overalls.

Dr. J.E. Edgar, well known dentist here, is confined to bed with mumps, and will not be in his office for the next few days.

There seems to be no doubt that Sheriff Hardy intends to carry out the letter of the law in this county. Since the referendum recently regarding the legal sale and distribution of alcoholic beverages in Alabama, and since Chilton County voted "No" on the question, beer and whiskey has been sold openly here, according to Sheriff Hardy.

"There seems to be only one route for us to follow in enforcing this law," Sheriff Hardy stated yesterday. "The new law makes it possible for residents of dry counties to possess any quantity of beer and whiskey provided it bears the State tax stamp. And whiskey provided it bears the State tax stamp. And this is the kind we find is being sold in this county. We can request a special session of the Grand Jury, call those whom we believe have made purchases locally and place them under oath to tell the truth, and that is what we intend to do," he continued.

Sheriffs in all dry counties in the state are faced with the same problem. Liquor and beer is being purchased legally in "wet" counties, brought into "dry" counties and resold at a large profit to the dealers. Although the possession of these beverages is not unlawful in dry counties, the sale is prohibited.
Sheriff Hardy went to the Government's office this week to take the matter up in order to determine just what could be done to halt this liquor traffic in this county under the new law.
He found that a Grand Jury could put a halt to it and has reached the conclusion that will be done here.

In this instance he has issued a county-wide warning to those who buy beer from local places, even by the bottle, that they will be summoned before the Grand Jury. He stated there was very little trouble in securing the names of those buyers. Upon indictment by the grand jury, the dealers in the county who are involved in any one sale will also be indicted, according to law.

"We are not asleep on the job in this matter," Sheriff Hardy stated. "Our court register is conclusive proof that liquor and beer is giving much trouble here and we intend to carry out the wishes of the majority of the voters who stated they did not want it sold in this county."

Pressure Groups

We are not speaking in a spirit of partisanship when we condemn the employment of pressure groups and the distribution of patronage to influence legislation. This trend in government which today threatens the future stability of our institutions has been developing steadily over a long period of years. The fault lies with the people more than with our elected representatives.

Members of congress and of our legislature hear from their constituents only when some group is seeking the enactment of legislation which will benefit a particular class or locality, often at the expense of the general welfare. They are not given much opportunity to think for themselves. A group of manufacturers, of merchants, of farmers, or of workers is always telling what they want. Party leaders find that it pays to play ball with these special groups, because they are organized and can do a lot of damage when election time rolls around if their request is not given consideration.

Take this matter of economy in public affairs. Everyone seems to agree now that the time has come when less money must be spent. Mounting debts and mounting taxes can eventually lead only to trouble.

But what do members of congress and of the state legislature hear from their constituents on the subject? Only petitions and letters in which one locality asks for a new federal building, another seeks a reclamation project, another wants a harbor improvement. Then specific organizations have a voice in affairs. A group of social workers wants a special bureau established to serve some special cause. After that groups of manufacturers or merchants or workers asks for some other agency to serve the needs of their members.

When any specific pressure groups sells its proposition to the party leaders, congressmen are whipped into line with the threat that patronage will be removed. In other words the good jobs to be passed around will not be given to the choice of the senator or congressman unless he votes right on party issues.

Is it strange that this condition produces weird legislation which often conflicts with other definite policies of the government? The wonder is that we get along as well as we do.

The time has come, in the opinion of the writer, when a lobby should be organized in behalf of the nation as a whole. Pressure groups seeking special advantages at the expense of the general public will not lead us to an age of sound and consistent government.

Consider Our Visitors

Traffic and parking problems are not confined only to big cities, a view down our business section on a busy afternoon or evening will readily disclose.

Farmers from the surrounding territory and visitors from more distant points frequently find it almost impossible to park their cars at a convenient point in the business section. In view of that fact we suggest a little concerted action on the part of our business people to provide as much parking area for outside visitors as possible.

Much space is taken by the cars owned by merchants and their employees. Usually these cars remain parked throughout the entire business day and deprive many visitors of an opportunity to locate parking space readily. All of this costs some good business we have no doubt.

If employees and business people will endeavor to park their cars off the main street and at the rear of their establishments they will be extending a more gracious welcome to outside visitors, and the benefits should be substantial.

A Good Investment

One of the biggest bills America pays is its annual crime bill. Figures often quoted vary, but no one questions the fact that the cost of police service, maintenance of penal institutions, and loss to the general public through crime is well above any other item of public expense, not even excluding the cost of national defense.

In view of this fact more concerted effort should be made to prevent crime rather than merely to apprehend and punish offenders. Communities which consider the cost and waste in crime will readily endorse a reasonable public expenditure to stop the evil at its source.

Happily there is something which can be done. Recreational work among boys and girls is one of the greatest known agencies of crime prevention. "As the twig is bent so is the tree inclined," is an old adage that applies effectively to all considerations of this problem.

Old timers may argue that there was no need of recreational programs years ago. But it must be recalled that those were days when the boys and girls had plenty of work to do. Changing conditions have altered all this. During vacation periods young folks find themselves with an enormous amount of idle time on their hands. And idle time may lead to habits and practices that are not conducive to good citizenship.

In all of our considerations of community recreational activities, therefore, we must consider two factors. First, crime causes our biggest national expenditure. Second, there is not enough work today for boys and girls when school is not in session to keep them out of trouble.

Moderate expenditures, therefore, to provide wholesome recreation may be considered in the classification of good investments.

Goin' Fishin'

When you're worried about your business affairs, when life seems excessively complicated and difficult, when the front page of your favorite paper is livid with accounts of horror, distress and conflict, when the nerve wracking confusion of modern life begins to get you, then just go fishing.

Nothing within our knowledge is better medicine for excess nervous tension. When you are out in a boat casting over the lily beds that always produce a good catch, your nervous system is at rest, your entire being is in perfect harmony.

It isn't even necessary to catch fish to derive real benefit from a fishing trip. Though all true fishermen, of course, gets a real thrill every time a big fellow strikes and tests the skill of the fisherman.

But it is not merely getting fish that makes fishing the most popular of all forms of outdoor recreation. Fishing is the release from the cares and strain of an age of sound and fury. For this reason it is well that our state and national governments give due attention to all effort to perpetuate the sport.

Every fisherman can tell of how the fishing, has declined in recent years. A thousand causes are advanced, Outlaw fishing, ineffective stocking, stream and lake pollution, changing water conditions due to drought and faulty land policies.

These problems are receiving attention today. They should receive even more attention in the years ahead. An efficient conservation policy in our own state and in every other state that offers opportunity for this sport of sports is all in the direction of good public policy.

A Noxious Influence

Every fisherman can tell of how the fish-heart of community progress. Envy of the success attained by others and envy of the recognition paid to those who do things destroys the spirit of co-operation which is an essential factor in community progress.

Envy, we may all well admit, is a part of the subconscious mentality of almost everyone. But in many individuals its development far exceeds all excusable bounds.

We have all seen envy at work crippling community progress. Citizens refuse to throw the weight of their influence and energy back of a worthy enterprise because the chairman of the committee may receive greater recognition than they can view with pleasure. We have seen it make citizens pull separately rather than co-operatively. And the result has always been failure in specific enterprises and stagnation of community spirit.

Let's try to keep this evil little viper out of our minds. Let's worry less about who gets the credit and think more about how we can work together for the upbuilding of Clanton.

MORAL ECHOES.

D. W. Haslow

A drove of sheep were grazing on the hillside near a country home. Late in the afternoon a summer cloud gathered and a strip of lightning flashed down the side of a pine near where the sheep were located and gave them a great fright. In a stampede the sheep rushed up the hill to the house and ran into the old shattered fold where they were accustomed to spend the night. The fence was in bad repair, the bars were down and the roof of the old outhouse had fallen in. The sheep sought protection in their fold but there was no protection there. As I looked upon those animals in fright I thought how like a human being they were. Men and women meet with testing times and they become frightened. They have nothing to which they can flee in the time of danger other than a pleasure life. They have made this world and its shattered forms of life, their refuge and strength. When trouble comes they have nothing to which they can go and find protection and life. Their fold is shattered and broken. Why not make Jesus Christ your Shepherd and then when danger comes, then when we are afraid we can hear Him saying, "It is I, be not afraid."

The children of Danish parents gather about the table in silence and sit with their parents and partake of the meal. No rudeness is permissible nor no pigishness is ever known. When the meal is over each child arises from his place and marches up to father and then to mother and then shakes hands with them saying "I thank you for the food served me at this time." Tell me how many children in America do you know who are this respectful to their parents at meals? Tell me how many people in this Christian country of ours who ever express to God a word of gratitude for the food that they have to eat? As people who are more and more drifting into a pigish attitude. We are learning to consume and never even say "I thank you" to our parents or to our God.

A doctor found a little dog by the roadside with a broken leg. He lifted the suffering animal into his car and carried it to his office and there bound up the limb. He tenderly placed the dog in a pen and cared for it until it was well. When it could walk he opened the door and let the dog out into the open. He told about the place for a few hours and then disappeared. The doctor was very much let down because the little dog had left him without an expression of gratitude. Early the next morning the doctor was awakened by a scramble at his door. He arose to see what was causing the disturbance and found his little dog with another dog with an injured leg. During the night the little dog that had been treated by the doctor had gone out into the town and found an injured pal and had brought him to the one who had cured him. There the little fellow sat with his eyes gleaming as he looked at his deliverer and at his injured pal. He was saying, "Master, you healed me; will you not heal my pal?" That was gratitude in the finest expression.

As I sat on the porch of my summer camp I saw three kinds of boats out on the bay, a row boat, a sail boat and a steam boat. The man pulling at the oars said, "The travel on this boat is dependent on me." The man holding the rope of the said boat said, "Travel is all a matter of circumstances. The wind must blow right." The man in the furnace room of the steam boat said, "Wind and wave, it matters not which, we move on." In a like manner I see three kinds of Christians moving within the church. The fellow who works and pulls like a slave saying, "It is all dependent on me. If I stop the boat stops. The fellow who is a creature of circumstances. He must be constantly patted on the back, or he will stop dead still. Then we have the fellow who has will power, who has an inner power that will carry him on in face of criticism, in spite of wind and waves. May I not ask: Which are you on the sea of life—a rowboat, a sailboat or a steam liner?"

Over in Japan they have a way of dwarfing trees. When the little plant comes up they dig down and they tie up the tap root. They stunt the feeders so as to keep vigorous life out of the plant. Under this dwarfing process they grow small shrubs rather than giant trees. Under this treatment the plants remain stunted for many, many years. Many a human life is like unto the stunted trees of Japan. The soul, the very tap root of life, is tied up with earthly things. The spirit is not allowed to feed only on the surface of life. There is no release given to the inner being and the real life is dwarfed beyond measure. We have seen many a human being, like the dwarfed trees of Japan, many years old and yet very small. To grow a mighty spirit is very much like growing a giant tree of the forest, the soul must embed itself deep into God and soul feeders must run far out into the finer cultural things of living.

Mrs. Rose Wach of Chicago charged in her divorce suit that when her husband came home 10 years ago with a bottle of liquor, and she took it away from him, he hadn't spoken to her since.

Don't let your cotton RUST

ADD EXTRA POTASH in your top-dresser

"Healthy cotton and varying degrees of cotton rust."

THERE was more cotton rust in the South last year than ever before reported. Have you checked on the fertilizer you applied at planting and made sure that it contained enough potash to carry your cotton through to a full crop and the profits you expect this year? It is not too late to add the extra potash recommended by experiment stations to control rust and reduce wilt. Use a nitrogen-potash top-dresser which will apply 50-100 pounds of muriate of potash per acre and make the application immediately after chopping. Consult your county agent or experiment station on your soil requirements. See your fertilizer manufacturer or dealer about nitrogen-potash top-dressers. Write us for further information.

ANNUAL CROSS-ROADS WRITERS CONTEST IS UNDERWAY AGAIN

Country Home Magazine Offers Series Of Prizes For Best Rural Reporters

NEW YORK, May 3.—The third annual contest to find the champion country newspaper correspondent of the United States was announced today by Chester McMillen, editor of The Country Home Magazine, a national publication. Prizes totalling $400 will be awarded by the magazine, and the winner also gets a trip to New York and Washington, as in previous years.

Announcing this year's contest, McMillen stated the belief that throughout the country are hundreds of men and women who do a fine job of writing and reporting in their newspapers, as good a job in their field as do many famous reporters of the big city dailies. Our annual Cross-Roads Correspondents Contest is an opportunity for these able rural correspondents to gain wider recognition.

In the past two years were Mary Elizabeth Mahoney of Mo., who writes for the For-Mo. Republican, and Mrs. Susan Eisele of Blue Earth, Minn., who writes a weekly column for the Minn. Sentinel. Both have appeared in The Country Home Magazine, and Mrs. Eisele now also writes a weekly column for one of the metropolitan papers in her home town.

Entries for the 1936-37 awards should be sent to the magazine by June 15. The contest is open to country correspondents in cities of 10,000 population or less. Entries may be submitted by editors, the writers themselves, or readers, and the awards will be given by a committee of eminent writers.

Rules of the Contest

The rules of the contest follow: Country correspondents of rural newspapers are eligible for awards. A newspaper is defined as one published in a town of 10,000 people or less. A country correspondent is defined as a rural contributor whose main occupation is not writing. Material submitted must be in the form of clippings, with the name and address of the correspondent, and the address of the newspaper

Chilton Farmers Follow Balanced Program

Chilton County farmers are following a better balanced farming program than ever before. They are receiving more cash from their cotton, producing more livestock, growing more food and feed crops and improving their soils annually over what they were four years ago, when the national farm program was launched.

This is revealed by J.W. Fant, county agent, in reporting that the cotton and cotton seed produced in the county in 1936 were worth $1,200,000 compared with only $439,500 in 1932, the year before the program was started. During this period the price of lint cotton advanced from about 5 cents to over 12 cents per pound and cotton seed advanced from $9 to about $35 per ton. Cotton and cotton seed are now worth about $75 per bale compared with less than $30 in 1932.

Not only has the farm program caused cotton to more than double in value but farmers of Chilton have received $790,356.43 in benefit payments since the program was launched. To date this year they have received $146,925.75 in government payments due for cooperating in 1936 and are still to receive about $5,000.00. Plans are now being made for them to obtain another large sum for cooperating this year.

That farmers of the county are improving their farming practices is illustrated by the fact that last year they grew 16009 bales of cotton on 32000 acres, an average of 239 pounds per acre, compared with 19368 bales on 44177 acres, an average of 209 pounds per acre in 1930. This increase in production has been brought about by better fertilizers, seeds, improved soils and cultural methods.

Statistics from the State Department of Agriculture show that Chilton County farmers use 7200 tons of fertilizer in 1936. Of this tonnage 1296 were 6-8-4, the fertilizer which the Alabama Experiment Station has found best for cotton. The station has found that farmers produce about $25 more cotton per ton by using 6-8-4 than they do when using 3-8-5. The tonnage of 3-8-5 used by farmers of the county dropped from about 339 tons three years ago to only 2383 tons last year.

Not only has the planting of soil-conserving and building crops helped increase the cotton yields but it has added considerably to the corn yields in the county. The Alabama Experiment Station reports that winter legumes increase corn yields by about Derris and cube compounds control several insect pests that attack leafy vegetables. County agents throughout the state are at present advising farmers how best to control various insects.

Alabama Farm News

With no marked change in demand for farm products expected in the near future, the general level of farm prices is not likely to change greatly during the next few months, reports the Bureau of Agricultural Economics.

Under the 1937 Agricultural Conservation Program, every farmer who participates in the program is protected to the full extent of his participation. The benefit payments are not affected by the weather, boll weevils, or fluctuations in prices.

—O—O—O—

VIRGINIA ANN WEST DIED

Burial for little Virginia Ann West was held Saturday, May 1 at Stanton cemetery at 1:30 o'clock.

Virginia Ann spent a short time here on earth with her loved ones, and parents, Mr. and Mrs. R.L. West and brothers and sisters of Safford, Ala., which are as follows:

Louise Neoma, Audrey Olene, Raymond Lee, Roy Porter, Carolyn Harper, Alma Jean.

She was the granddaughter of Mr. and Mrs. P.K. West of Clanton and Mrs. Roy Fitts of Safford, Ala.

20 bushels per acre and statistics show that Chilton County farmers planted 17500 pounds of vetch and Austrian Winter pea seed on 7077 acres of land in 1936. Under favorable weather conditions this should increase the corn yields of the county by over 141,540 bushels this year.

Planting of legumes has been on the climb in the county for several years. In 1933 farmers planted 82,000 pounds of vetch; in 1935 this increased to 90,000 pounds; and in 1936 170,500 pounds. In addition to the vetch and Austrian Winter peas 1,000 pounds of crimson clover, cooperating farmers planted 23,000 acres of soil-conserving crops.

Terracing is playing a most important part in improving soils and enhancing the value of farm lands in the county. During the past year 850 acres of land were terraced. Figured at $5 per acre this land was increased in value by $4,250. Some of the land was terraced with cooperative power outfits and the other was terraced by individual farmers with their regular farming tools.

Special honor to Katherine Mims as she was also perfect last year. More to her honor in that she was the only one in Refuge school who was perfect in attendance last year.

There were several others who had perfect attendance last year. Mary Ann Farris, 12, and Evelyn Connell, 6, were absent only one day, and Horace Minor, 10, Myrtis Johnson, 10, and Odell Minor, 13, were absent only two days. There were eight others who were present at least 130 of the 135 days. They were: Howard Mims, 12, Myrtle Easterline, 13, Milford Mims, 11, Moses Connell, 7, Eugene Mims, 7, Willard Mims, 9, Myrtice Littlejohn, 9, and Era Mae Mims, 9. There were others who were enrolled for less than 135 days who had splendid records.

The annual percentage of attendance for the year was 88.5. The total enrollment of the school was 86 this term. For the past three years Refuge has been a two-teacher school.

Since many of you reading this article think of Refuge School as you knew it a few years ago, you might be interested to note from the picture below how much a good paint job could help the appearance of even a building as old as Refuge.

Brief Farm News

C. D. Patterson, president, Alabama Ginners Association, Decatur, has appointed a committee composed of J. J. Myers, Shorter, Hugh Span, Donald, and John B. Deramus, Clanton, to work with J. C. Lowery, agronomist of the Alabama Extension Service, in making plans for improving cotton in Alabama this fall.

Alabama county agents are offering to furnish farmers with blue prints free for making strippers to use in harvesting their crimson clover seed.

May 31 to June 5 is National Cotton Week, a seventh annual event, sponsored by the Cotton Textile Institute. Manufacturers, railroads, radio, publications and 30,000 stores are cooperating in the event.

The quality of the 1936 cotton crop showed a considerable improvement over the previous year. The proportion of staple shorter than 1 inch and less than 1 inch and long-staple cotton will be closed. The Association urges all producers who have not sent their subscriptions in to do so immediately. The turpentine industry of Southern industry has succeeded in crowding out this fine, old, time-tested product from many of its legitimate fields of consumption. One instance is the paint and varnish manufacturing field which once used hundreds of thousands of barrels of turpentine, but in recent years has been weaned to cheaper substitutes, with the result of sharply lowered demand and resultant lower prices for pure gum spirits of turpentine. Every master painter knows that there is nothing like pure gum spirits of turpentine as a vehicle for paint, but even in this field inferior substitutes are replacing pure gum turpentine because of the failure of the industry in past years to acquaint the public with the real merits of the genuine article. Pure gum spirits of turpentine, once a household remedy in every home in the land, has been forced to give way to trade-marked medicinal preparations whose merits have been ballyhooed with millions of dollars of advertising.

Thoroughly aroused to the dangers of further invasion of the markets for pure gum spirits of turpentine by substitute products, The American Turpentine Farmers Association, acting for the good of the whole industry, has employed the services of a nationally known advertising company which is now engaged in analysing markets and formulating plans for a national advertising campaign, designed to reawaken the public consciousness to the advantages of pure gum spirits of turpentine and to impress upon industrial users the superiority of this natural pine tree product over all competitive laboratory substitutes. Aggressive steps will be taken immediately to re-establish the industry on a firm foundation; and the broad scope of the campaign promises to develop markets of vast proportions for the consumption of pure gum spirits of turpentine. The sales promotion campaign is being designed to develop new fields for the use of turpentine and to regain leadership in markets which were developed through the centuries. Attractive market packages will be developed for home consumption. It is confidently predicted that, as a result of the national advertising campaign, demand for pure gum spirits of turpentine will be vastly increased and the prices of this product stabilized at profitable levels to the producer.

The L&N is your HOME SWEET HOME on rails

Valdosta, Ga., April 20—Confronted with the fact that the trend of turpentine prices has been steadily downward for the past ten years, leaders in the industry are planning a nationwide advertising campaign to regain the markets once held by gum spirits of turpentine in the industrial and home consumption field.

Funds for the national advertising campaign, which is being sponsored by the American Turpentine Farmers Association, are being contributed by producers, factories, dealers, and brokers. Well over half the minimum sum of $200,000.00 has already been subscribed and it is predicted that total subscriptions will run well in excess of the required minimum by May 1, 1937.

Books will be closed. The Association urges all producers who have not sent their subscriptions in to do so immediately.

What is the "Low-price Field"?

YOU hear a lot about "the low-price field" these days. A good many cars claim to be in it. So whenever the low-price field is mentioned, remember:

Until Ford came, no average American could own a car.

Today all Ford prices are still low — with the prices of the 60-horsepower Ford V-8 $30 to $60 lower than those of any other car of comparable size.

But with Ford, "low price" doesn't merely mean low figures on the price tag. It means much more than that. It means low prices and low costs all the car's long life. Low prices for service — for parts — and, above all, for operation.

Both Ford V-8 engine sizes are economical to operate. The 85 horsepower gives greater gasoline mileage this year than ever, and the "60" delivers the highest mileage in Ford history.

Private owners, cab companies, fleet operators all report that the "60" averages from 22 to 27 miles per gallon of gasoline.

Check and see how much Ford saves you.

Ford Founded the Low-price Field
Ford Keeps That Field Low-priced Today

Ford V-8 Prices Begin at $529

AT DEARBORN FACTORY. TRANSPORTATION CHARGES, STATE AND FEDERAL TAXES EXTRA

This price is for the 60-hp. Coupe equipped with front and rear bumpers, spare tire, horn, windshield wiper, sun visor, glove compartment and ash tray.

CHESTNUT GROVE

We are glad to state that the health of this community is very good at present.

Brother Dewey Robinson of Thorsby delivered a good sermon here Sunday morning and Sunday night. The text was "A Christian Home and a Christian Mother." We called him to our church this year as a pastor and we believe he is going to become a leader of the people.

Brother Robinson will preach here every Saturday night before the fourth Sunday at 7:45 o'clock, and on Saturday night before the second Sunday at 7:45, and on the second Sunday at 11:00 A.M., and at night. Everybody is invited to come and listen to our young leader.

Miss Frances Lucas and Odeas Horn spent Saturday night with Miss Margaret Nabors.

Miss Clariss and Wilma Lucas and Mrs. Gladys Wood spent the week end with their parents, Mr. and Mrs. T. L. Lucas.

Rev. Dewey Robinson and Jack Cleckler were the supper guests of Mr. G. G. Nabors Sunday.

Mr. Bill Hackson and family of Maline spent Sunday with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. J. B. Denson.

Rev. Dewey Robinson was the dinner guest of Mr. Willie Arledge Sunday.

Miss Clariss and Wilma Lucas and Mrs. Gladys Wood spent a white Saturday night with Margaret Nabors.

MINERAL SPRINGS

Health of our community is very good at present. Our Sunday School is doing very well but there is plenty of room for improvement.

Our church has appointed a committee to work out a plan to fit the church. The committee plan worked out as follows:

Our friend, Mr. J. P. Beane, donated us four or five acres of land and we are going to plant cotton and other produce for the fit of the church. We have set Monday, May 17, to fix the land plant it. We ask all who are interested to come and bring your plow and us with the good work.

A Chewy New Nut Brown Custard

With Brazil Nuts As a Basic Ingredient, Four Variations of Flavor Are Possible.

Brazil Nut Spongettes

2 tablespoons butter	3 tablespoons lemon juice
2-3 cup sugar	3 tablespoons flour
Salt	3-4 cup chopped nuts
2 eggs	1-2 teaspoon grated lemon rind
1-2 teaspoon	1 cup milk

Melt butter, stir in sugar and salt and the well beaten yolks. Add lemon juice and mix with the nuts. Add milk and fold in the stiff beaten egg whites. Pour the six greased custard cups and bake in a pan of hot water at a moderate oven, 375 degrees F., forty-five minutes.

ettes: One and a half cups chocolate may be heated one and a quarter cups of milk to replace the lemon juice and rind.

THOSE who tire of preparing the same popular desserts in the same old way will welcome this custard innovation. Chopped Brazil nuts are included in the batter. So are stiffly beaten egg whites which rise during baking to form a delicious chewy brown topping.

Four tested and distinct variations in flavor are achieved by simple substitution of ingredients as indicated in the recipes.

Brazil Nut Spongettes may be served in the custard cups in which they are baked or turned out on serving dishes. Custard made as directed is firm enough to hold its mold.

Three Simple Variations

Butterscotch Brazil Nut Spongettes: One cup of brown sugar and two extra tablespoons of milk may replace the granulated sugar, lemon juice and rind.

Sherry Brazil Nut Spongettes: Two tablespoons of sherry may replace the lemon juice and rind.

Chocolate Brazil Nut Spongettes:

New Miracles Of The Photoelectric Cell

By James D. Purdy

AN electric eye standing guard against smugglers is one of the unusual features of the new Free Port on Staten Island, New York. A 1000-watt light casts its beam across 2700 feet of water to a photoelectric cell at the opposite side of the entrance to the port. A launch or other vessel crossing the beam and shutting off the light from the cell, sets off a siren and causes the ringing of a bell to warn the custom guards on duty.

The photoelectric cell has been called into play to prevent lightning from interrupting the broadcasting of radio programs. If lightning strikes the antenna tower the flash is caught by a photoelectric cell trained on a discharge gap at the base of the tower. The cell sets up an impulse which through a complicated mechanism shuts off the transmitter's power for a split second, preventing the station's power from being drained off into the earth, as would otherwise occur. The interruption is so brief that it is imperceptible to the radio audience.

A new type metal-working lathe has been developed abroad, which is controlled by a photoelectric cell and is said to be capable of producing objects as shown by a drawing, without the intervention of the human hand. After the machine has been adjusted, the cell scans the drawing and automatically produces the object in the indicated shape and dimensions.

The stars and a photoelectric cell are utilized to regulate with absolute accuracy a new electronic clock installed for the Pope in Castle Gondolfo. When a certain star comes into the focus of the cell placed at the base of an astronomical telescope, the light of the star causes the cell to set up an impulse which corrects any slight inaccuracy in the clock's timing.

State of Alabama, Complainant, vs. One 1936 Model Desoto Coach, Respondent.

It is therefore ordered and decreed that notice of the filing of said Bill of Complaint be given for three consecutive weeks in the Chilton County News, a newspaper published in the Town of Clanton, Alabama, and that all persons claiming or asserting any right, title or interest in said automobile be required to appear and assert such claim by the 7th day of June, 1937, and that failing to do so, the said right, title or interest will be forever barred.

Given under my hand, this 30th day of April, 1937.

Feed Cottonseed Meal

It's Good Sense to save Cents

Supplement Home Grown Grains with a rich protein feed—Cottonseed Meal. State Senator H. A. Taylor, Greensboro, states: "I have been feeding cattle and horses all my life, but I have come to the conclusion that we feed our cattle wrong. We should feed a small amount of straight protein (Cottonseed Meal) or substitute protein and let the cattle hustle for the roughage. Take 500 pounds of hay, corn stalks, broom sage or any kind of filler. Grind it, add 100 pounds of cottonseed meal and ten pounds of salt. Mix well and sprinkle with a little sweetened water. Watch the old cows and horses come. This is very cheap." See your oil mill for information on feeding all livestock.

SIDE DRESS COTTON TO PREVENT RUST AND RAISE YIELDS

A large percentage of the cotton fertilizer used in the state this year is of grades analyzing four percent potash, and where only average amounts were used at planting it will be necessary to make an additional application in the form of a side dresser if most profitable yields are to be obtained.

Experiments indicate that at least 24 pounds of actual potash per acre is needed by cotton. This means that 600 pounds per acre of a mixture containing four percent potash must be used to get the desired amount of this element. Since many farmers do not use this fertilizer at planting, the practice of applying a side dresser containing both nitrogen and potash is growing rapidly.

Experiments at the Georgia Station gave an increase of 221 pounds per acre from the use of a nitrogen-potash side dresser over the fertilizers in common use by farmers, and the South Carolina Station recommends a side application of potash where a sufficient amount was not used at planting.

The amount of potash needed in the side dresser will depend upon the potash content of the fertilizer used at planting and also whether cotton on the area planted has shown a tendency to rust in past years. Usually the equivalent of 50 to 100 pounds of muriate per acre is sufficient to guard against disease and provide sufficient plant food for proper development of the cotton plants.

OTHER FORMS OF ASSISTANCE EXPLAINED BY DEPARTMENT

Set Rules Must Be Followed In Order To Get Aid

The Department of Public Welfare is frequently asked to explain eligibility requirements for old age assistance and other forms of public assistance so that it seems pertinent at this time to summarize the duties and responsibilities of the department in the matter of granting financial assistance to those in need.

There are now four classifications under which cash assistance may be granted by the DPW, viz: Old Age Assistance; Aid to Widows with Dependent Children; Aid to the Needy Blind and Aid to the Physically and Mentally Handicapped. The Department assumes no responsibility for granting direct relief to able-bodied persons, though we are always glad to assist in securing employment for the unemployed where such employment is available.

Major requirements for old age assistance are: The applicant must provide documentary evidence that he is over sixty-five years of age. He must be a citizen of Chilton County, physically and unable to work for his own support, and have no legally responsible relatives able to provide for him.

Aid to dependent children is granted to widows with dependent children under 16 years of age. No assistance can be granted under this classification to a child who has reached his sixteenth birthday. A mother whose husband has deserted is considered a widow, after Juvenile Court has made reasonable efforts to locate and secure support from the deserting father. If the father is serving a long term prison sentence, is undergoing treatment in an insane hospital or similar institution, or is completely incapacitated for work, physically or mentally, the mother may receive aid for the children, provided the relatives are financially unable to assist her.

To be eligible for Aid to the Needy Blind, the applicant must secure a statement from an approved optometrist that he is blind. In addition to this he must sign an agreement in the presence of witnesses that he will not publicly solicit alms, if granted assistance and he must produce satisfactory evidence that his relatives are unable to care for him.

To be eligible for Aid to Physically and Mentally Handicapped, the applicant must have a signed statement from his family physician that he is totally incapacitated for work, because of a physical or mental handicap. He must provide evidence that he has no resources and no relatives able to care for him and must sign an agreement that he will not publicly solicit alms, if granted aid.

It will be noted that in every instance the Department is required to have satisfactory evidence that relatives are unable to care for their own loved ones before public assistance can be granted. It is not the aim of the County, State or Federal Government to relieve relatives of responsibilities which they are themselves able to meet, but rather to provide for those whose relatives are unable to meet their responsibilities in caring for their dependents.

Another interesting feature of the program is that the blind and the physically handicapped are not to beg on the streets or permit others to beg for them. An offense of this kind immediately disqualifies the client for further aid until such practices are stopped. With the cooperation of the public, street begging among the blind and otherwise physically handicapped can and should be eliminated entirely. Funds for the program as outlined above are provided as follows: For Old Age Assistance and for Aid to the Needy Blind, the County pays one-fourth of the amount for which the client is certified; the State pays one-fourth and the Federal Government pays one-half. For Aid to Dependent Children the County pays one-third, the State pays one-third and the Federal Government pays one-third. There are no Federal funds available except for these three classifications, but the State matches the county on a fifty-fifty basis in proportion to the physically and mentally handicapped.

The following procedure is followed in determining the amount for the applicant, in any classification, to be certified: First, an estimate of applicant's actual needs for food, clothing, medical care, etc., is made; his resources are estimated, and if his resources are found inadequate to meet his needs, the difference between his estimated needs and his estimated income is the amount for which he is certified. For example: Mr. Jones lives with his son who farms. He is able to provide shelter and food for his father. Other children in the family can provide clothing, but Mr. Jones has diabetes and requires a special medical care which is expensive and which the family cannot pay. An estimate of the cost of food and medical care is made and a statement is certified for the amount needed.

The Department is not always able to meet the needs of the applicant fully because of inadequate funds in the budget system enables us to distribute the funds which are available on a basis of real need. We are sometimes asked why we do not "treat everybody alike" and issue the amount to each person. We feel such a system would be grossly unfair because the needs and the available resources of individuals vary. We have been unable as yet to help any two people who are exactly alike, therefore, we make no attempt to "treat everybody alike." It is our policy to apply the same standards of ability to all so that funds made available through the DPW may raise standards of living and protect our dependents without forcing them to the humiliating experience of begging to the "poorhouse" or begging. This has so often happened in the past.

That's What I Think

Saul M. Goldstein

One night, on Highway 31, between Birmingham and Alabaster, an automobile turned a curve came several feet down one of the 'few' stretches one finds along the highway, and then plunged through a ditch into a ditch. Fortunately, a casualty among the four passengers was a skinned knee.

One evening, word reached you that a great grapevine rumor that a truck bearing a pole on the highway south of Clanton, caught on fire, and resulted in the death of all three.

Today's newspapers, the story which at the time of the accident made to educate the public on the enormous toll of traffic accidents, bids fair to outstrip 1936 as the year for traffic fatalities—37,000 people were killed in accidents in the United States.

ing the public is a good idea. The article "And Suddenly" published in the Reader's Digest years ago was enough to make most confirmed speed maniacs his automobile down to a possible speed. But it passed and millions never read it. The highway are read by fools who believe in signs; and speed made for men who consider challenge to outwit the law away with it. That is not power to the mounting total fatalities is not education, not signs, not highway signs—but highways. Straighter, wider roads do more to decrease the accidents on Highway 31 than speed laws, signs and articles that you can devise. Automobiles are built for speed. Advertising preaches it, encourages it. What prospect of an automobile has not enticing words: "She'll do eighty without pushing?" To blame the individual who is on the wheel of one of these cars, and presses the accelerator to the floorboard in a frantic attempt to get there (anywhere or nowhere) quicker. But the individual can have his speed safely if he drives on a four-lane highway that is straight with curves rare if any.

The Birmingham-Montgomery highway is the key highway of Alabama. It connects the two largest cities of the state, and provides an important link in north-south transportation for the United States. It is one of the oldest, if not the oldest paved highway in the state. It is a pioneer in paving. Why shouldn't it be a pioneer in modern highway building—straight and wide? Tomorrow it may be you or one of your loved ones who feels the crushing onrush of a speeding automobile coming around a curve without sufficient notice to turn out of your path. You as a voter and a taxpayer should demand proper highways.

And if you must have laws to make the highways safer, make your driver's license mean something. Make it necessary for an individual to pass a strict driving test to secure a license; and once having obtained it, to keep free from traffic law violations if he wants to retain it. Take licenses away from drunken drivers, from irresponsible drivers of cars too old to be safe on the highway. That will pay dividends in human lives.

At least, that's what I think.

T. C. I. ESTABLISH PUBLIC RELATIONS DEPARTMENT

To cooperate with the Farm Products Department in finding markets for and standardizing farm products and to help keep the public informed in the affairs of industry, the Tennessee Coal, Iron and Railroad Company has established a public relations department with E. D. LeMay as director.

"It will be the policy of the new department to cooperate with the farm products Department in all matters pertaining to agriculture," says Dr. M. F. Jackson, manager, farm products department. "The functions of this department also will be to keep the public, through the press, thoroughly informed of all matters of public interest in which this company plays a part," comments J. L. Perry, president.

"TO THE VICTORS—" "TO THE victors belong the spoils!"

Although Andrew Jackson was the first exponent of that political creed, he was not the first man to express it in so many words. The man who did was William L. Marcy of New York, leader of one of the factions in the Democratic party when Polk was President.

The division in the Democratic ranks was over the distribution of federal patronage and it centered, as it has so often since, in New York state. The faction, led by Marcy, was called the "Hunkers" who were supported by Tammany and who were given that name because they were always inclined to hunger, or "hunker," for office.

The other faction, led by Silas Wright, was composed of disappointed Van Burenites—disappointed because Van Buren, whom Jackson had made his successor, had been refused a second term by the party which took Polk, a "dark horse," instead. This faction was called the "Barnburners," because, like the Dutch farmer in New York state who burned his barn to get rid of the rats in it, they declared they were ready to "burn their barns to get rid of the rats," the upstart "Hunkers."

As a matter of fact they did just that in the campaign of 1848. Opposed to slavery, they joined forces with the Liberty party, took the name of the Free Soil party and nominated Martin Van Buren and Charles Francis Adams of Massachusetts. This split in the Democratic party resulted in a victory for Gen. Zachary Taylor, the Whig candidate, over Van Buren and over Lewis Cass, the regular Democratic nominee.

Along with "Hunker" and "Barnburner" is another interesting name once applied to the Democrats, growing out of the rivalry of these two factions. In the campaign of 1840 the Whigs called their opponents the "Locofocos" because at a meeting of the New York Democrats the two factions were trying to get control of the meeting. One gang turned off the gas lights and in the darkness, the other gang, which had come prepared for just such a stunt, took from their pockets the new, friction matches, called "locofocos," struck them and by thus lighting the room were able to continue the session and dominate it.

FARMERS MAY LIQUIDATE 12-CENT COTTON LOANS

Farmers who have cotton loans outstanding with the Commodity Credit Corporation are urged by Cully A. Cobb, director, Southern Division, AAA, to liquidate their loans by taking advantage of the cotton marketing program being conducted by the Commodity Credit Corporation and the Reconstruction Finance Corporation.

Farmers who have borrowed 12 cents a pound on their cotton from the Commodity Credit Corporation now have an opportunity to liquidate their loans and at the same time to realize a small sum on the transaction, he points out. Farmers can take advantage of this offer through April.

VISITED OLD FRIENDS IN SHELBY COUNTY SUNDAY

Mr. and Mrs. C. Reese Mullins went up in Shelby County Sunday and spent the day with old acquaintances and friends, Mr. and Mrs. Honey Jordan, near Shelby Iron Works.

The occasion was the 50th wedding anniversary of Mr. and Mrs. Jordan, and Mr. Mullins reports that there were some fifty guests present from over the state to help this aged couple enjoy the festivities of the happy occasion. Many gifts were presented the hosts, including golden emblems, etc.

Mr. and Mrs. Jordan are former residents of Chilton County, having lived in Beat 1, near Lay Dam. Mrs. Jordan is the oldest sister of the late Rolfe Bates, and daughter of Uncle Mart and Aunt Sarah Bates, in their day respected citizens of Beat 1. Mrs. Jordan was an old school mate of Mr. C. Reese Mullins, and he has enjoyed the lasting friendship of the family through many years.

According to Mr. Mullins, Mr. and Mrs. Jordan live in one of the best homes in Shelby County. Located on a large mound about the center of a 600-acre farm, surrounded by flowering oaks, the Jordans have a most striking picture of a hundred windows with grazing cattle, dozens of bee gums out under the trees, all make it an ideal place to live. Mr. Mullins says that he feels like he has actually visited the land of milk and honey.

Of all occasions similar to this it has been the pleasure of Mr. and Mrs. Mullins to attend, they say this wedding anniversary of the Jordans should be classed as No. 1. It certainly proved to be most congenial and happy to all those in attendance.

Another railroad innovation which is proving a boon to tall men is the building of two extra long sleeping sections into some of the new streamlined trains operated in the West. These special berths are six inches longer than those of the standard Pullman, and are called "long johns."

THAT'S where several thousand electric ranges and water heaters are going these delightful spring months, because electric ranges and water heaters in style, size and price are now available to fit the requirements of any home—of any pocketbook.

Electric Ranges Enjoy Deserved Popularity

They are clean—they are economical to operate (electricity is cheap in Alabama)—food tastes better when cooked electrically—they are modern—they are time-savers—they are safe—they beautify any kitchen—they cook so conveniently! Just the flick of a switch turns on clean, even heat—as clean and dependable as electric light.

So is it any wonder that 6,110 Alabama Women Say "I Want an Electric Range"—

Or that nearly 4,000 say they want electric water heaters, too, because like the electric range, they are clean, convenient, safe and economical to operate? Electric ranges and water heaters which give you service you will be pleased with are made by many reputable manufacturers, among whom are:

HOTPOINT—UNIVERSAL—GENERAL ELECTRIC KENMORE—M. W. ENTERPRISE—MONARCH
MARION—L & H—STANDARD—KELVINATOR
GRAYBAR—CRAWFORD—ESTATE—HOFFMAN
WESTINGHOUSE—NORGE—PEMCO—SEPCO
REX—HERCULES—SATURN

Plan to have an electric range and water heater installed in your home soon!

With an electric water heater in your home, of the type approved by the Alabama Public Service Commission, ALL of the electricity you use in excess of 200 kilowatt hours a month, under the A-B rate, comes to you at the lowest rate—10 a kilowatt hour—whether you use the electricity for heating water, cooking, refrigeration, lighting, operating your radio, or other electrical appliances.

WITH YOUR HOME Demonstration Agent

CONDUCTED BY MISS META GRACE

What kind of a builder are you?—Do you build houses, mow lawns, or help make people and build homes?

I once heard of a monument builder. A young man wanted to study law. So he went to his father and asked if he might read in his office. His father said: "My son, why do you wish to study law?" The young man replied: "I could make money this way. It would give me power and prestige, and access to the political arena." His father shook his grey head and said: "A lawyer's chief business is building monuments. 'Come with me and see some of my monuments.'"

First they came to two elegant business buildings. "See those buildings," "Two men were in partnership and couldn't agree. Each came to me and wanted me to institute suit against the other. I arranged a conference including both of them. Now listen to me. 'You men are both good business men, both capable but can't get along together, so dissolve partnership and each go into business for yourself. There was no law suit and each is the head of his own great store and doing well.'"

Next they met a well dressed couple accompanied by a fine looking youth. All exchanged friendly greetings and later the lawyer said: "I am proud of this monument I've built too." "Not many years ago they were bride and groom. He made good in business and it went to his head. He began to dissipate, neglect both his wife and his business and she wanted to sue for a divorce, but I said, 'You let me talk to your husband.' I brought him to my office. 'I told him how well he had done, what a fine business man he was, what a wonderful wife he had and of the beautiful prospects and advantages he had for living.' I also told him he was throwing all this away like the proverbial fool." He had good stuff in him. He saw where he was going and made up his mind he would change. There you saw them a happy father, mother and son."

A little further on they came in view of a derelict sitting on a curb. One of the shabby babies commonly seen around Court houses. Pointing to him the old lawyer said: "There my son, is a monument of which I am far from being proud, but every day as I pass I have to look upon it." "That poor fellow you see sitting there was one time a good bookkeeper, but succumbed to temptation and indulged in systematic speculation from his employer." Later he was brought to trial, I was a young lawyer then, and I did not have the vision of a monument builder. I have today. Being the prosecuting attorney, my only duty was to convict him, with all the eloquence and fire and merciless logic that I possessed. I stood before the jury and the judge and sent him to the penitentiary. Today he is a piece of flotsam and jetsam riding nilly-willy down the great sea of life, no friends, no ambitions, no hope—just merely existing. When I look at that monument, my son, I think of what I made of a bright young man, and what I might have made of him had I talked to him and pleaded his case so that he might have had a chance to be the man God meant him to be.

"Now, my son," finally said the elder, "Every one is life, no matter what his work or vocation is, a monument builder, and whether you practice law, or become a digger of ditches, or a miner in the bowels of the earth, whatever you are trying to do, remember the kind of monuments you are building."

Mt. Pleasant Club

The Mt. Pleasant Home Demonstration Club met Tuesday, May 4, at the home of Mrs. Fannie Collins. Due to the bad weather a few of our members were unable to attend but in spite of the decrease in attendance we had quite an enjoyable afternoon. The meeting was called to order and the roll was called, the minutes read by Mrs. Stanley Kennedy, the secretary. Miss Grace then taught us a new song, "Is Everybody Happy," and Mrs. Fannie Collins read the 64 Psalm.

We had much fun and laughter, many puzzled expressions and quite a bit of guessing before everybody learned the trick in the game "Nope," directed by Martha Kennedy and Mrs. Stanley Kennedy. This was followed by the song "Eats," and a demonstration on "Special Diets" by the leaders.

The meeting was adjourned by repeating the pledge.

The next meeting will be held at the home of Mrs. Emmett Reid on June 1.

Shoults Club

The Shoults Home Demonstration Club was held on Thursday, April 8 in the home of Mrs. Madison Young, with nine members and one visitor present. The club opened with a business session by Mrs. Bessie Garner. It was suggested that our club adopt three chairmen to serve fifteen minutes each with objectives of Citizenship, Scholarship and Farm Bureau. Those elected were: Mrs. Willie Hicks, Scholarship, Mrs. Ida Moore, Citizenship, and Mrs. Flossie Hicks, Farm Bureau.

A report of the leaders meeting was given by Mrs. Flossie Hicks.

The members exchanged plants and shrubbery. The next meeting will be held in the home of Mrs. Willie Hicks on "Special Diets," May 13, 1937.

Reporter, Lucie Walker.

Alpine-Platcher Club

The Platcher-Alpine Home Demonstration Club met April 27 at Pilgrim Church with six members present. We welcomed one new member and one visitor.

After singing several songs the Vice-President took charge of the meeting. The reading of the minutes and roll call was given by the secretary.

Mrs. Mollie Bell Ousley, chairman of Farm Bureau gave a very interesting talk on "What the Farm Bureau Stands For." Miss Grace also talked on the subject of Farm Bureau Organization and what we can all do to help.

"So come on, Club friends, we can do more good by learning more, and more we get together the happier we'll be."

The demonstration given by Miss Grace was on "Diseases and Special We find it important to know the kind of food that the body needs and how to prevent diseases such as T.B., Diabetes, pellagra and anemia."

We then studied special diets for the persons who have these diseases. We like our birthday plan of getting money for our treasury.

We have 31 members on roll. I hope you all will give Miss Grace a big surprise by being present at the next meeting.

The club adjourned by saying club pledge, to meet at the home of Mrs. Lester Walker on May 25.

Reporter, Mrs. Henry Ousley.

Enterprise Club

The Enterprise Home Demonstration Club met Wednesday afternoon, May 5, at the schoolhouse. We had a nice number present. Three new members were added to the club. We have twenty-three members now and wish that all would try to meet every month.

We feel that those who were not present last Wednesday missed something worthwhile. We had some very interesting discussions by Miss Grace, first, on the Farm Bureau, and second on diseases and diets for the sick. After hearing this talk we feel that we know better how to care for the sick, what to cook for them. She also gave out recipes to use for the sick.

VIRGINIA VALE

Meeting present-day demands for a complete and satisfying newspaper requires the services of many trained observers. The Chilton County News, by syndicate methods and in co-operation with more than three thousand other progressive weekly newspapers, brings you each week the observations of some of America's most famous correspondents, plus a variety of pleasing and instructive departments which contribute much to the enjoyment of the entire family.

Some of the leading contributors who provide this service for you each week are.

VIRGINIA VALE

Covering the screen and radio world is a big assignment and difficult because she numbers among her friends almost all of the stars now appearing on the screen or over the air. For two years Miss Vale is associate editor of the motion picture magazine and then was called to the desk of a New York daily to handle interviews with screen and radio luminaries. Her column "Star Dust," gives her readers a glimpse into the lives of their favorites of the screen and air through the eyes of one who knows them intimately.

KATHLEEN NORRIS

The name Kathleen Norris on a story is just about the most convincing recommendation that a story could have. Norris is the most famous of American women authors of this generation. The clarity of her observation, the character of her penmanship, and the vividness of her imagination have contributed greatly to her success in the popular fiction. A native and life long resident of San Francisco, Mrs. Norris began writing at an early age and has produced a great number of popular novels and short stories.

WILLIAM BRUCKART

One of the most capable and most experienced of Washington correspondents, who has made a special study of everything concerning government financing and treasury department activities. In a two-column weekly letter, released as the "Washington Digest," Mr. Bruckhart provides an interpretative review of the important happenings at the national capital, which gives the reader a thorough understanding of what these developments mean.

EDWARD W. PICKARD

World traveler and one of the most highly trained newspaper observers and writers of the nation. He sees world events through the eyes of an American and writes of these events from the standpoint of their effect on the people of the United States. Mr. Pickard's "News Review of Current Events the World Over" provides a complete review and interpretation of the important events of the week.

S. L. HUNTLEY

A native of Texas, reared on the range, S. L. Huntley, creator of the laughter-provoking comic strip, "Mescal Ike," still is more comfortable in a saddle than in bed. All the tang and charm, the bluff humor and slapstick play of the West which he knows so well he has managed to put into "Mescal Ike." Pa Piffle, Mescal Ike and all the rest of the boisterous characters in the new comic are very much alive and that is why it has attained its great popularity.

FLOYD GIBBONS

Everybody knows Floyd Gibbons. Everywhere Americans have listened to his famous rapid-fire radio broadcasts. They have read his war dispatches and his amazing new stories and adventure yarns that have appeared in some of the leading newspapers and magazines of the country. And now he offers a brand-new idea, a brand-new type of adventure tales—"The Adventurer's Clug"—a thrilling series of exciting incidents gleaned from the lives of everyday persons all over America.

CHARLES M. PAYNE

Little is known about the personal life of this uproarious comic artist, but the antics of his Desperate Ambrose, Pop Wimpus and Old Timber are a riot throughout the land. Here is a comic strip utterly different from any other, yet it "strikes home" so often in a pleasant way that "S. Matter Pop!" has developed into an American institution.

In addition to this assemblage of interesting and instructive material an installment of a serial story, from the pen of an outstanding author is printed each week. Over a period of one year from THREE to FOUR complete books are printed. These books, if bought at a book store, would cost from $1.50 to $2.00 for each book. . . . You get all of this, including all the local and community news, in The Chilton County News, for the price of one year's subscription which is only $1.00 per year.

IN MEMORY OF CLARENCE HAWKINS

Just two months ago today, Jesus came and took our darling Clarence away. "Oh, my," nobody knows how we have sobbed. And our hearts have throbbed. For the absence of that darling boy. Not 'one time did the poor boy think, When he left his home that morning. That his time was that soon coming. With a great big smile and a gay happy heart, off to work he started. He kissed his mother as he loved her so. And said "I'll be back soon as I make this load. Mother dear waited and she waited. It was then time for his return. Not long before dark someone came knocking at the door. What was it there? Nothing but a messenger boy to say, "Make haste, your son is in the hospital, not long to stay." The most broken hearts in many a day. Came to the family that very day. God gave him breath just for him to say, "He came to take him away to a much better place." In just two more days he would come again. To begin a new happy home that would never, never end. We all love him with the purest of hearts. With lots to mourn and grief that will never part. We love him over, over again and never to forget. Jesus loved him best of all. That's why he came and called him home. —Written by Lener Bell Camp, Birmingham, Ala.

LUTHER LITTLE

for memberships in the A. E. A. and in the National Education Association. Incidentally Chilton County this year has a 100 per cent membership in the N. E. A., becoming the first county in the South to achieve this rating.

In addition to these memberships, the fund pays for hiring a faculty member from some Alabama college to meet with the teachers once a month and instruct them in a study of curriculum revision. Heretofore, such instruction was paid for on a fee basis and the cost to each teacher was considerably higher than under the new plan.

Approximately $150 will be left in the treasury to purchase books. Matched by a similar fund by the County Board of Education, the $300 annually will build up a sizeable circulating library.

Some Advantages

"Advantages of the new plan include the opportunity to learn what is being done all over the nation in education," Mr. Little said. "New problems are constantly arising and new methods of handling old problems are being worked out. Unless the teacher keeps up with current literature, he or she will not be able to understand the changes under way in our social and economic life."

Several other Alabama counties have sent inquiries to the Chilton County Board of Education, concerning Mr. Little's plan and the Alabama Education Association has indicated deep interest in it as a possible means of solving some of the problems of teachers.

The Chilton County Teachers Association gave the plan overwhelming endorsement at its last meeting. Officers of the association, including J. A. Peterson, Jimson, president; J. E. Daniels, Maplesville, vice president, and Miss Virginia Cook, Clanton, secretary-treasurer, are supporting the plan wholeheartedly.

EIGHTEEN ARRESTS REPORTED BY SHERIFF HARDY RECENTLY

These arrests included four for driving while intoxicated; three for reckless driving; five for assault and battery; one for assault with intent to murder; one for violating prohibition law and three for public drunkenness.

MISSING FOOTPRINTS Of The Times

It is difficult to realize that ten years ago, Charles Lindbergh was possibly a surprise to the people of Chilton County. But, it's true. Time has a lot of things have during that ten years.

The only difference between Chilton County and other counties is that we have a state liquor store and do not have the tax from beer and that is being sold here. Conservation Superintendent Of Clanton's CCC Camp Points Out Facts About Soils

The planting of perennial close-growing vegetation on small critical areas in a cultivated field will often protect a large portion of the field, according to James H. Wood, Superintendent of the Soil Conservation Service project near Clanton, Alabama. A critical area may occur as a steep portion of a field between more gentle slopes above and below, or as a galled spot where, due to some special condition, erosion has become particularly severe and is progressing at a more rapid rate than on other portions of the field.

Where these areas occur as a sudden break in the general topography of the field, a band of perennial vegetation extending across this steeper portion tends to slow up run-off water and thus reduces the damage to the lower portions of the field. Perennial cover on galled spots tends to prevent these areas from spreading.

The use of legumes for such plantings increases the fertility of the soil. Types of vegetation which provide food and cover for wildlife, when used

Jimeson Student Makes Good Record In The Study Of Vocational Agriculture

Erdis Atkinson, a fourth-year student in vocational agriculture has been one of the most outstanding students that the Vocational Agriculture Department of Jimeson has turned out. Erdis has carried out an outstanding supervised project program and a long list of supplementary jobs. He has been instrumental in effecting many improved practices on his home farm such as the spraying, pruning, and setting out of new trees in their home orchard and using experiment station recommendations for corn and cotton. In addition he has purchased with his earnings a 1,000-pound mule which is conservatively valued at $150.

Since the commencement of this work in Chilton County more than 261 farm families have received some form of benefit from it, either in the form of a supervised loan, help in adjusting farm debts, or in some cases, outright grants.

Standard loans made to families without credit facilities for necessary feed, seed, livestock, farming equipment, and capital goods necessary to place their farms on a productive basis, are assisting these farm families in regaining economic security.

The 1937 program in this county so far has loaned $36,756.63 to 153 families. "We had a fine record last year," said Mr. Durbin, "and this year we expect to better this record. The present outlook for rehabilitation families is very bright and I am confident that when the harvest is made these families will have repaid their government loans and will have advanced a step or two up the rehabilitation ladder."

Supplementing the loan program the County Supervisor's office cooperate in establishing community and cooperative services for low-income families and in farm debt adjustment work being carried on by the local County committee.

Rural rehabilitation has been made part of Secretary Wallace's farm program with official transfer for the Resettlement Administration to the U. S. Department of Agriculture, January 1, 1937.

Congratulations To The Graduate

We extend our congratulations and hearty good wishes to the young people of our community who will soon be graduated from the County's high schools. We wish them every success to which their ability and training entitles them. We hope that they may all be able to take the place in society for which their schooling and ability make them best fitted.

Some of them will have the rare privilege of continuing their educations in the institutions of higher learning. The majority, however, must make plans early to earn their own way. To these we offer assurance that the work they have done in the local high school will soon bring a substantial reward.

But it may well be recalled, in this connection, that the purpose of education is not merely to enable the individual to get a good job at a substantial salary. Our educational institutions are maintained at public expense because education is essential to the operation of democratic government.

A good government can be founded only upon an intelligent and well informed citizenry. And to create such a citizenry we in America spend vast sums of public money in our educational institutions. It behooves our school graduates, therefore, to utilize this training they have received in the cause of public welfare. They should keep themselves informed upon public business in order that they may exercise their rights and duties as citizens in the most effective manner possible.

In return for the cost and effort expended in providing them with an education, they owe certain definite obligations to society as a whole. We are confident that they will so conduct themselves that this obligation to society will be satisfied.

A Great Industry

Soon we will begin to see a surprising variety of different license plates on cars which pass through Clanton or travel to and fro over the highways of our region. The tourist season is almost here, and people are touring, traveling more than ever before.

These travelers go where they are made welcome, and where the country is most attractive. They leave their money with the business houses equipped to serve them effectively and in the communities where facilities for their comfort and convenience are located.

In other words here is a great industry which can be made to produce substantial benefits for the citizens of our community. It is up to us to take advantage of the opportunity it offers.

When a tourist calls upon you for a little information don't be stingy, don't begrudge him a few moments of your time. Who knows, he may come back this way again some day if he is well treated, and he will not quickly forget your thoughtfulness and courtesy.

There are also many things we can do to make the community and surrounding country attractive to the visitor. We can cover our unsightly dump heaps with decorative fencing. Our highway department can landscape plots and squares of land along the road which cannot be used effectively for any utilitarian purpose. Citizens and farmers living along the highway can also take pains to see that weeds are cut from the ditches, rubbish is removed from the right of way, that unsightly signs do not obstruct the view of the landscape.

Whatever we do to make our region more attractive to tourists can be considered among good investments.

Anyway we fear that the world is not growing better fast enough to make a first page story.

Prices Are Advancing

Paper stock prices, like the prices of all commodities, have shown a pronounced tendency to climb to a higher level for several months. Today the printer finds that he is paying almost 30 per cent more for some of his materials than he paid a year ago.

This can eventually lead to one thing only. Higher prices for the users of printing and advertising must come in the near future. Our suggestion to the citizens of this territory is to plan now for this advance. You can still buy printing at a reasonable price because we prepared in advance by filling the shelves in our supply room.

There are many factors which are forcing the prices of paper stocks up. Higher production costs in the mills and a greatly expanded demand for wood pulp are among the more important influences.

Today munitions manufacturers are using pulp in the production of high explosives. Rayon manufacturers use vast quantities of wood pulp in making their synthetic product. The uses of paper have been materially enlarged within recent years.

In the face of this we advise our readers to prepare now. Go over your stock of printed matter. If you find that your supply is running low or will be exhausted within a few months place your order today. You will make mighty good interest on the investment.

If you are just one of the large families of subscribers of the Chilton County News, we would recommend that you pay your subscription now, and pay it well in advance.

We don't know how far these price increases will go. We have no idea of what the top figure may be. But we do know that they are going up, to remain at a higher level for many years. Thus you can make no mistake if you buy now.

The Price Of Progress

America was shocked recently by the destruction of Germany's giant air liner, the Hindenburg. This feeling of distress was due not only to the horror of the tragedy but also to bitter disappointment among those who have hopes that transportation by air may soon be safe and practical.

But before we conclude that travel by air never will be safe and never can be practical, we should consider briefly the history of transportation. Progress has always demanded a heavy price in human lives. Since man first began to move across the face of the Earth ships have gone down in storms, fire at sea was a form of horror that struck frequently, early railroad trains traveling at the speed of thirty miles an hour were called killers.

There were those who had traveled only by ox cart before who said that the locomotive never could provide safe transportation.

Transportation by air is probably following the same course as its predecessors. From disasters we learn, and who knows but the time may soon arrive when we can travel across the upper air of the Atlantic ocean with the same comfort and security that we enjoy aboard a luxury liner.

"I'd Like To Live There"

Have you ever heard a traveler return from a trip and speak well of a community where dirt and rubbish are on display everywhere, where property is run down and in need of paint, where lawns are poorly kept, where the atmosphere of shiftlessness is conveyed to the observer from every home and every street?

Would you consider his comments good publicity for the community? It should hardly be necessary to ask such a question, but we advance it here merely to emphasize the importance to the community in our local clean-up and paint-up campaigns.

We have heard travelers talk freely about tidy and well kept communities. They were not always talking about fine residential sections of big cities, either. They were not referring only to great estates and $100,000 mansions. They were talking about small villages where people in humble circumstances realize the value and pleasure there is in keeping their property in attractive condition.

Let's look Clanton over. Let's dress it up a bit for the spring season. Let's join in the paint-up and clean-up campaign with some enthusiasm.

Then travelers who pass our way will say: "Oh, yes, I've been through Clanton. It's a mighty attractive community. I wouldn't mind living there."

MORAL ECHOES

D. W. Haskew

One day I saw two men meet who had a keen difference. They had argued, fussed and fumed at each other, and now we expected them to resume where they had left off. Imagine our surprise however when one of the men reached out his hand to the other man saying, "I do not blame you one bit old pal, for feeling and talking as you do. If I were you doubtless I would feel and talk the same way, so let's meet and talk our difference over like gentlemen." The trouble that we had expected was not in the air and all because one man was willing to bury his pride. He was willing to assume his part of the guilt and blame himself for his part of the difference. A greeting like that will soften the most cantankerous old Cuss alive. We all know that when we go at men with horns, they are going to hook back at us. If we fight them with fire, we may expect to meet fire in return. The best way to settle all differences is to imagine yourself in the other fellow's place, and then do unto others as you would have them do unto you.

While attending an inter-racial meeting I sat by a window where I could look out over the hillside that was covered with homes. Some of those buildings were painted white, some red, some blue, some green, some yellow. People of various colors lived in those houses, white, yellow, red and black. It occurred to me that the paint on the houses had nothing to do with the folks of the inside. While I was thinking this thought came to me that is worth while. "The soul of a man is distinct from his body. His spirit may live in a white body, in a red body—in a black body, but that should not more affect the soul than the color of the house should affect the folks living in the house. Judging from the way folks live I have seen many a black heart residing in a white body. Then too, I have seen many a white heart residing in a black body. So elements of all races are the same. It is not the color of the skin that counts, but it is the color of the heart. The home of your soul may be white, it may be red, it may be black, but the question of all questions is—what is the color of your soul?"

When you think yourself mighty in your thinking and high in your social standing, did you know that you are not many jumps away from the insane asylum? Come to think about it, none of us have very much to boast of and brag about. Should a physician open the Thyroid gland in your neck and take out as much iodine as you could buy with a nickel from your drug store, you would become an idiot. Just a nickel worth of iodine is all that stands between you and the home of the mentally sick. Should you at any time feel inclined to crouch about your wisdom, or should you feel disposed to strut your feathers, just sit down and think soberly over that nickel's worth of iodine that keeps you out of the house of the insane.

Benjamin Franklin was a blundering youth. While he was quite young he grew to think that he was very wise and he would argue his views with zest and without compromise. One day a Quaker friend took him aside and gave him some advice that did him good ever afterward. Thinking that it might be for good advice for the most of us I am passing it on to you. This is what the Quaker friend said: "Ben, you are impossible. Your opinions have a slap in them for every one who differs with you. They have become so expensive that no one cares for them. Your friends find that they enjoy themselves better when you are not around. You know so much that no one can tell you anything. Indeed no man is going to try, for the effort would only lead to discomfort and hard work. So, you are not likely to ever know anything more than you know now, which I must say is very little." One of the finest things that I know about Benjamin Franklin is that he accepted this criticism and used it to make out of himself a finer man. Lots of your criticism should help you.

I read a fable one day about the sun and the wind. They quarrelled about which was the stronger. The wind said, "Why I have the power to blow the coat off of that old farmer out there in his field and you can not get him to take off his coat." "All right," said the sun as he went behind a cloud, "Make him take off his coat." The wind blew harder and harder until a tornado swept over the field, but the old man tucked his coat tighter about his body. Then the sun came out from behind the cloud and smiled down upon the old farmer and soon he was mopping his brow and off came his coat. Then the sun said unto the wind, "There is nothing that is stronger than gentleness and friendliness." Esop—that old Philosopher of long ago, was dealing with one of the main questions of harmonious living. Gentleness and friendliness will move people when compulsion and fury will fail.

Do you realize that the areas primarily suited for tree growth if placed, together would cover all of the United States east of the Mississippi River and most of the State of Texas in addition? Can we afford to destroy such an area?—U. S. Forest Service.

LOCAL 4H CLUB HAS OWN COTTON PROJECT

Athens, Ala.—The Okadale 4-H club in Limestone County, under the leadership of C. L. Kaufman, this year planted 3 acres to cotton as a club project, the proceeds to be used for recreational and other club activities.
The cotton is being cultivated and is to be harvested by the 4-H club members, states W. G. Hood, 4-H club agent, in reporting that the club presented a play at the local school to raise money for purchasing the planting seed. The fertilizer was bought with money through a loan at a local bank.

they enjoyed a supper of chicken and with a NITROGEN-POTASH top-dresser

"Plants receiving the additional amount of potash produced larger yields, heavier seed, heavier bolls, more lint per seed, better grade, longer staple, stronger fibers, and a higher percentage of normal fibers. Rust damage on plants receiving no additional potash lowered the yield and reduced the quality of fiber to such an extent as to lower the value of the crop $15 to $25 per acre."

—North Carolina Agricultural Experiment Station.

This statement followed two years' experimental work with a standard variety of cotton grown on soils where heavy rust damage had appeared. Extra potash was applied as a top-dressing in addition to the 400 lbs. of a complete fertilizer containing 3% potash used at planting. *If you did not apply enough potash at planting to control rust, see your fertilizer dealer or manufacturer about adding the equivalent of 80-100 lbs. of muriate of potash per acre in a nitrogen-potash top-dresser. You will be surprised how little the extra potash costs and it will help to insure your getting the greatest profit possible from your cotton this year.

We had a nice crowd at Sunday School and preaching Sunday morning and a nice B. Y. P. U. that night. Rev. Dewey Robinson filled his regular appointment both at morning and evening, his text Sunday morning was "To Whom Shall We Go." It was a very good sermon.

The health around here isn't good at present. Mrs. Flossie Mae Guldge is about like usual. Mrs. Charlie Barrett was brought home Friday after being in the South Highland Baptist Hospital over a week. She underwent a serious operation May 5. She is reported doing nicely at present.

Mrs. Ernest Tabscott called on Mrs. Mary Pate and Mrs. Charlie Barrett Sunday afternoon.

Miss Willie Pearl Owen spent Sunday with Miss Oly Pate.

Mr. Jack Clecker and Mr. Omar Beasley went to the all-day singing at Providence.

Miss Ruby Vaughn of Birmingham is visiting Mr. and Mrs. W. G. Maynard.

Mrs. Marion Maynard of Birmingham is also visiting Mr. and Mrs. Maynard.

Mr. Dewey Robinson was Sunday supper guest of Mr. and Mrs. W. A. Horton.

Mrs. Lonnie Pate is visiting her mother in Sylacauga a while.

Mr. and Mrs. Ben Baldwin are back at their home after spending a while visiting in Florida and Tennessee.

Mr. S. J. Williams was Sunday dinner guest of Miss Jewell Barrett.

Mr. Preston Gore spent Sunday with Mr. Charles Barrett.

Every one remember the first Sunday in each month is the singing afternoon. The two Mr. Glasscocks will be present.

There will be an all-day affair at Maynard's Chapel June 6. The morning will be taken up with Sunday School and preaching. The afternoon with singing and probably some speeches. Everyone is invited and have a special invitation to come and be sure you don't forget your basket packed well with something good to eat. The 6th of June is also Mr. W. G. Maynard's birthday and we are going to honor him also, because he has done so much to help toward our church. The church has been completed now. It has been painted both on inside and outside. We are grateful toward our little country church. It is a church we are all going to make for God. Let the Lord lead us to the things we should do.

May the Lord in his wisdom and power bring the dear readers of this paper a blessing that everyone will go to church on our Lord's day and praise Him who died for us in our prayer this week.

GOOD VENTILATION ENHANCES COMFORT OF 1937 CHRYSLERS

With the coming of fine spring weather, the ventilation of a motor car becomes increasingly important. The complete enjoyment of a drive depends largely on an abundant supply of fresh air, free from drafts and disagreeable eddies.

In the 1937 Chrysler, ventilation has been greatly improved over former methods and this, together with a new and better form of insulation against heat, cold and drafts, serves to make the car thoroughly comfortable.

To insure the greatest possible volume of fresh air in warm weather, Chrysler uses a ventilating windshield on the Royal and Imperial models. An unusually large cowl ventilator, with screen, also serves to supply air from the front of the car.

Ventilating wings are built into the forward section of the front door windows, including the metal divider strip can be lowered completely, while the ventilating wing section remains stationary.

On the four-door models the rear quarter windows swing outward on friction pivots in the same manner as the front door ventilating wings. Rear door windows can be lowered completely out of sight and rear quarter windows on the two-door sedan models are almost flush with the sill when lowered. In running condition, the rear window can be lowered with a separate lever in conversation with passengers in the rear.

Each passenger regulates his own supply of air in the Chrysler Airflow. Two cowl ventilators and two windshields are used. If the driver prefers the windshield and the cowl ventilator on his side open and the passenger on his side prefers them closed, this can be effected by their independent controls.

Ventilating wings in the front door window swing outward in a wide arc. These wings, together with the rear half of the window may be completely lowered. Passengers in the rear seat may adjust their ventilation independently by means of pivotal rear quarter windows. Because of the unusual width of the doors in the sedan model, the windows in the rear door may be completely lowered. The combination of all these ventilation aids results in a car that is virtually as airy and draft-free as an open model.

ELMO SCOTT WATSON

A CANDIDATE "ANNOUNCES"

ON THE morning of April 4, 1900, the New York World printed what has been described as "one of the most curious announcements of a presidential candidacy ever made, one of the most naive declarations ever given out by any man who had even the briefest parts in American politics."

Admiral George Dewey, the "Hero of Manila," had given an interview in which he said in part: "If the American people want me for this high office, I shall be only too willing to serve them. . . . Since studying this subject I am convinced that the office of the President is not such a very difficult one to fill, his duties being mainly to execute the laws of Congress. Should I be chosen for this exalted position I would execute the laws of Congress as faithfully as I have always executed the orders of my superior."

"Not such a difficult office to fill," indeed! That was a jolt to the hero-worshipping American public. Already it had begun to suspect that its idol had feet of clay. It had gone wild over his victory in the Philippines. Upon his return to America, it gave him the reception such as few conquering heroes had. It had built a triumphal arch in his honor in New York and had raised money to buy a house in Washington for him. Not long after his return, he had taken a second wife who was much younger than he was and he had decided the gift house to her. That didn't sit so well with his worshippers, nor did the social ambitions of his new wife. Moreover, a matter of religious prejudice was injected into the gossip about the Deweys.

Dewey had been approached on the subject of being a candidate for President and had disclaimed any such ambition. But a "Stop Bryan!" element in the Democratic party had persisted in promoting his candidacy and at last he yielded to the temptation.

Then he made his amazing announcement and the public immediately turned against him. Where he had been previously praised, he was now ridiculed. His candidacy was generally characterized as the "climax to a series of unfortunate mistakes." As quickly as that candidacy had blossomed, it withered. America apparently would elect a military hero President, as witness William Henry Harrison, Zachary Taylor and Ulysses S. Grant. But, as for a naval hero—George Dewey was the first, and so far, the last, to find out that a sea dog isn't wanted in the White House!

Norge Reports More Sales Increases

Again Norge leads, according to Howard E. Blood, executive vice president, Borg-Warner Corporation, parent company, with 239,413 unit household appliance shipments for the first four month period this year, compared with 190,568 units in the comparative period of 1936, a gain of better than 26 per cent. April Norge All-product unit sales totalled 67,562 units compared with 57,992 units in the like month of 1936.

"Norge sales increases so far this year," said Blood, "reflect the increased buying power of greater employment and higher wages. They also indicate the greater public interest in home modernization and new residential construction. There is a national spendability at least twelve billion dollars greater than in 1933 and much of this is going into the home. Not only do more people desire the convenience and health protection of Rollator refrigeration but they are replacing washers and ranges, and adding new heating equipment in a larger way than before.

"Norge washer sales, for example, showed a 59 per cent increase for the four month period compared with 1936 while washer shipments of the industry for the first quarter are reported to have increased approximately 11 per cent over 1936. Sales of Norge furnaces for the four month period, compared with last year, gained 157 per cent; oil burners, 113 per cent, commercial refrigerator installations, 124 per cent; ranges, 19 per cent.

"Interesting too," reported Blood, "is the fact that Norge opens orders at the end of April for all products exceeded total shipments for the comparative month of April and represented 99 per cent of 1936 sales.

IN MEMORY OF MRS. J. O. BROWN

On Monday night, May 10, the death angel visited the home of Mrs. J. O. Brown and carried her soul on to heaven. Everybody who knew her loved her for that sweet kind and sympathetic manner, but God thought it best to take from us our dear wife and mother.

Forever will linger with us the memory of that sweet smile she always gave to whomever she met. Grief is great and hard to bear by her loved ones, though God had need of her in that beautiful home up there. Life is short and sweet but we must bear the sorrows and the sting of death after life's fitful fever. She was very beautiful in her peaceful sleep.

Our last wish is that we may all meet this wonderful mother in heaven. She leaves to mourn for her husband, Mr. J. O. Brown, one son, J. B.; one sister, Lillie Sewell; two brothers, J. B., C. C. Roseberry, all of Clanton, Ala.

Funeral services were held Tuesday afternoon, May 11, at three o'clock at Pleasant Grove church. Martin & Sons were in charge. Pallbearers were Sides, Addington, Alford, Patterson, Terrell, Webbiton. Flower girls were Kathleen West, Mrs. Roberts, Mrs. Earl West, Mrs. Bates, Mrs. Neese, Mattie Moore.

MINUTES OF CHILTON COUNTY COUNCIL OF HOME DEMONSTRATION CLUBS MAY 15, 1937

May 15, 1937, at 3 o'clock the County Council of Home Demonstration Clubs met at the City Hall in Clanton. The meeting was called to order by the Home Demonstration Agent, Meta E. Grace, in the absence of Mrs. Anna Phalin, President, who was late arriving.

A song "Is Everybody Happy" was sung followed by the reading of minutes of the last meeting. An article on "Good Citizenship" was read followed by old and new business.

A move was made and it was decided that the committee be appointed to work out plans for County Fair to be held in Chilton County. The attendance contest sponsored by the County Council of Chilton County Clubs was reviewed and the following committee appointed to check the secretary's books of the club and determine the winner of the attendance and membership contest. The committee appointed in charge of the checking was Mrs. Anna Phalin, Mrs. Charles Howard and Mrs. J. D. Williams.

Report blanks for the various chairmen of the three objectives, "Farm Bureau," "Citizenship" and "Scholarship" were handed out and discussed. The clubs were asked to continue their programs on the objectives so they may familiarize themselves with the objectives and what may be done towards the objectives as clubs.

Special discussion was made of the buying of fruit jars for the Food Preservation season. Special prices were quoted the Clanton office from the Taylor Wholesale Company of Clanton as applied on both Ball and Keer jars; Pints per gross, $7.25; quarts, per gross, $8.50 and one-half gallon jars per gross $11.75. Suggestions were made that Council members tell their clubs of these special prices made to club members. A suggestion was made by the Home Demonstration Agent that each club woman doing her summer canning, that she can her sample jars for the Fair from her canned products.

Last but not least, a kitchen sink plan was discussed. The Council moved seconded that the Home Demonstration Agent send out special letters asking that each club member interested in securing a kitchen sink on a cooperative plan to send her name and address to the office of the Home Demonstration Agent and that she appoint a committee to assist her in visiting the manufacturer and see what the best prices would be in securing a large number of sinks for the club members of been great and of long duration, yet he bore it with a smile. Through his long suffering he kept faith in God, asking for help to bear his intense suffering and was loyal until the last.

His sweet disposition won him a host of friends, for to know him was to love him. James had been in failing health for fourteen months, struggling always to keep in good spirits and keep his sunny disposition. We are very sad indeed to lose our true friend, but we should not weep for James; he is resting where the soul never dies. All is well with James.

He is survived by his parents, Mr. and Mrs. J. A. Kelly, four sisters, Mrs. Nora Williams, Verbena; Miss Evelyn Kelly, Kate Kelly, Mildred Kelly and one brother, William Kelly, all of Jemison; one niece, Joyce Marquette Kelly; one nephew, Edward Williams of Verbena and a host of relatives and friends.

Funeral services were held Thursday at 11 A.M. at the Verbena Baptist Church, the Rev. George F. Cory of Birmingham was assisted by the Rev. Clyde Bass of Verbena. Interment was in the Verbena cemetery with the Trustees Funeral Home in charge.

Active pallbearers were Chelsea Thrash, Arnold Arledge, Ulyses Lawrence, Orman Arledge, Gladney Thrash and Harmon Glascock.

Division Of Labor

Every community like ours needs a good live effective commercial club, call it a Chamber of Commerce, an Advancement Association, or what you will. If the organization is headed by able leaders, and the work of promoting the community's welfare is properly assigned, notable accomplishment is possible.

One man may be familiar with the problems of industry. He is the logical one to head an industrial promotion committee. Another may have an aptitude for promoting and directing trade events. He should serve as chairman of the merchants' division. Another may be devoted to athletics and sports, another may have a flair for handling conventions, another may know something about advertising and publicity. In the ideal organization each man is assigned to the job in community building for which he is best adapted. When that ideal is approached notable progress in the community takes place.

The local advancement organization assumes the character of an efficiency operated business. Citizens will work on community promotion enterprises because they are doing the job that interests them most. Out of the activity of all these committees an abundant crop of good ideas grows. The community becomes an interesting place in which to live, a better center in which to do business.

Here in Clanton we need an organization which can direct the ability, the energy and civic spirit of our citizens into the proper channels.

—O-O-O—

The Common Sense Way

An unusual labor controversy and an unusual settlement took place recently in a comparatively large factory allied with the automobile industry. A reduction in hours of operation was found necessary to enable the company to comply with Federal law in handling a contract for the government.

The workers met and decided that they could not accept the reduction in earnings that this entailed. They sent men from their own group to the management. These men announced that the workers would not return for employment unless the hourly pay rate was increased.

Within three hours the controversy was settled. The workers won a substantial increase in pay. The plant continued its operations. Losses in wages and business as a result of the controversy were almost negligible.

That's what we call collective bargaining at its best. And it is interesting and significant that the workers were not affiliated with any national union. They merely selected a committee from among their own members to represent them in their negotiations with the management.

This procedure seems far more simple and much more effective than that which has characterized most of our labor controversies in recent years. It was all handled on a business-like basis, and from what we have learned the settlement proved to be satisfactory to all parties concerned.

Why can't all labor controversies be handled in this way one wonders. Then comes the answer. Too much excitement, too much class feeling, and too much oratory complicate the issue in many instances. Strikes are called before any notice has been served upon the management. Outside agents often more interested in formulating disorder than in representing labor, stimulate disorder and encourage violence. The bitterness and hostility that such policies create always make it difficult to negotiate a satisfactory settlement.

If the relations between management and labor could be handled in a cool and business-like manner substantial benefits would come to labor, to business, and to the general public as well.

Use Of Leisure

"The devil finds work for idle hands," is an old adage that assumes especial significance today.

Hours of labor have been reduced for the purpose of spreading employment, jobs are scarce for young men and women just out of school or college. Little opportunity for part time employment is now available. As a result a large proportion of our citizens, particularly our young people, are left with an enormous amount of idle time on their hands.

How will they use this time? That is a question of concern to us here in Clanton. It represents a local as well as a national problem.

Wholesome recreation for the great mass of our citizens, athletic and gymnastic activities in which the many can take part, sports for the young men who have severed school ties and have not yet assumed business responsibilities—these are things which the live and alert community must provide.

It is one thing to talk about flaming youth and condemn its ways. It is another thing to understand the problem of the present and devise plans to solve it. We must face the condition of today before we can even attempt a constructive program.

—O-O-O—

What Our Support Warrants

People get about what they deserve. They get the sort of government for which they vote. They get the kind of newspapers they support. They have an opportunity to enjoy the type of entertainment that their patronage warrants. And they get the sort of sores that their buying policies justify.

If you want good, modern, up-to-date stores in Clanton you must extend your support and approval to the merchants who are endeavoring to supply the demand. Why complain about poor stocks of merchandise when you never give the local merchant a chance to serve you?

In this day and age of competitive business there is always somebody ready to supply any reasonable demand. If the citizens of Clanton will exhibit a readiness to support local business, local business will in turn meet their requirements.

An indifferent attitude toward the community and its business institutions can be reflected only in indifferent merchandising institutions, in stores which are not suitable to meet the demands of modern and up-to-date citizens.

A little honest and conscientious effort to buy from the local institutions which maintain the community will soon lead to marked improvement of these establishments. The larger their volume of business the more effectively they can serve with quality merchandise at attractive prices.

—O-O-O—

The Past And The Present

Many of us heard the ceremonies of the coronation of King George VI on Wednesday, May 12. We heard the fanfare of trumpets, and the frenzied cheers of the vast crowds as the royal cavalcade passed slowly through the streets of London.

From thousands of miles across a heaving ocean came the voices of the announcers, the words of the ritual of anointment, the address of the king himself to his subjects who spread across an empire on which the sun never sets. It aroused strange thoughts.

Here was a medieval ceremony spread across the face of the world through the wonders of modern science. What an age this is in which we are living; how the past and the present become interestingly entangled; how in spite of all our progress we adhere to customs and ways of thought that belong to times when dark magic was believed and the wonders of science were beyond human conception.

Does it seem strange, therefore, that we should become confused at times? It is surprising that the human race experiences difficulty in keeping pace with the marvels of science and invention? Is it surprising that our governmental institutions and our social organization should be out of tune with a world of high speed machinery and miracles of scientific invention.

It is said that we think objectively in matters of science and mechanics. We assemble facts by experiment and then base our conclusions upon what we find. But when we consider social problems or human adjustments and relations we first arrive at our conclusions based largely upon prejudice and tradition. Then we seek to find facts to justify those generalizations.

Is it any wonder, therefore, that our world seems crazy?

MORAL ECHOES

D. W. Haskew

It was Monday following a hard day in my church when I walked down to a road track to see a freight train go by. Along came the engine all steamed up. It was puffing and pulling its load of thirty-two cars behind it. Many of the wheels on the cars were grinding and groaning as they rolled along. The cars were keeping up with the engine in a way, but not one of them had any propelling power. They traveled but only from the pull of the engine. Thought I to myself, "There goes my church. The preacher is the engine, the cars are the membership. The preacher is all steamed up and pulling, but he is having to carry the membership along by his constant effort." Verily I say unto you, "A freight train church means a lot of hard pulling on the part of a pastor."

One day I rode from Buffalo, New York to Niagara Falls on an Electric train. The conductor was a friendly man and he told me much about his train and how it worked. He said that each coach had a separate motor and that it mattered not how many cars were attached that the front motor was not strained in the least. The current came into the front motor and then flowed back through each motor creating the same amount of power in each car. Thus each coach was attached to the head motor, and yet each one created its own motive power and moved under its own strength. I thought to myself, "This is the kind of a church that I want to serve. It must be a joy forever to a pastor to have a church where each member has creative power and pulling force to move along without the awful strain on the pastor. Why be a freight train church and pull the day lights out of the preacher? Why not be an electric train church where each member has power to carry himself on the road to heaven?"

While reading a daily paper I glanced at an advertisement and read this statement by a physician, "When every other physician has given you up; when you have failed to find relief from all other sources, then come to me and I will cure you. You are the sort of a person I would like to treat." The advertiser may have been a quack. Perhaps he was, but his advertisement appealed to those patients who had given up hope. This doctor set himself up to cure where others had failed. That reminded me that this doctor was applying to himself Divine language. When Christ was in the world he claimed to heal and save when all others had failed. If any of you have failed to find comfort, help and salvation outside of Christ, then you can come to Him and He will do all that others have failed to do. "Come unto me all ye that labor and are heavy laden and I will give you rest." When all mankind has denounced you and you have become an outcast in a far away country, then come back to God and He will save you. It is just like Jesus to welcome home the sinners of all races and lands.

A mother made this confession to her pastor, "My daughter is confused by a situation that she does not dare discuss except at home. A high school chum who is quite active in church work steals test questions from the desk of the principal and gives them to her brother to study. My daughter has strong convictions on what is right and wrong and she finds it hard to respect this girl's religious pretensions." When a pupil in school has been instructed in the finer arts of character so that to steal test questions becomes an offense of a religious nature, that pupil is headed right. It is as criminal to steal ideas, test papers, or information on examinations, as it is to steal money. Any one who steals to pass a test need not be surprised when folks pass them by as a hypocrite. It takes a lot of repentance and a lot of living to gain back confidence when one is caught stealing on an examination.

In the olden days when a man was convicted of any crime he was forced to submit to a form of branding that carried with him the extent of his guilt to the grave. If he were convicted of stealing he had an iron that branded him with this word, "Thief". If he were convicted of murder his brand was "Murder". His crime was branded into his body and for the rest of his life he carried that message of guilt with him. This was done to advertise to the world the kind of disgrace that belonged to the guilty. No longer do we find the courts doing this kind of branding, but sin is still branding men and women with its guilt. The guilty party may not be required to submit to a branding iron and yet sin is branding old and young with an impression that will follow them to the grave. Sin brands the body, sin brands the countenance, it brands the brain. The thief, the drunkard, the libertine, never fails to carry the brand of his guilt along with him. The guilty does not have to tell the crime of which he is guilty. People know it by reading the brand.

Did you know that 25 per cent of all of the receipts of the National Forests are returned to the States and Counties from which they are derived to be used locally for schools and roads? Receipts increase with timber growth. Forest fires destroy timber growth. Prevent forest fires.—U.S. Forest Service.

Outbreaks of hog cholera are reported in various sections of Alabama, advise livestock specialists of the Extension Service. County agents of the state have been active in assisting farmers in inoculating and treating their hogs.

A survey and analysis of the general business situation indicate that there will be little change in the demand for farm products during the next few months, says the U.S. Bureau of Agricultural Economics in reporting that world supply and demand conditions affecting American farm products which enter into international trade continue favorable.

Brief Farm News

IN MEMORY OF AARON MIMS

Aaron Mims, 13, son of Mr. Mims, Robert Mims, of Billingsville, at his home Monday night, May 24, God has called Aaron to His home. In sin he will never more roam. He was so loving and kind, That God had a better place in store for him to go to be at rest. His home where all is blessed. He is now on that shining shore. Where he shall be forevermore. And as we tread this weary way, We can only hope and pray. To join him some glad day. This world is not a resting place. But heaven and the sight of Him. Shall prove to be a resting place. So lay aside your burden of sin. Jesus will help you to win. Let's get prepared as the time draws night. And be ready to join our loved one in that golden land on high.

OAK GROVE—BEAT 16
There will be all-day services at Oak Grove the fifth Sunday in May, the 30th, beginning at 9:30 o'clock and continuing until about 4. The entire time will be used in praising the Lord. There will be some good music, and a large crowd is expected from different places.

Members of all different denominations are invited to attend, for all who have been born of the Spirit are brothers and sisters in Christ. We especially want as many preachers as possible to attend. Everybody come.

Hard on the Eyes
These modern novelists are hard on the eyes observes a friend of ours. You will discover them using the eyes in such ways as these:
"Her eyes roamed carelessly about the room."
"He tore his eyes from her face and let them fall on the paper on the floor."
"Their eyes met, for a moment and then swam together."

Announcement
Don't forget your Club Rally, Saturday afternoon at 1:30 o'clock at the High School auditorium. We will have some outstanding speakers with us from both Montgomery and Auburn. Let's make this the biggest, best Rally Chilton County has ever had.

Minutes of the First 4-H County Council Meeting
The 4-H County Council of Chilton County met at the City Hall May 15, 1937, in the afternoon to make plans for their future work.

First the Council planned and made year books for the Council. The year books included the following:
1. Club Motto; 2. Club Pledge; 3. Club color; 4. Club Flower; 5. 4-H County Council officers; 6. Program Committee; 7. Finance Committee; 8. Executive Committee; 9. Council Committee; 10. Social Committee; 11. Projects for Clubs; 12. Minor Projects; 13. Meetings of 4-H County Council; 14. Constitution of 4-H Council; 15. B-Laws of 4-H Council.

The various committees, Program Finance, Council, Executive and social are to be appointed at next meeting for the Clubs.

The representatives who are to attend the State Short Course at Auburn were given instructions as to rules and regulations they will follow. The winners are: Cleo Jones, Plantersville, Ala. and Catherine Schurter, Maplesville, Ala. These girls will go to test good foods.

Mary Pearl Griffin, Verbena, Ala., was the winner in the Health Contest. She will enter the State Health Contest at Auburn.

Helen Patterson, Verbena, Ala., will attend the Short Course as an outstanding Club girl.

Scrap books were studied, materials, and plans for them were discussed. Pictures were made of winner and representatives.

The following officers belong to Chilton County 4-H Councils:
President, Helen Patterson; Vice-president, Mary Pearl Griffin; 2nd vice-president, Mildred Todd; Secretary, Mary Pearl Holley; Treasurer, Helen Baisden; Reporter, Michalee Mims; Vocalist, Annie Laura DeVaughn; Artist Wilda Mae Grover.

We are planning to meet in the near future at the City Hall with our Home Agent, Miss Grace.

Miss Pauline Sisk, chairman of the Farm Bureau, gave the history of the Farm Bureau, and its work. Miss Grace also gave some interesting thoughts to be considered in Farm Bureau work. Each member of the club was given a food chart to study the value of different foods. Also several different salad recipes were given. The club was very sorry to lose its secretary, Mrs. George E. Stutt, who has made her home in Maplesville.

The demonstration given by Mrs. Roper, Miss Grace was on Diseases and Special Diets. We find it important to know the kind of food that the body needs and how to prevent diseases such as T.B., Diabetes, Pellegria and Anemia. After the business meeting closed the members enjoyed a social hour while Miss Grace and Mrs. J. M. Roper prepared and served a menu for the sick. Later the club dismissed to meet at the home of Mrs. Effie Shaw, June 8, 1937—Secretary, Pauline Sisk.

VERBENA HOME DEM. CLUB
The Verbena Home Demonstration Club met Thursday afternoon, May 6, at the school building.

As the president was absent Miss Grace presided. After singing some songs the roll was called and the minutes of the last meeting were read.

Mrs. Claude Downs gave an interesting talk on "What The Farm Bureau Is And Is Not."

Mrs. Jessiter, a visitor from another club, gave us a short talk on the Farm Bureau. We all enjoyed the song "Trees" rendered so beautifully by Miss Helen Patterson, a 4-H Club girl. Mrs. Oscar Howard gave a reading, "How I Became A Gardener."

Miss Grace discussed special diets and made several dishes suitable for an invalid.

The Club adjourned by repeating the club pledge.

The next meeting will be June 3, at the home of Mrs. Joe Gaines. Everybody make a special effort to be there, and let's see if we can't have a perfect attendance.

SHOULTS CLUB
The Shoults Home Demonstration Club met Thursday, May 13, in the home of Mrs. Willie Hicks with eleven members, three visitors present. The meeting was called to order, the roll called, and the minutes read by the secretary, Lucie Walker. The minutes were approved. As there was no business a very interesting program on "Citizenship" was carried out. We then learned a new song, "Is Everybody Happy." This was followed by a demonstration on "Special Diets" by the leaders. A demonstration of "Flowers" will be given in the home of Mrs. Sam Shoults, Thursday, June 10.—Reporter, Lucie Walker.

FAIRVIEW CLUB
The Fairview Home Demonstration Club met at the home of Mrs. Alice Foshee on May 18, 1937.

There were fourteen members present and four absent.

The meeting was called to order by the president. The roll was called by the secretary. The minutes were read and approved. Plans were discussed to raise money to meet expenses each month. Each member will bring five cents every month for this purpose. At this meeting the president urged every member to attend the rally, and do their part toward cooperating in every way.

The demonstration was on salads. The leaders prepared the demonstration while Miss Grace explained the different kinds of salads and when they should be used. We adjourned by saying the club pledge.—Reporter, Estelle Cowart.

BAKER CLUB
The Baker Home Demonstration Club met at the home of Mrs. J. M. Parker Tuesday, May 11, 1937, at 2:00 P.M. with six members and one visitor present. One new member was welcomed to our club. The meeting was called to order by our president, Mrs. J. A. Marcus. The roll was called by the secretary and the minutes of the previous meeting were read and approved. Miss Grace taught the club a new song, "Is Everybody Happy."

An Epidemic
Mother: "Did I see you kissing that young Allen last night?"
Beryl: "Well, Mother, he told me he had just lost an uncle and I felt so sorry for him."
"If I know anything about that young man he won't have a relative left in a week's time."

CARD OF THANKS

On Monday night, May 17, the death angel visited the home of Mr. and Mrs. J. M. Fuller and carried their little daughter, Betty Sue, on to Heaven. Everyone who knew her loved her for her sweet disposition, but God thought it best to take from us our dear loving daughter.

Oh, how we miss her sweet smiling face, she always gave to whomever she met. Grief is great and hard to bear by her loved ones. The God had need of her in that beautiful home up there. All was done that loving hands could do. We especially thank Dr. Ballard, Dr. Kennedy, also Dr. Brown of Montgomery. We also thank Mr. and Mrs. Jim Atchison and family, also Mr. and Mrs. Ira Atchison and Mr. Floyd Nix.

and Mr. Elmer Barnhill.
She leaves to mourn, her mother and father; four brothers, three sisters, namely, Lemont, in Houston, Texas; James William, in Auburn, Ala.; Henry Elizabeth, Louise Gordon and Francis, all at home in Jeannette, Ala.

She was laid to rest in the Shady Grove cemetery. Pallbearers were: Mr. Ira Atchison, Mr. Floyd Nix, Mr. Lloyd Smith, Mr. Luther Kelley, Mr. Howell Atchison and Mr. Elmer Barnhill.

May God bless each and every one is our prayer.—The Family.

Firestone
TIRES
GIVE YOU GREATER PROTECTION AGAINST SKIDDING AND BLOWOUTS

YOU will know the minute you see this tire why car owners everywhere call it the greatest tire ever made to sell at these low prices. The deeper, wider, flatter non-skid tread made of tough, long wearing rubber will give you protection against dangerous skidding.

But tires cannot be judged on tread alone. Under the tread of Firestone Standard Tires are two extra layers of Gum-Dipped cords. This Firestone patented construction feature binds the tread and cord body into one inseparable unit. Every cotton fiber in every cord in every ply is saturated and coated with pure liquid rubber which counteracts the internal friction and heat that ordinarily destroy tire life. This Firestone patented process of Gum-Dipping gives greater protection against blowouts and is used only in Firestone Tires.

Come in, join the Firestone Save A Life Campaign today by equipping your car with a set of new Firestone Gum-Dipped Tires.

DO YOU KNOW

THAT last year highway accidents cost the lives of more than 38,000 men, women and children?

THAT 1 million more were injured?

THAT more than 40,000 of these deaths and injuries were caused directly by punctures, blowouts and skidding due to unsafe tires?

DON'T RISK YOUR LIFE ON THIN WORN TIRES

JOIN THE FIRESTONE Save a Life CAMPAIGN! TODAY!

MYSTERY PLAY TO BE PRESENTED BY V.H.S. SENIORS

There is a treat in store for those who like action, thrills, mystery and laughter. The Senior Class of Verbalia High School presents "Murdered Alive" on June 4, 1937.

This is a mystery that has everybody baffled. Mysterious letters, arms appearing through walls, loud knockings, all combined to give an eerie, ghostly aspect to the whole play—and just watch the action when the corresponding school detective starts on the case!

You can't afford to miss it!

Isabella F.F.A. Chapter Elects Officers Rec'tly

The regular meeting of the Isabella Chapter of the F.F.A. was held Wednesday, May 19, 1937. The meeting was called to order by the president, Herbert Morgan. After the program a motion was put to the house that we elect officers for the following year. This was in good order as it would give the newly elected officers a chance to preside at one meeting before the close of school. We wish to commend the following last year officers for the good work that has been done while they were in charge: Herbert Morgan, president; Willard Davenport, vice president; Donald Calfee, Secretary; Chalmers Jones, treasurer; and Zolon Broadhead, reporter.

The following were elected as new officers: George Kyser, president; Willard Davenport, vice president; Herbert Morgan, secretary; and Elree Calfee, reporter.

After the election each new officer promised to do his best and work for the chapter.

Reporter, Elree Calfee.

NATURAL NITRATE DEMONSTRATED BY ISABELLA F.F.A.

The Chilean (nature) nitrate demonstration which is sponsored by the Isabella F.F.A. is located one-half mile east of the Isabella school. The crop which is two and one-half acres of cotton, is a project of a local member and will be side-dressed with 150 lbs. per acre of Chilean Nitrate. By using this soda it will prove the value and profits derived from side-dressing cotton.

Each two weeks for the next few weeks there will appear in the local papers an article relating to this cotton. Figures will be kept on the demonstration to determine the profits made from using Chilean Nitrate of Soda as a source of nitrogen for cotton.

The Balanced McCormick-Deering New

cultivates evenly

THE gang beams of the New 4 raise and lower horizontally. They are always level; thus all the above or hoes enter the ground at the same time and at an even depth unless you have them set differently.

The New 4 is a "balance frame" cultivator. When the gangs are raised by the master lever which is provided, the frame moves forward, and with it the drive balancing the cultivator nicely.

The thorough success of the McCormick-Deering New 4 has undoubtedly made it the leading single row cultivator in the United States. We will be glad to show it to you.

J.H. JACKSON WRITES ABOUT THE GARDEN OF EDEN AND CREATION

Editor, The News:
Will you please give me space in your paper to give my views on certain things pertaining to the Garden of Eden and the creation?

While this is a very deep subject, yet we should study it the more.

Now the history of the creation is like prophecy—it is mostly figuratively spoken, and by inspiration of God. Only it points back instead of the future. Now friends, if we notice carefully we will find that creation is one thing and formation is another. Creation is to design, or an intention, but formation is to bring into existence. Now the question I desire to discuss is in regard to Adam, Eve and the serpent.

I take the position to say and to prove that Adam was the one who beguiled and deceived Eve, and not the literal snake. Now for a few proofs:

We find in Genesis 1:27 where God created male and female. So after He had created man, He says in 2:5: "And there was not a man to till the ground, so he formed man." In 2:16 God gave Adam the law. We find in 2:18 that Adam was alone, and Eve had not been made, or formed. He was the only one to whom the law was given, Eve was innocent so far as the law is concerned, except what Adam probably had told her. Neither was the serpent or snake formed when God gave Adam the law.

Now let's consider the word "serpent" from a spiritual standpoint and see if it is not a figure or symbol of the carnal mind, or lust of the flesh. Paul says to be carnal minded is death. Jesus said to a certain class: "Ye serpents, ye generation of vipers." John 12:9 to a certain class says: "That old serpent called the devil." Now to eat doesn't mean to masticate every time with our mouth. We may eat in the way of lust or to desire to do a thing or to enjoy an imaginary thought. Jesus says that we may commit adultery by lust or thought in our heart. In this manner, no doubt Adam and Eve did eat before they committed the act. I don't think the Bible teaches that the literal serpent or snake is known in this case from a spiritual standpoint.

Some people seem to think that the prophecies say just what they mean and mean just what they say. That is not the case when it is figuratively spoken. Paul says that the natural man receiveth not the things of the spirit, neither can he know them, because they are spiritually discerned. Now if it was the literal snake, when did he become dumb? We have no record of God making him dumb. The fact is that old serpent in Adam that beguiled Eve is still talking and trying to deceive and to rob woman of her crown of virtue, just as he did in the Garden of Eden.

It is also called the beast, the dragon, and false prophet. It always demands a warfare between the flesh, or spirit of the serpent, and the spirit of life, with a Christian; Rev. 16:13.

Its symbol is frogs. He says: "And I saw three unclean spirits like frogs came out of the mouth of the dragon, and out of the mouth of the beast, and out of the mouth of the false prophet." Now these frogs were not literal or natural frogs, but they are the symbols of the spirits of devils, working miracles, just as he was in the Garden of Eden, called the serpent, that old serpent called the devil.

Well, if this is printed, I will again about the tree of life and sword. Respectfully,—J. H. Jackson, Route 1, Clanton, Ala.

"Buying another Chevrolet has become an unbreakable habit with my family and me—so much so, that we are now driving our twenty-first consecutive car of that make. Another part of the 'habit' is that we always buy from Joe Mills, owner of the Mills Chevrolet Company, our Chevrolet dealer in Colorado, Texas. As the big spaces of Texas test both cars and friendships, I think our long-time loyalty says much for the dependability of both the Chevrolet car and our local Chevrolet dealer. While we can get values like these, nothing but Chevrolet will satisfy us."

Building Farm Homes Be Encouraged

The suggestion of Governor Bibb's officials of the Alabama Extension Service are working on plans to encourage farmers to paint their farm buildings.

out definite plans for approaching the problem.

"Since receiving this suggestion I have observed farm buildings through out the State and have concluded that at least 90 per cent of them should be painted immediately," he continues. "It means 92 per cent is nearer the correct figure. While authentic statistics are not available, it is my belief that there are not enough painters in Alabama to paint in ten years the farm buildings which should be painted this year. It is a well known fact that good paint is a profitable investment. It is worth much more than it costs and it also has a wholesome effect upon the people who live in houses, or see them.

"So, therefore, the suggestion from Gov. Bibb's officials is passed on to you with the request that you prepare and submit to me definite plans as to how we should proceed most efficiently and effectively in getting our farm buildings painted as rapidly as possible.

"I realize that it is a long-time job and that it will take a long time to do the job the most economical way not to sacrifice quality."

IN MEMOR YOF ARSIE T. KLINNER

Arsie left us Monday, May 10 and returned to his home in heaven. He was born near Maplesville October 31, 1913. He received his education at the Maplesville High School. He had been employed for several years with the Jefferson Lumber Company of Maplesville.

Arsie has a host of friends and loved ones to share their sympathy with his bereaved family, because he was liked by all who knew him.

He was laid to rest in the Sardis cemetery Tuesday, May 11, with Rev. Stillwell officiating and Martin and Sons in charge.

The pallbearers were: Messrs. Arthur Johnson, Anglis Chambers, Marvin Hayes, Joe Cox, Ben Burnette and Plato Chambers.

He has passed from earth to glory. Like a flower to the sod. To awake in joy and beauty.

In the Kingdom of our God. He has gone and left us desolate. But he is so glad and free.

All our tears would turn to smiles. If his rapture we could see. Oh, how good and brave and tender He was ever, day by day.

All the sorrow that he gave us. Was because he went away. For his soul that we so cherished. Now has found a fairer clime.

Where the hand of God forever Stays the ravage of time. Earth has lost a friend and loved one. But in Paradise we know.

Lives Another saint forever— While the endless ages flow. So let's think of him with gladness. With unselfishness and say. Heaven now is dearer and sweeter. Just because he went away.

LAY DAM LOSES ONE, WINS ONE DURING PAST WEEK

The Kilowatts took one on the chin at Sycamore last Tuesday when they went down before the fast Sycamore Mills by a count of 7 to 2. Lay Dam failed to score until the ninth when by Tiffin and Jones followed by Greene's triple brought two runs across. Greene was out at the plate trying to stretch the hit. Turner relieved Whitaker in the last of the fifth and turned the Mills back with only 3 hits and no runs, but the Kilowatts were never able to overcome the 7 run lead the Mills got in the first 4 innings.

Side Dress Cotton With Potash Early For Best Results

The results to be obtained from side dressing cotton with potash or other fertilizer materials is determined to a large extent by the time of application, tests at a number of experiment stations in the southern states show.

Experiments conducted over a period of years indicate that side dressing applications should be made to cotton about 35 days from the time of planting in order to get the greatest returns. Many farmers follow the practice of side dressing immediately after chopping with satisfactory results.

Side dressing corn 40 days after planting has given best results with this crop; experiments show. The common practice of making the side application when corn plants are "knee high" is not recommended because height is not an accurate indication of the time the crop needs fertilizing.

Advance sales of potash indicate that

Clanton Methodist Church

Our people are working to make this a great year for the Kingdom. Thursday evening at 7:30 o'clock, there will be a social in the basement of the church. A good time for everyone. The whole Sunday school is expected. Will you be there? Sunday school at 9:45. —L. J. Stewart, Supt. Sunday School.

Praching services 11:00 o'clock A.M. and 7:30 o'clock P.M. Are you faithful to your church?—J. M. Truett, Pastor.

Thousands of farmers throughout Alabama and the South will supplement the fertilizer applied at planting with a side dressing of potash or a combination of potash and nitrogen. This will be necessary, farmers say, because many of the grades of fertilizer are too low in the essential plant foods to feed cotton plants properly and enable them to resist disease.

Agricultural authorities recommend 50 to 100 pounds per acre of muriate of potash to furnish sufficient plant food and to correct the rust conditions which are prevalent in many soils.

RALPH DE PALMA ESTABLISHES UNIQUE RECORD ON FAMOUS INDIANAPOLIS SPEEDWAY, 10TH

Driving a strictly stock car, and using the same Gulf No-Nox Ethyl available to all motorists at service stations along the highway, Ralph De Palma, 55-year-old veteran racing driver, on Monday, May 10, 1937, covered the 500-mile run on the Indianapolis Speedway at an average speed that was 7.6 miles per hour better than the fastest racing car was able to do in 1911.

De Palma's run was part of the twenty-fifth anniversary celebration for the Indianapolis Speedway contest, and the idea was to see how modern stock automobiles and stock gasolines and lubricants compare with racing cars and fuels and lubricants of a quarter of a century ago.

The run was sanctioned and timed by the Contest Board of the American Automobile Association. De Palma's official average time for the run was 82.19 miles per hour. The car was a V-8 LaSalle convertible coupe.

After the first few laps around the famous Indianapolis Speedway course, there was little doubt that De Palma would beat Ray Harroun's championship-winning average of 74.59 miles per hour, made in the race of 1911. Three pit stops were made during the run for refueling, and despite this loss of time the car held its average speed well above the 80-miles-per-hour mark. Gulfpride Oil was used in the engine and no oil was added during the punishing grind, as only about one-half pint of oil was used up.

The run proved beyond doubt that modern passenger cars and stock gasolines and lubricants are far and away ahead of everything that the speedway had in 1911. Throughout his 500-mile grind over the Indianapolis bricks De Palma did not experience the slightest trouble with his car, fuel or lubricants, which speaks well for the dependability of modern automobiles and gasolines as well as for their speed and efficiency.

And by July, one in every 4 families in Alabama will be enjoying the cleanliness, economy and better tasting foods made possible by the MODERN, EASY way of cooking—electrically!

So Popular Has Electric Cookery Become That Manufacturers Are Hard Put to Make Deliveries

THIS popularity isn't sudden—for years there have been women who, replacing old stoves with electric ranges, immediately began singing praises of electric cookery. So their friends bought electric ranges when the time came to replace their out-of-date kitchen stoves. Because electricity is so cheap in Alabama they know an electric range costs little to operate. They know an electric range requires little attention, that it will cook food unattended, that it makes kitchens easier to keep clean, that food cooked the electric way tastes better.

Wouldn't You, Too, Like to Have a Kitchen that Sparkles?

Electrification will be a step in that direction. First you'll want a modern electric refrigerator—then an electric range—then an electric water heater and perhaps an electric dishwasher. Perhaps you'll want to get all four at once—prices are so moderate and terms so liberal.

IF YOU'LL LOOK YOU'LL BUY

If you'll look at one of the electric ranges below you'll be sure to want to start cooking the electric way right away! Moderate prices—easy terms.

HOTPOINT—M-W—UNIVERSAL—GENERAL ELECTRIC PROSPERITY—MONARCH—MARION—ENTERPRISE—L&H
STANDARD—GRAYBAR—CRAWFORD—ESTATE—NORGE
KELVINATOR—WESTINGHOUSE

With an electric water heater in your home, of the type approved by the Alabama Public Service Commission, ALL of the electricity you use in excess of 200 kilowatt hours a month, under the A-8 rate, comes to you at the lowest rate—10 a kilowatt hour—whether you use the electricity for heating water, cooking, refrigeration, lighting, operating your radio, or other electrical appliances.

Plan to have an electric range and water heater installed in your home soon!

That's What I Think

Saul M. Goldstein

It is a peculiar trait of the human race, known well to the psychologist, to build up our self-confidence and self-respect by stressing to ourselves and to others our outstanding achievements, and by soft-peddling or forgetting to mention our deficiencies.

Within the next seven or eight weeks, we shall dedicate formally a brand-new airport of which we are justifiably proud; for how many communities of the size of Clanton, and how many counties the size of Chilton, throughout the width and breadth of the land, can boast of a real, honest-to-goodness airport? The U. S. Army, the U. S. Navy, and perhaps even the U. S. Marines will be on hand to celebrate the event with some plain and fancy demonstration flying; aviators, amateur and professional, public and private, will come from far and near for the gala affair.

There are, to my knowledge, three actual planes owned and operated by Chilton County residents, and it will be a long, long time before there are appreciably many more. The chances of an air-mail line, or a regular transport line choosing Clanton as a regular or flag stop have been recently made remote. Yet we are patting ourselves on the back for the marvelous bit of progress we have made in acquiring an airport.

If we boast of our outstanding achievements in order to cover up our outstanding deficiencies, what are we subconsciously trying to hide in this instance?

Youth is full of energy, and must have an outlet. Hundreds of Chilton County youths are seeking outlets for their stored-up energy all the time. When their day's work, or day's school, as the case may be, is done what is there for them to do? A moving picture, an occasional dance, an occasional athletic game—that is all we have taken steps to provide for them.

Can we, observing these things to be true, criticize our youth too strongly if they frequent roadhouses, take up the habit of drinking, reckless driving, wild parties? I am merely trying to get across the fact that we can't sit back smugly and be satisfied with an occasional airport as an indication that this county is progressive. We would be doing more for the youth, and incidentally, the future citizenry of our community, if we furnished them with adequate recreational facilities. Clanton and Chilton County need a Recreation center.

I am not saying that we shouldn't have an airport; I am merely trying to get across the fact that we can't sit back smugly and be satisfied with an airport as an indication that this county is progressive. We would be doing more for the youth, and incidentally, the future citizenry of our community, if we furnished them with adequate recreational facilities. Clanton and Chilton County need a Recreation center.

Provide a library for those who like to read; game rooms for those who participate in indoor sports; tennis courts, basketball courts, and above all—a real honest-to-goodness swimming pool. You'll want that swimming many times before this summer or I miss my guess. And if your youth these facilities, reap rich dividends in the reduction of accidents from drunken driving, better moral and social health of the community.

We acquired an airport which were only a few citizens who aviation. Certainly a community can accomplish that great task require a Community Center! At least, that's what I think.

Scientists of the Carnegie Institution are using radio to the stratosphere. Radio waves sent out on various wave lengths strike the different levels of atmosphere and are reflected back to their source. It is believed that the study of the characteristics of reflected waves will aid in determining the upper atmosphere.

The Bureau of Air Commerce is installing a series of radio teletypewriters along the coast. D. C. — Nashville provide for the simultaneous transmission of weather in the different points along the coast while eliminating the possibility of error in the receipt of the information. The installation follows the use of the machines in Washington and Baltimore period of 18 months.

For use in emergency, forest fires and mine rescue, knapsack radio receivers of only four pounds have been developed. In fighting forest fires, the ranger from his post of observation can direct by radio the firefighters scattered over a vast area. The radio receiver is about the size of a cereal box, and is equipped with a single ear phone which is attached to one ear, leaving hands free.

A ship-to-shore radio system is being employed to operations of tugs within the Port of Philadelphia. Established by The Atlantic Cables Corporation, a subsidiary of the American Telephone and Telegraph Company, the system is operated in conjunction with the Bell Telephone Company in Pennsylvania.

Pilot Club Members And Guests Enjoy Picnic At Beautiful Rock Home On Yellow Leaf Creek

The Clanton Pilot Club enjoyed a delightful evening on last Sunday evening, May 23, 1937, out at the beautiful rock home of Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Thompson on Yellow Leaf Creek.

The members and their guests met at the Thompson home about five o'clock P.M. They enjoyed the evening hiking about over the beautiful hills, and up to the mill where Mr. Thompson grinds the water-ground meal that he has sold for quite a while in Clanton.

About six o'clock the members and guests gathered around a beautifully-prepared table down near the spring under the trees, and enjoyed a delicious picnic lunch, consisting of various kinds of sandwiches, salad, potato chips, pickles, cake, olives, iced tea and coco-cola.

The following members, and their guests were present:

INTEREST IS GROWING IN GRAGG FIELD

Many Planes Expected To Take Part In Program
For Dedication

If the weather permits on Saturday and Sunday, July 3rd, and 4th, Clanton will probably have one of the largest crowds here in the history of the town as these days have been definitely set for the dedication of Gragg Field, Clanton's fine airport which is almost completed.

Local enthusiasts and state airport authorities have had several consultations regarding this dedication and many outsiders have been contacted to take part in the big program.

It is understood that several private pilots of national prominence will be here and planes from the Army and Navy are expected to put on stunts and other flying performances. Many privately owned planes are expected also. More about the dedication program will be issued as it materializes.

judged as rendering the most efficient and prompt all-around service to power company employees.

It was decided at the first meeting of this association one year ago, after the death of Dr. S. R. Benedict, that such a prize be offered each year. It is significant that Dr. Johnson received the first prize awarded. The winner is determined by the records kept in the secretarial office of the chief medical department in Birmingham. The convention at Mitchell Dam will be held every year.

The Chilton County News and the many other friends of Dr. N. S. Johnson are indeed proud of the achievement he has won and the distinct recognition given him—a Clanton doctor—by Alabama Power Company. We are all proud of him and rejoice in the honor which has greeted him.

PASSING FOOTPRINTS

Of The Times

A Good Idea
Having the suggestion of an incitizen of the city, we suggest in this column last week that the streets and avenues of Clanton be numbered and so marked. James, in his usual civic-minded manner, agreed with the suggestion and he will immediately take the matter to the city council to determine the cost of this project for our city. The next step will be the numbering of business and residences here.

A Sale
Having a good idea last week, we had an idea that was not so good according to our friend, Chief of Police M. Simpson. In commenting on the fact that street tax was now payable, we stated it was one and fifty cents. Chief Simpson pointed out the fact that the tax was not a price-reduction but that the tax is still two and fifty cents. Anyway, it was a good idea, even if we were wrong.

Noticeable
May be the first day of the month and the day we wish we could get out of town, we had the usual flow of people. We don't mind the nation of the monthly bills, but the fact that the tax is still two and fifty cents. Anyway, it was a good idea, even if we were wrong.

Work
Note with a great deal of interest that the State Highway Patrol is some good work these days. There, there are times, according to some people, when these officers go to a "little too far" with their still, it is all in the line of duty. Under existing circumstances, whiskey and beer flowing freely in parts, we believe it a good idea they could, in some manner, be on the highways more in the dark hours.

Tip
Jimmy Bell, of the Murray Hardware Co., starts something, really has a good idea. Now, he prices are so low that you get a bottom. In fact, this week his bottom in the News is "bottoms

Brothers
The Teel Brothers, J. L. and J. W., of service station fame, will be the most modern service station between Birmingham and Montgomery and possibly in the state. The work has been done to their popular station here and they are in complete readiness within a few days.

Field
People of this county and elsewhere of the News, and readers of the News, are going to read a lot about Grogg at the airport, during the next few days. A great deal of interest is being shown in plans being made for the dedication program of the airport on July 3rd and 4th—Saturday and Sunday.

and then someone stops us to talk about local politics a little. Most of us are beginning to place our bets on the ground in an attempt to win the rumblings of the old party. So far, the pot doesn't seem to be a fire up yet. There is some speculation as to whether there are some candidates for local offices. We appreciate the expressions of opinion some people seem to be giving by mentioning your name with those who may be candidates. Representative from there is no doubt in our mind that office will attract a great deal of attention next year.

Dixon
After agreeing with ourselves that it is too early to be speculating about next year's politics, we cannot help but comment that we keep the name of Frank Dixon in our minds more and more these days. He is a valuable candidate for Governor. We are mentioning in emphatic in this column.

MUCH ACTIVITY AND INTEREST ON DEDICATION

Tentative Program Outlined:

Secretary, J. M. Martin.
Steering committee: M. Martin, Leo Thompson, L. E. Little.

Publicity committee: Billy Smith, chm., Gene Wyatt, co-chr.
Refreshment committee: L. E. Diefenderfer.

Other committees are to be appointed. (Continued to Back Page)

To Be Held At Clanton Baptist Church

Again the W. M. U. of Chilton and Unity Association are sponsoring a three-day Mission Study Institute for our people. Again we wish to assure you that we have planned many interesting and valuable things for the whole family, such as Chalk talks by Miss Juliette Weeks, Mr. J. F. Plainfield, our interesting Missionary from Tampa, Mr. and Mrs. Rowell Owens from Palestine, the Napier boys from China, and many others whom you will enjoy.
Now we ask you to do these three things:
1. Mark the date on the calendar, June 29, 30 and July 1, and don't let anything take place on those days that will interfere with your coming. Begin now to make plans for those three days, all three of them.
2. Plans at Sunday School to hire buses or cars to bring all who cannot have a conveyance of their own. (Continued to Back Page)

CCC Camp Engineer Discusses Terraces Furrows For Conserving Pastures

Farming on the contour is becoming a popular practice in the Soil Conservation Service demonstration area near Clanton, according to H. T. Stanley, Camp Engineer.
Properly built terraces are making this kind of farming a simple procedure, since by following the terraces each row is laid off approximately on the contour and furnishes an additional small barrier across the path of runoff water, Mr. Stanley pointed out.
Contour strip cropping, another practice being extensively used under the soil conservation program, provides a vegetative barrier of some close-growing crop between clean-tilled areas which aids in reducing the velocity of the run-off water, filters out soil, and increases absorption.
The same principles is used in pastures where contour furrows are constructed to conserve rainfall and reduce erosion. Water held by these level furrows is absorbed into the soil and promotes a better growth of grass, which serves as an additional aid in erosion control.
The whole problem of controlling erosion in this section is one of controlling run-off water, Mr. Stanley said. By retreating the steeper slopes and cultivating the gentler sloping land on the contour, the run-off water which carries away fertile soil can largely be controlled.

Mr. and Mrs. Erskine Connell, of Arkansas, are spending several days here with Mr. and Mrs. F. M. Connell, and other relatives.

Autauga County Singing Convention Had Fine Day At Billingsley Sunday

The Autauga County Singing Convention was held at the Billingsley High School auditorium last Sunday and brought to our community our third annual singing which was filled with songs of joy and afforded to our community a real inspiration in song and a real "How Do You Do."
We had the opportunity of hearing and associating with some real talent in music such as the Titus, the Tabernacle, the White City, Selma and other quartets. (The names of them I cannot remember) and many outstanding directors including our County Chairman, Mr. Boone. This convention brought to us a Mr. Collier from Eclectic who lived in our community about 37 years ago and others.

We could hardly mention anyone in particular without telling you that Mr. H. G. Carter was on hand as usual and that Judge Posel failed to be with us on account of being out of town (Judge we missed you), and also that we have to think of and thank "Pop" Myers of Montgomery who brought along something to make us hear the singing better and enjoy it. That instrument was simply marvelous. I wish I could call it by name. Anyway "Pop" can tell you what it is when he comes back next year to our annual singing.
We had representatives from Elmore, Tallapoosa, Coosa, Chilton, Shelby, Bibb, Perry, Dallas and Montgomery counties and to you ladies and gentlemen we want you to know that we were glad to have you with us and take this opportunity to invite you to come again.

Attractive Rural Homes

If we could but turn back the years and take a motor trip down one of the serpentine trails that led through the rural regions of Chilton County thirty years ago, we would realize how the appearance of the country has changed. In those days, if our memory serves us well, the average farm home was far from a thing of beauty.

Well kept lawns were almost non-existent. The average farmer's doorway was then a place littered with rubbish, overgrown with weeds, and little more than a runway for cattle. What do we see today in contrast? Many beautiful lawns, carefully cared for, with flower gardens, and shrubbery well placed. Today the average farmer is proud of the appearance of his home, and this certainly represents a change to which we give our hearty approval.

After all, why shouldn't the farm home be a place of beauty? There is no place in all the world where more pleasant home surroundings can be created than right here in Chilton County and it is a great source of satisfaction to us to see our local farmers take advantage of the opportunity offered.

Farming after all is not just a business where pork and butterfat and hay and potatoes are produced. It is a way of life; and a desirable way of life when advantage is taken of the opportunity to make the home attractive, pleasant and comfortable.

Summer Fire Hazards

The advent of each season brings special fire hazards. Now that summer is nearly here, due precaution should be taken by property owners against the dangers that follow cessation of rain, and the arrival of dry, warm days.

Some of the worst fires have started in vacant, grassy lots. Uncut, dry grass can almost explode into flame at the touch of a match or a spark. It is essential to community safety that adequate laws control the care of grass—and that these laws be enforced. Farmers and others living outside towns should be no less zealous in reducing this hazard.

During good weather, homes are cleaned and renovated. Great amounts of trash must be disposed of, often by burning. Here is still another source of destructive fire. The burning operation should take place only in a metal container of adequate size—and under constant supervision.

In addition, summer is an excellent time for using forethought to the end that our homes may be safer from fire next winter. Before fall comes, every furnace should be inspected and repairs and replacements made where necessary. A few dollars spent in this fashion now may save thousands—and, more important, save lives.

Finally, no matter what you do or where you go, be ever awake to the peril of fire. Do you like to drowse in parks and forests? Then remember that carelessness with fire has destroyed more trees than man ever cut for a useful purpose. Have you a favorite summer picnic spot? Then bear in mind that the most beautiful place nature ever devised can become an eyesore in a few short minutes or hours if fire strikes.

We heard of a place recently where there is no crime, no beggars, no jazz bands, and no relief problem. It's an uninhabited island in the Pacific.

A definition of a dictator is one who can make the workmen believe that the yoke they wear is a comfortable fit.

There isn't so much difference after all. Russians give everything above a bare living to their government and call it communism. We do the same thing and call it taxes.

Why Complain

Living costs are steadily advancing. When you go to your butcher or baker or drygoods merchant you discover that the dollar won't produce the goods or service it would deliver even one year ago.

What is your reaction when you make this discovery? Do you immediately condemn your merchant as a profiteer? If you do you are falling into a serious error.

From our contact with all of the merchants of Clanton we have learned many things about business. We are finding that merchants are getting a little more pleasure and profit out of business than they did three and four years ago. But we cannot by any stretch of the imagination see how they are profiteering.

Their actual margins of profit in most cases are as low as, or possibly even lower than they were a few years ago. Any profit they are making now comes through increasing volume of business. They are certainly not taking any advantage of the consumer.

But the costs of doing business are going up. As manufacturers' prices advance more capital is required to keep shelves stocked. New taxes are being levied. Old taxes are going up. Labor costs are on the advance. Other expenses are all showing a tendency to reach for higher levels. The average merchant has no alternative. He must either advance his prices or go out of business.

If you feel this rising cost of living, direct your criticism toward those who really are responsible. Don't blame your local merchant.

And then think of it another way. Few of us were very happy when the dollar would buy a lot of merchandise but it was mighty hard to get ahold of that dollar.

A Seasonable Warning

"And, oh, it might never have happened if somebody in the crowd had been a good swimmer and knew something about life saving tactics."

How often this remark may be made after a drowning tragedy. How frequently the news story of the accident ends with, "None in the party knew how to swim."

Most deaths by drowning are avoidable. A non-swimmer ventures beyond his depth. A mediocre swimmer over-estimates his endurance. An inexperienced canoeist ventures far out into a lake without regard to the warning threats of the weather.

As the warm days of summer lure us to swimming beaches, to pools, lakes and streams, the subject of accidental drowning begins to assume serious importance. As the weeks pass by most editors will be called upon to tell the tragic details of the loss of some promising young life, a victim of thoughtlessness and carelessness.

We offer a few words of warning in the hope that they may help deter some reckless youth or some careless adult from challenging the fates which rule beneath the placid surface of our lakes and streams.

If you are not experienced on the water never venture far from shore with a small boat or canoe. If wind rises keep your head. Put your weight in the bottom of the boat and head for shore. Do not rock the boat in fun. To play with death is never humorous.

Unless you are an old and experienced swimmer never venture far from shore or swim where you cannot easily converse with those in shallow water. Never hazard a long swim unless you are accompanied by a good swimmer with a boat. Never try to scare those who cannot swim as well as you. It does not advance your status as a gentleman or a good scout.

If you are called upon to effect a rescue exercise extreme care. Approach the victim from under water if possible. Conserve your own strength. Call and wait for help.

A spirit of frenzy will never help to meet an emergency. Above all if there are no expert swimmers in your crowd counsel caution and care. If there are, they will probably assume that responsibility for you.

The little boy who went to the grocer and then forgot what he was sent for, grew up to be a legislator.

The way for a woman to get her picture in the papers is to appear in court. It doesn't seem to make much difference. Either in London or Reno.

Recovery seems to be a strange process, a friend observes. After years of job hunting you get a job. Then strike.

Probably European nations don't pay their war debts because they figure we would squander it anyway.

D. W. Haskew

History tells us that seventy-five years ago that Napoleon the III of France fell in love with Marie Eugenie. She was of humble paragonage but she was the most beautiful woman in the world. Napoleon defied match makers and married the woman of his choice. They had health, wealth, power, fame, beauty and love. But the king and queen failed to make a go of their marriage. All this did not keep Eugenie from nagging. Jealousy arose and she accused the king of infidelity and she nagged the more. Like Job she had a right to say later on, "The thing that I greatly feared has come upon me." Reinhardt tells us that Napoleon did slip out later on his life at a side door and would spend the night where fair ladies gave him the attention that he did not have in the palace. Verily I say unto you, of all the sure fire infernal devices ever invented by all the devils in hell for destroying love nagging is the deadliest. Like the bite of the Cobra, it never fails to produce death. Better bite your tongue until it bleeds than to be guilty of nagging at your companion.

Another man who had a bright beginning in his married life was Tolstoy of Russia. At first he and his bride were as happy as two birds in a nest, but this did not last. Tolstoy became famous because of his literary productions. So famous was he that his admirers followed him around day and night and took down in short hand every word that he uttered. In addition to his fame Tolstoy and his wife had wealth, social position and children. All of these did not keep his wife from nagging at him all the time. She wanted more money, more of everything and she gave to him more and more nagging every day. She drove her husband from her and he finally died in poverty saying that he did not want his wife to come near his dead body. His wife was honest enough to say after he was gone, "I was the cause of my husband's death." Such was the price that Countess Tolstoy paid for her nagging, her fits of anger, for her complaining and hysteria. If you want a happy home, you had better give no place to nagging beneath your roof. We have two eyes and one mouth, showing us that we should see twice as much as we say.

The great tragedy in the life of Abraham Lincoln was not his murder in the booth of a theatre, but his marriage to Mary Todd. For twenty-five years Mrs. Lincoln nagged and harassed the life out of him. She was always complaining, always criticizing her husband. He was stooped shouldered, his ears stood out on the side of his head like fans, he walked awkwardly, lifting his feet straight up and down like an Indian, she even told him that his nose was not straight. In a fit of anger one day she dashed a cup of hot coffee into his face before the crowd of boarders at the table. The fits of anger and her jealousy were so foolish. She finally fretted herself into insanity and a charitable statement could be made of her that she suffered from insanity all during her married life. Did all this nagging, scolding and raging change Lincoln, or help him in any way. It made him shun the presence of his wife and the great man that he was, he had no happiness at home. Over the week ends he had rather stay in a poorly kept country hotel, than to endure the nagging and the wild outbursts of temper that he was sure to meet around his own hearth. "Many a wife, many a husband has dug the grave of happiness in the home by little digs every day."

Late one afternoon many years ago I rode up to the home of an aged couple. They had been married for forty years. They were rugged in the matter of culture, but I never was guest in a more delightful home. After many years of loving and living together each one seemed to be an individual and yet the two seemed to be one personality. These two people were still lovers and they lived for each other. They spoke to each other in endearing terms and were as devoted as bride and groom. The wife found no fault in her husband and the husband saw no faults in his wife. To be sure they had faults but these were not magnified. The old man sat in his chair, chewed his tobacco and spit into the fire and not a word was said. The old lady sat in her corner with her bonnet on her head and said "Aint and seen" and no corrections were given. Before retiring that night the husband said, "Parson, me and Bettie agreed when we married never to nag each other and we have been happy." God bless such unions, they have found the way to love and live.

Like all busy pastors I have been often called to advise in what to do when happiness has gone from married life. No one ever admits that he or she, has been guilty of nagging the other. I have found this fact in almost every case of incompatibility, one of the parties in guilty of wanting to make the other one over and in the process nagging, faultfinding, flings of temper, come into action. God have mercy on a man or a woman, who refuses to marry until perfection is found in a companion. Then may God have more mercy on any one who thinks that he has found perfection and marries that. It is wise to not try and make your partner over, but learn the simple rule of loving and

The People's Public Service Attorney
The title, "The People's Public Service Attorney," should give you some idea as to the duties of that Department.

The People's Public Service Attorney was created by the Legislature of Alabama by an Act approved July 10, 1935, as is recorded in the General Acts of the Legislature of the year 1935, on page 624-5-6. This Act declares that every person, firm, corporation, co-partnership, association, or organization who subscribes to or purchases from any public utility or transportation company, products or services of any description shall be deemed a patron of such public utility and gives to that patron the right of appeal to the courts from the decision of the Public Service Commission. It further provides that such appeal shall be governed by the rules, regulations and practices now prevailing or hereafter adopted as to appeals by a public utility.

This Act provides that a duly licensed attorney shall be appointed by the Governor of the State of Alabama, to act and to be known as the People's Public Service Attorney. This attorney shall hold office at the pleasure of the Governor and it is his duty to represent any and all patrons who shall request his services before the Public Service Commission and in any court proceedings where there is an appeal either by the patron or the utility involved. The Act further provides that this service shall be rendered without compensation on the part of the patron. The People's Public Service Attorney is required to devote his entire time to the serving of patrons of Public Utilities. He is required to maintain an office in the Capitol at Montgomery, Alabama, at all times and he must be available to any patron at any time except when he is away from his office in the performance of his duties as such an attorney.

Mr. W. M. Brunson, attorney, of Elba, Alabama was appointed by Governor Bibb Graves as the People's Public Service Attorney on September 4, 1935, and since that time, has been serving in such capacity. The services of Mr. Brunson are available to all citizens of the State who have griev-living with the one who is bone of your bone and flesh of your flesh. Happiness comes in married life by being the right person more than marrying the right person.

ances of claims against a public utility in the State of Alabama, and services are rendered without cost. The People's Public Service Attorney's department has handled hundreds of claims and complaints since November, 1935. Many differences have been adjusted and many rates have been fixed satisfactorily to the benefit to the patrons.

There are many citizens of the State who are not advised as to their rights and privileges in the Department of the People's Public Service Attorney. If you have a complaint against a public utility, write W. M. Brunson, The People's Public Service Attorney, Montgomery, Alabama, making your trouble known and asking for such relief as you are entitled to.

This new Department is provided a very valuable help to patrons. It has taken advantage of it, and citizens of the State, in all probability are unaware as to their rights in this Department. The creation of this Department is one of the most progressive steps taken by the present administration.

Methods Of Controlling Stock Parasites Described In New Booklet By Gulf Research

Methods of controlling external parasites that attack cattle, sheep, goats, horses, mules, hogs, dogs and cats, are described in a copyrighted booklet by Dr. W. A. Simanton, well known entomologist, which has just been issued by the Gulf Research and Development Company.

"Damage caused to livestock each year by external parasites is not known exactly but it is safe to assume that it runs into losses of hundreds of millions of dollars for the U. S. livestock industry," Dr. Simanton states in the booklet which is based on

DR. W. A. SIMANTON

several years of intensive study and experimentation.

"It is a well known fact that dairy cattle produce less milk when annoyed by flies, lice ticks, and other parasites. Some of these parasites are carriers of serious diseases among cattle which may result not only in reduced milk production but in loss of the stock."

Every dairyman, farmer, rancher and breeder has before him constantly the problem of keeping his cattle healthy and productive. Larger dairies and stock farmers have their own veterinarians and husbandmen to conduct regular examinations and to maintain a constant warfare against flies and insects, but the owners of smaller herds are in need of reliable information and advice on this problem. It is to this latter group that Gulf's new "Farm and Ranch Bulletin No. 1" is addressed.

The booklet describes and illustrates each of the most common and destructive external parasites, tells where and how they breed, what kind of damage they do, and how to combat them, all in simple, easy to understand language.

In addition, the new Gulf booklet gives valuable information about proper maintenance of barns and pens, as a means of discouraging the breeding of flies and insects.

Any stockman or dairyman using the information given in this new booklet can easily and inexpensively control the parasite infestation of his herd and increase his daily milk production as a result.

Free copies may be obtained by writing to the Gulf Oil Corporation, Gulf Building, Pittsburgh, Pa.

Thorsby Institute News

At the graduating exercises of Thorsby Institute Monday the following prizes were awarded: Five dollars cellence in mathematics to Fred Blank enough, Thorsby; five dollars for the outstanding pupil in extra-curricula-duct, participation in extra-curricula-dollar was awarded Mary Christ, two music prizes given; one going to outstanding work in Girls' Glee Club;

Thorsby, Ala., for outstanding work in piano. All of the above prizes were given by people living in Thorsby.

The undergraduate scholarship which gives the recipient tuition for one semester goes to Frances Conway of Thorsby. This was given by a Connecticut friend of the school, Ouida Wright of Florida, Ala., was awarded the Helen Drummond Sewall scholarship for the coming year. This is based on scholarship, department, and willingness to cooperate. The interest on $1000 pays this scholarship.

The class of 1927 at its reunion Saturday placed in the bank thirty dollars to be used as a building fund for the library of Thorsby Institute—the present quarters are far too small. Announcement of this was made Monday at the exercises.

The Senior Class also presented to the school in gifts and money the equivalent of about $125, of which $90 is to go towards making an athletic field in the rear of the school building.
Another of the gifts was stage scenery made by members of the class and Mr.
Suttle.

The class play Friday night was very well attended. About $42 was cleared.

The music recital on Saturday was a very pleasant one. The Boys' Choral Club of nine boys concluded the recital with three songs.

Saturday night a lawn party was given at the home of Dr. and Mrs.
Howard Franklin by the alumni, of which Mrs. Franklin is one, to the Senior Class. A scavenger hunt was Thorsby Baptist Church, preached a very inspiring sermon. A collection was taken for Student Aid, amounting Nashville, was very much enjoyed as the commencement speaker Monday.

There was special music by the Girls' Chorus. The diploma was presented was the first commencement in which the Seniors wore caps and gowns. They wore blue gowns and caps with gold tassels. The school colors are blue and gold.

Miss Ruth Ford, Miss Onita Klingelhoefer, and Miss Marian Fairbank expect to leave Wednesday by car, Miss Ford going with Klingelhoefer as far as Beaver, Penn. She will then go by train to Dalton, Mass. Miss Fair-bank expects to go to Pleasant Hill, Tenn., then to Jacksonville, Ill. It is with great regret that the school is not to have the services of Miss Fair-bank another year as she plans to retire. She has done such faithful work and so much of it, not only in the library but in various other ways, that she will be greatly missed. She plans to return for a part of the summer to do some work in the library and pack up her things.

probably, be in Thorsby during the summer.

Jenkins expect to leave Friday by car for LaGrange, Ga., and New England.
Their address will be Cheshire, Mass.

Christian Endeavor News

A very impressive outdoor service was held Sunday evening at 6:30 on the Thorsby Institute campus. Ruth Clarke of Montgomery, a student in Thorsby Institute, was in charge of the program. After the devotional period, she presented a program in two parts.
The first part consisted of talks by the present officers of the Christian Endeavor in which they told of the work they had attempted to do here this year. The second part included talks made by three members of the society in which they told of the way in which they hoped to adjust themselves to their home, their community when they returned. Then a discussion period followed in which the members joined in enthusiastically. Rev. Stanley asked those present to go to the church for a few moments after the meeting.
There he gave a talk which he made especially for those leaving the town and society when school is out.

"WILD BILL" CUMMINGS ESTABLISHES TWO NEW RECORDS AT INDIANAPOLIS

PUSHING A HEAVY FOOT against the accelerator of his silver racing car, "Wild Bill" Cummings, spectacular idol of the speedways, required just twelve minutes and nine seconds to break two Indianapolis Speedway records during his twenty-five mile qualification run last Saturday. Using the same Gulf No-Nox Ethyl gasoline that can be bought in service stations all over the country, Cummings made one lap at an average of 125.13 miles-per-hour which cracked the all time Indianapolis record of 124 m.p.h. set nine years ago by Leon Duray. His average of 123.1 m.p.h. for the twenty-five miles was the fastest qualifying time ever made on this track.

The oval picture is a closeup of Cummings and the other photo shows him with his car immediately after the exciting run.

J. C. EDWARDS WRITES

The following is about the planation I have ever read of the abomination of desolation by Daniel the Prophet and Lord Jesus is that which came in the place and stead of the kingdom under Christ Jesus. The of Nations was set up for the purpose claiming the right to rule the world, but had no what constitutes and constitutes the League of Nations at the signing of the organization of the Nations. The Roman Catholic hierarchy sought a place of world conference and she there began on her show to get into the dominate the League.

When that beast came upon (Rev. 17:8), immediately following the end of the World War, the beast climbed on the back of that beast has been riding since and exerting the guiding control of the League of Nations, claiming the right to vigorously attempting to rule in the place and stead of Christ, therefore the abomination that desolate is the League of Nations is labeled by organized religious political expression of God's Kingdom on earth.

Organized religion with the Catholic Hierarchy in the leading binding tie and the chief part, tuting the League of Nations, claims the right and which attempt to rule the world in the place and stead of Christ. The Roman Catholic hierarchy, the leader of organized religion is the guiding power of the Nations and she expects to even greater power and double in the very near future regarding what the combine is called.

The old harlot is riding on the back of the beast and therefore is the leading part thereof. The object of the League of Nations is to rule the world contrary to God's purpose, therefore the League of Nations is the abomination that maketh desolate.

It stands where it ought not to be and this is a warning to everyone loves God and Christ to the organization, (Math. 24:15-16-17-18-19-20-21-22-23-24-25-26-27-28-29-30-31-32-33-34-35-36-37-38-39-40-41-42-43-44-45-46-47-48-49-50-51-52-53-54-55-56-57-58-59-60-61-62-63-64-65-66-67-68-69-70-71-72-73-74-75-76-77-78-79-80-81-82-83-84-85-86-87-88-89-90-91-92-93-94-95-96-97-98-99-100).

"MY 4-H CLUB"
By Catherine Schurter
Maplesville Club

The Maplesville 4-H Club was organized in October, by Miss Grace. The officers and leaders were elected. The work was new to some of our members, but they enjoyed it. There was a large number enrolled in our club.

At our Club meetings we gave various demonstrations. The first meeting we gave a demonstration on Table Service. There were many good points given from this meeting. Some of the points were: seating at the table, table manners, and serving correctly. From other meetings, we learned how to make spoon bread, the use of milk in the diet, and about fruits. Miss Grace gave us receipts, diets for the overweight, underweight, and sick. Demonstrations were given on fruits, cereals, milk dishes and vegetables. Besides the above demonstration, we were given special project work to do at home for the summer months.

1. Each girl was asked to have a flower garden or an outdoor living room.

2. Each girl was asked to set a hen and raise chickens for a bank account.

3. Each girl was asked to grow vegetables and keep records on what was grown and how much was made.

Each meeting we were given written work to do and hand in concerning our home work following the demonstration.

When we met each month some poems were read. A paper on "Citizenship" was read at one of our meetings. We studied the classification of foods. We planned for our last meeting a picnic. A committee was organized for this.

The 4-H Club prepares the girls for future life. It gives them confidence, in themselves, and teaches the girls the things they should know. It teaches how to preside at meetings, and also gives them training in citizenship and cooperation.

The Club furnished social life among the members. It has done much in the rural communities toward bringing the people together. The girls learn to appreciate each other and to understand each other's problems better.

Following the year's program of work, we had a rally. About seven hundred attended and the program was given by the 4-H boys and girls.

"WHAT A GIRL GAINS FROM 4-H CLUB WORK"
By Helen Patterson, Verhena Club

"I can never forget the day when 4-H Club work came my way. A beautiful Monday morning, Miss Ruth Pardee organized the first 4-H Club of our school. Our project for the first year was 'Home Management,' from which I learned a great deal about the managing of the home. I knew very little of arranging furniture for certain rooms, and how to arrange flowers,

"HOW I KEEP HEALTHY"
By Mary Pearl Griffin, Enterprise Club

"My Club has meant a great deal to me by guiding me by the rules of health.

"At each club meeting since I have been a member of the 4-H Club some of the girls would give programs and demonstrations on things that referred to health. Plays were also given in connection with health.

"At one of the club meetings we gave a play on 'Social Etiquette.' It created much interest on the subject of health.

"I keep healthy by drinking my milk three times a day. I keep the daily health rules. I eat the proper kind and the proper amount of food. I wear comfortable clothing and shoes.

"By our cooking demonstrations I have learned to cook fruits and vegetables in order to keep me strong and healthy.

"I think that a girl or boy, especially those who are members of the 4-H Club should keep the daily health habits.

"You may think it is a hard proposition to undertake but if you get accustomed to them you will do them and never think about what you are doing. (Take this advice).

If you are underweight, eat plenty of leafy vegetables as they contain iron that will build up your bones and muscles. If you don't like milk and say you can't drink it, try making various milk dishes in order to get milk into your diet. Milk and eggs are two most important foods that help to keep one healthy.

"Surely if you are not healthy you cannot enter into any games of life, because you will soon get tired. You cannot enjoy much of the social life. I enter into various athletics and get plenty of exercise. I really enjoy them because I keep the Daily Health Rules and I am an 'Ideal Healthy Girl.'

Did you know that nearly two out of every three of our States consume more lumber than they raise? Alabama is one of these. It is cheaper to raise lumber, fence posts, and fuel wood at home than to buy it from others. Protect young timber.—U.S. Forest Service.

JEMISON MISSIONARY SOCIETY ENTERTAINS

On Thursday afternoon, May 27, the Methodist Missionary Society of Jemison was hostesses at a silver tea at the home of Mrs. H. H. Denon.

The living room was beautifully decorated with white flowers in tall silver vases.

Mrs. Denon, president of the society met the guests at the door and directed them to the register, presided over by Mrs. W. S. Moore. The guests registered in a dainty book of white and silver. Near the register was a silver tea pot to receive the silver offerings.

From the register the guests were led to the dining room. The lace covered table was centered with a silver bowl filled with sweet peas. At each end of the table silver candelabra held white lighted candles.

Mrs. A. C. Bratton directed the guests to the tea table, where they were served dainty chicken salad sandwiches, cookies, sandwich cakes, silver tip candy and iced tea. Mrs. Dezzie Littlejohn poured tea from a silver pot. A favor made of silver leaf maple leaves and white phlox decorated each plate.

Mrs. Susie Duffie, who was in charge of the program, presented piano numbers by Mrs. R. B. Johnson, songs by Mrs. Edward Glascock, Mrs. R. B. Johnson, and Miss Mary James Patton, violin solos by Miss Mildred Jefferson, and reading by Miss Doris Jean Smith.

Fifty guests called between four and six o'clock and were generous with their silver offerings.

Isabella Adult School Closes 2-Months Term

The adult school of Isabella, which has been meeting since March 2, closed last Thursday evening. This school has been conducted by Miss Laura Callan, Home Economics teacher at Isabella. The school has been meeting every Tuesday evening for the last three months.

Food preparation was the subject studied during the larger part of the meetings. The food elements and the planning of well balanced meals were also studied.

During the last three meetings of the class the use of the pressure cooker was studied. One night the ladies brought beans, peas and chicken to can. Miss Meta E. Grace, Home Demonstration Agent of Chilton County, gave a demonstration of how to can vegetables and meats in the pressure cooker. She showed how the use of the cooker saved time and effort in canning by insuring safety in keeping.

Thursday evening, Miss Bertha Den-

Our fifth Sunday meeting was a good one. Those who didn't get to come, don't know what a good time we had with the Lord. The people came from the different places and communities. They began to gather at 9 o'clock and by 9:30 the church would not hold the people. There were people from Helena and also from Sylacauga with us. We began our service with songs and prayer by congregation.

Then we called off our Sunday school.

The welcome address was given by Brother Henry Cleckler, and a special song was sung by the Brewer Sisters of Clanton, "Something Got Hold Of Me." Praise service was conducted by Brother Ervin Baker of Lomax. This service lasted until 11:30. A special song was rendered by the Sylacauga Sisters, then Brother Earl Brewer brought us a soul-stirring message. At the conclusion of this message a good song and prayer. Then we had dinner with a long nice table filled with good eats and we enjoyed that, too.

Service was called to order after dinner with song and prayer, and then we tried to give all the preachers a chance to speak but time would not permit it. At the morning service we had twelve preachers and eleven of them sang special songs. After noon two more preachers came in, which made a total of fourteen with us during the day to our knowing.

A wonderful time was had by all we invite everyone to come again.

Listen! There will be services next Sunday night, conducted by Brother Henry Cleckler, subject, "The Run-away Mule." Everybody come.

—Jesse Mitchell, Clerk.

Did you know that the Southern States can raise timber more rapidly than any other section of the United States, providing forest fires are kept out? Prevent forest fires.—U.S. Forest Service.

She demonstrated another use of the pressure cooker. She prepared a meal in one, showing how it saved time and effort. She explained how the housewife may put on her dinner when she is cleaning up after breakfast thus saving the time and effort of standing over the hot stove during the noon hour. The food will stay hot until noon in the pressure cooker.

During the season meeting on the use of the pressure cooker, the idea was given to the women of buying a community pressure cooker. If this can be done, one lady would be in charge of it and be responsible for whoever borrowed it. One lady of the community just recently bought a steam pressure cooker.

A prize was offered for the best attendance. Mrs. D.O. Manning won the twelve-pound sack of flour which was donated by the Clanton Cash Store.

KEYNOTERS

How many of us recall the keynote speech of Senator Steiwer at the Republican national convention in Cleveland this year? Or that of Senator Barkley at the Philadelphia gathering of Democrats?

The answers to that one fortify the fact that keynote speeches fade rapidly, then die as completely as an ancient mackerel. The only one which persevered through a campaign was delivered at the Democratic convention of 1916 and later events made a farce out of it.

That keynote was delivered in favor of Woodrow Wilson; the man who voiced it was Martin H. Glynn of New York.

Like the "Three Long Years" which Republicans emphasized in 1936, Glynn's keynote beat the tom-toms for Wilson's achievements in avoiding war in 1914, 1915 and 1916, ending each recital with the assertion: "But we didn't go to war."

Seizing upon the then catchy phrase, which set convention delegates on their ears, the Democratic national committee made the race on the slogan of: "He i-...pt us out of war." Being barely lasted to recall Wilson, for two months after beginning his second term the United States was in the war.

Success of a keynote in this particular instance was made at least partially possible by the pussyfooting tactics of the rival party. They didn't want to discuss the war. But the American voters were talking about nothing else!

One other keynote has found a place in our permanent political history. It was delivered by imposing Albert J. Beveridge of Indiana at the Bull Moose convention of 1912 which brought Theodore Roosevelt back into the spotlight.

Said Beveridge: "The people's government has been usurped by the invisible government, and the people's government must be given back to the people again."

Even today, with history recording a Bull Moose defeat, there is something about this well-turned phrase which accounts for the perpetuity which has fallen to it.

HOME DEMONSTRATION CLUB OF ISABELLA MET MAY 21ST

The Isabella Home Demonstration Club met May 21 at the Home Economics Department of the Isabella School. The meeting was called to order by the president, Mrs. Span Jones. The song "Is Everybody Happy" was then sung by the club members. Miss Laura Callan had charge of the program, which was on the Farm Bureau. Miss Callan told what the Farm Bureau is. Mrs. Fred Oden then told some of the things that the Farm Bureau does and the progress that it is making.

The meeting was then turned over to Miss Grace who told about the club rally which was held May 29. Plans were then made for the members of the club to go.

Some of the ladies brought different kinds of breads. Miss Grace judged these breads and discussed the characteristics of good rolls, biscuits and muffins. The ladies who won prizes for having the best breads were: Mrs. Fred Oden, biscuit; Mrs. D.O. Manning, muffins; and Mrs. Span Jones, rolls.

Plans were made for the next meeting to be held in June. Mrs. Gracie Foshee was voted to have charge of the program which will be on salads.

J.C. EDWARDS WRITES ABOUT ETERNITY

Editor, Chilton County News:

Would you mind giving a little space for a few words about eternity and a war that now is going on, (Gen. 3:15)? It says: "I will put enmity between thee and the woman, and between thy seed and her seed; it shall bruise thy head, and thou shalt bruise his heel."

This means a war between those on the Devil's side and those on God's side which war is now on in the earth and will continue until Jehovah takes a hand and by Christ Jesus fights the battle of the great day of God Almighty, (Josh. 10:1-5). Of what took place when the conspirators had heard of the action of the Gibeonites shows exactly what comes to pass upon modern day Gibeonites or the great multitudes who have forsaken Satan's organization and placed themselves under the command of Christ Jesus, the head of Jehovah's organization.

Those who faithfully proclaim the Kingdom message whether they be of the remnant or of the great multitude are now hated by all those of Satan's organization. The Roman Catholic Hierarchy is the most bitter. The battle is not yours but God's (2 Chron. 20:15). Jehovah caused illustrations to be made as to the manner of executing his wrath of vengeance upon the enemy. Mount Sier appears to picture the religious and Moab and Ammon, the political and commercial elements. These three enemies of Israel joined in an assault upon God's chosen people and when the attack began the Lord set an ambush against them. Then they destroyed each other in this wise.

The children of Ammon and Moab stood up against the inhabitants of Mount Sier until to slay and destroy them and when they had made an end of the inhabitants of Sier everyone helped to destroy another, (verses 19-23). This is supported by other scriptures that the Lord will first destroy the religious hypocritical element and then will follow the destruction of all other enemies in the latter part of the battle of the great day of almighty. It is His fight.

—J.C. EDWARDS.

RECORD SOIL CONSERVING CROPS PLANTED LAST YEAR

Auburn, Ala.—Farmers of Alabama joined with other southern farmers in 1936 in planting the largest acreage to soil-conserving crops on record.

Approximately 1,500,000 acres in Alabama, Arkansas, Florida, Georgia, Louisiana, Mississippi, Oklahoma, South Carolina, and Texas, were planted to soil-conserving crops by producers, participating in the Agricultural Adjustment program. Throughout the United States conservation practices were followed on 53,000,000 acres. During the year about 20,000,000 acres of land in the country were diverted from soil-depleting crops to soil-conserving crops or practices. Alabama farmers diverted 990,000 acres, of which 950,000 were cotton acres.

"Most of the lands that have been diverted from cotton and other soil-depleting crops under our program have been planted to soil-conserving crops with subsequent general improvement," says Cully A. Cobb, director, Southern Division, in a report to P.O. Davis, director, Alabama Extension Service.

By taking advantage of the soil-conservation program farmers can qualify for payments sufficient to bear part of the expense of diversification and at the same time help secure a fair price for the soil-depleting crops they produce," Cobb explains.

W. B. Oliver Receives Reward For Citizenship

WILLIAM B. OLIVER

Former Congressman Given Honor For Service To This Community

Tuscaloosa, Ala.—William B. (Buck) Oliver, for 22 years a representative in Congress from the Sixth District, was awarded the Civitan Club's annual plaque as the outstanding citizen of the community during the past year.

The plaque was presented to Mr. Oliver by Chester Walker, judge of probate, at the Citizenship Banquet held at the Senior High School with more than 200 persons present. Mr. Oliver became the fourth recipient of the annual award, his three predecessors, Dr. George H. Denny, Senator Hayse Tucker and Superintendent H. G. Dowling, occupying seats of honor at the affair last night.

Oliver Voices Thanks

In accepting the award, Mr. Oliver, who played the major role in obtaining Oliver Dam and a number of other federal projects for Tuscaloosa, expressed his deep thanks, but minimized "all material things which will fade away in time." In a speech in which the religious note predominated, he called on the nation "to get nearer to God" and declared that "no people will ever have peace unless they have faith in God."

Judge Walker, in presenting the plaque to Mr. Oliver, paid a warm tribute to the former congressman as a "man with a conscience" and as a "builder of citizenship." Judge Walker briefly reviewed the long and fruitful congressional career of Mr. Oliver.

Dr. Lang Speaks

Dr. George Lang, professor of philosophy at the University, made the principal speech of the evening, a stirring address on citizenship in democracy. Dr. Lang, in discussing the government of imperialism, autocracy and democracy, defended democracy as "the finest form of government in which an individual can achieve his maturity." He denied the charge of critics that a democratic government magnifies the mediocre and depresses the intelligent.

He described as a "political tragedy" the fact that only 20 per cent of those of age cast their ballots in Alabama, and warned that the people have no reason to criticize the Legislature or Congress if they persist in "running away from their political responsibilities so as to promote their own private welfare."

Dr. Lang lauded President Roosevelt as a man who will be recognized in the years to come as the greatest American democrat since Thomas Jefferson.

ed later and those already selected are at work now on the program of arrangements which will bring some of the most outstanding flyers of the country to Clanton on Saturday and Sunday, July 3rd and 4th.

Alabama Has Highest Motor Vehicle Tax

Special additional state and federal automotive taxes paid by the average Alabama motorist in 1936 are estimated to have cost him $83.98, which represents in assessment of 39.58 per cent on $212, the estimated value of the average motor vehicle. This is the highest motor vehicle tax cost of all States and almost twice the average of the United States. ($47.05).

These estimates were reported today by Mr. Earl M. Hearne, Secretary of the Alabama Petroleum Industries Committee, who said they were based upon official automotive tax reports of the U. S. Bureau of Public Roads. Mr. Hearne itemized the average Alabama motorist's 1936 automotive tax bill as follows:

State Gasoline Tax — $48.69
State Lubricating Oil Tax — .28
Local City & County Gas Taxes — .62
State Registration & Misc. Fees — 14.51
Federal Taxes on Gasoline, Lubricants, Federal Taxes on Gasoline, Lubricants, Tires, Tubes, Parts, Accessories, etc. — 13.82

TOTAL — $83.98

"Special additional automotive taxes, paid by the motor vehicle owner in addition to all the regular taxes he pays, are becoming large items of cost," said Mr. Hearne. "A tax of 39.58 per cent on property worth $212 is pretty heavy taxation."

"Our State and local gasoline taxes totalled originally 2 cents a gallon, but now is 7 cents, plus a 2 cents per gallon oil tax. The duplicating federal levy makes us pay two taxes, and in some instances three and four, on the same gallon of gasoline, that same of the cost of federal automotive taxes."

"It is time to think of the welfare of the motorist, to decide whether his money is to go largely for taxes, or to go into trade. As one of the largest retail buyers in this State, his purchases account for one-fifth of all retail sales thereby creating widespread employment. Obviously, if his money goes into taxes, it cannot be spent for things he otherwise would buy. Prominent among ways in which excessive tax costs can be lowered is the repeal of the duplicating federal gasoline tax and of the federal tax on lubricants."

more we hear about the coming of Gragg Field, Clanton's airport, the more we are looking forward to the dates of July 3rd when all Chilton County will be on hand to see this project carried out. And, it is only a time off.

Policy Mayor of a city, any city, all power and authority to preserve court and administer harshness to law offenders brought him, our own Mayor C. Fenn as other methods for meeting etc. There is a certain ameness in his voice as the elders on Monday morning court, even though the person charges fees perfectly at ease at the desk with the Mayor facing him before the stand in the court room. We must admit the method used by Mayor Jones is a Mayor must also look to the interest of the citizens of his as well as to his duty. Mayor has that ability to do both. It build a city.

Light Fantastic hope that we will not be too far from our own clean street and to the high school auditorium. Wednesday night of next week we expect to see pupils of Elizabeth Carter Garrett's dancing school as just what can be learned the following of rhythmic music. The dance recital promises to be a success.

ing Some were made to feel rather good other day when a citizen of a neighboring town in this county, called to see us bringing a nice order to printing. And, we were glad to hear him say that he thoroughly enjoyed with this column when we there is entirely too much printing done in the cities for local less concern when the same quality and price can be had right in Clanton. Your local print shops need and your support—everything else is equal.

Too Soon mentioned last week that a citizen mentioned to us that perhaps our patrolmen were needed on the highways more after dark. We had often those lines when we learned our own patrolmen are often roads on duty up into the wee hours of the mornings. Boys, we live in to watch for you more after dark.

ALLEGED BEER SELLERS ARE UNDER BONDS

Attorney-General's Ruling Puts Officers To Work In Dry Counties

At least four persons who are alleged to have been selling state stamped beer in Chilton County will have something to think about, according to reports from the sheriff's office this week. Four were arrested last week-end for having on the premises of a business establishment a quantity of beer.

Although this beverage carried the state alcoholic stamp, the attorney-general recently ruled that if beer or whiskey was found in any quantity in a place of business it was prima facie evidence that it was being offered for sale.

All persons facing these charges are operating business establishments in this county. It was understood Tuesday that only one of the four had requested trial by jury so far. All immediately made the necessary bond upon their arrests. Sheriff Hardy stated.

Cooperating Farmers Paid $9,891,506.18

Over $10,000,000 will be paid Alabama farmers for cooperating in the AAA program during 1936, said Walter L. KEY BROTHERS SCHEDULED TO BE HERE JULY 3

Endurance Record Holders To Take Part In Program At Gragg Field

As the program for the dedication of Clanton's airport takes on more definite shape, the outlook for two of the biggest days Clanton has ever seen seem brighter and brighter, according to Leo Thompson who is chairman of the program committee.

The Key Brothers, famed for their record of endurance flying and re-fueling ability while in mid-air, have informed Mr. Thompson that they expect to be on hand for the dedication on July 3rd and 4th. They will no doubt bring the famous airplane, "Ole Miss" that made history some time ago.

This alone will be worth the while of anyone to come to Clanton. However, this feature is only one of the many that have already been arranged for. It was announced definitely this week that the squadron of the Alabama National Guard would be on hand to take part in the maneuvers of the dedication. A photograph of these ships can be found on another page in this issue.

Editor Is Freed In Contempt Citation

Akron Paper's Head Upheld In Use Of Jury Names

Akron, June 7.—A contempt-of-court citation and a $50 fine imposed by Common Pleas Judge Walter B. Wanamaker on Walter Morrow, editor of The Akron Times-Press, have been dismissed by the Ninth District Court of Appeals. The three appellate judges were unanimous.

Mr. Morrow defied an order of Judge Wanamaker banning publication of names of grand jury members, names of witnesses summoned and the cases under consideration. The editor told reporters to use the grand jury information, ignoring the order.

The Court of Appeals referred to the order as "censorship" and said it "prohibited the exercise of rights freely exercised by individuals and newspapers, without question, for generations—rights supposed to be protected by the Constitution and law of the land."

Dixon-Graves Alliance Just A Myth

A few days ago we took recognition of a rumor which has been circulated throughout Alabama to the effect that Major Frank Dixon, runnerup in the 1934 gubernatorial campaign, has joined forces with the Graves administration for 1938.

The rumor was so persistent and so far out of line with all the things for which Dixon stood in 1934 that it could no longer be ignored, especially by those newspapers which fought for Dixon, as we did, in the last campaign. We helped to air it and we have taken the pains to investigate it.

We have been thorough. We have gone to the high and low, on both sides of the political fence and we find it utterly without foundation. We find three things; that (1) the Graves administration, as a unit, has not settled on any candidate; that (2) the Dixon forces have made no overtures whatsoever to the Graves crowd, nor have they given them the slightest reason to believe that their support will be asked or expected; that (3) this rumor of a Dixon-Graves alliance is being deliberately spread throughout Alabama in an effort to weaken Dixon enough to give another prospective candidate a chance to be elected.

Taking these things in order, we find that Governor Graves himself is giving practically no thought to the next governor's race. His own ambition is said to be a federal job and he knows the folly of getting himself into a personal political entanglement—especially if his man should lose.

As for the five men whose names are closely identified with Graves, as his foremost lieutenants:

Dr. L. N. Duncan is said to look with favor on Bob Goode.

Gaston Scott is swinging towards Chauncey Sparks.

Pitt Tyson Maner is preparing to beat his breast for Frank Boykin.

Horace Wilkerson is closely allied with Hugh Locke.

While Henry Long, state tax commissioner has not yet made a choice.

In the lower strata, the Graves followers are equally confused, some for one man, some for another—most of them hoping that they can pick the winner and keep their noses in the public trough.

We went to Major Dixon, but he smilingly refused to be quoted other than to say: "We have some mighty slick political schemers in Alabama—good at setting traps. You find the source of the story and you will most likely find the motive behind it."

We found the source of the story with ease. We found that it has been circulated from one end of the state to the other by two of the smartest political manipulators in Alabama with the plain intention of tearing down the great advantage which political wiseacres admit Major Dixon now holds over the prospective field.

They desire to tar Dixon with the Graves stick, knowing that it would wean from Dixon thousands of admirers who are at outs with the Graves administration. Failing in this, they hope to jockey Major Dixon into the fatal position of launching a premature campaign through denying rumors.

Frank Dixon showed his political sagacity in the last campaign, and he has learned more in the meantime. These two gentlemen "poison spreaders" may be amazed when he refuses to fall into their trap. He has not announced his candidacy, and he is wise when he refuses to let himself be placed on the defensive a full year before the primary. The veriest political tyro knows the danger of a poorly-timed campaign, and especially a campaign which allows yourself to be set up as a target while all the other candidates remain hidden in the trenches.

Frank Dixon had a set of principles

Opportunities For Recreation

Now is the time for all good men, and women too, who realize the vital connection between good health and happy living, to take advantage of the opportunities the season offers for outdoor recreation.

It is not necessary to go to some famous resort at the beach or in the mountains for the relaxation and exercise that will put the glow of health in your cheeks and give you a new zest for life. Right here in Clanton and in the beautiful country which surrounds our community, there are opportunities in abundance for pleasant outdoor recreation.

There are delightful spots for picnic parties, there are pleasant lanes and side-roads over which a good hike is a joy that cannot easily be measured, there are drives which provide new beauty to jaded eyes and jangled nerves. Take advantage of these, and the present summer season may then become a happy page in the history of your life.

Our own beautiful natural landscape offers a gorgeous opportunity for the recreation you want and need. Make the best of it.

No Damage To Your Dignity

The youth who believes his college or high school diploma elevates him above the ranks of day workers; who feels that his dignity would suffer a serious shock if he should be compelled to don a pair of overalls and earn his living in the field or at the forge is suffering from a paucity of understanding and confusion of values.

These young people may now be well reminded of the fact that George Washington was not above the work of a surveyor, a wilderness guide and a farmer. It is said that his happiest days were spent on the soil of his Virginia estate. He was a forerunner in the science of agriculture, and his intense interest was devoted to stock breeding and the development of higher producing grains.

And what about our industrial giants. They did not feel superior to the humble tasks in the shop or foundry in the days before they began the climb to wealth and influence. Henry Ford, Walter Chrysler, Charles M. Schwab, and many others, the list is too long to repeat here, did not feel that they injured their dignity when they returned from the shop covered with grease and dirt after a day of heavy labor.

We have long believed that the man who works with his hands had an opportunity equal to that offered to any white collar worker to apply brains and intelligence to the task before him. The machinist who erects a complicated piece of mechanism or turns a shaft to a fraction of a thousandth of an inch is fully as important in the order of things as the accountant who brings his books into balance. We often feel that he has an even better opportunity to win an enviable place in the social and economic order under which we live.

Don't worry, therefore, if you find no genteel work which permits you to wear a well pressed business suit and occupy a place behind a mahogany desk. Your dignity among those who think will not suffer if you accept a job at ordinary labor.

Popularity of trailers is going forward by leaps and bounds.

Strange, isn't it, but the fellow who can't save anything thinks his trouble is due to the fact that he isn't getting enough and that he is spending too much.

An English statesman now admits that America won the war. Evidently the time is not remote when they will want us over there again.

The strip tease in our opinion is merely applying the profit motive to Peeping Tom's idea.

Let's hope for a return of the old days when the fellow who couldn't save anything figured he was spending too much and not getting too little.

which won to him an army of admirers in 1934. In that campaign, he showed his contempt for political corruption, chicanery and cheapness. He refused to "stoop to win."

It is too early for Frank Dixon or anyone else to start a campaign for the governorship. It is also too early for this newspaper to commit itself to the support of any candidate, but it is never too early, nor too late, for us to expose cheap trickery of the sort leveled at a clean cut, square shooter like Frank Dixon.

We pass this information to the friends of Dixon with full confidence that time will prove it all.—Tuscaloosa News.

MORALE ECHOES

D. W. Haskew

One day a letter was placed in my post office box that had been opened. Some one had made the mistake of misdirecting the letter and then some one had opened it without looking at the address. After the envelope had been torn open, the one doing that saw his mistake and wrote on the envelope "Opened By Mistake." Then it was placed in my box. Many a time have I seen mouths that were opened by mistake. At just any provocation our mouths are inclined to fly wide open. Without thinking we say just anything that rushes to the tip of our tongue. When unkind words are spoken, when foolish things are said, when nonsense is talked, it can be truly said, "The mouth was opened by mistake." We should think twice before we speak once. Think of how many times your mouth has been opened by mistake.

While nearing an inland village we saw a truck to one side of the highway. It was being unloaded of garbage that it had gathered from the streets of the little city. Without being told I knew that the driver of that truck had gone up and down the streets of the city and had gathered up the garbage from many a can and had brought it beyond the city limits to dump it out as filthy rubbish. When we meet and talk with some folks we are impressed with the idea that they are nothing more than gatherers of human garbage and that they are making out of us their dumping ground. Many a woman gads about in her community each day to gather up the garbage of unholy, unkind thinking and then comes home at night to dump it into the mind of her family. In like manner many a man is doing the same thing during the day and at night he unloads his truck of garbage on his family. Blessed is that man, that woman, who gathers flowers during the day and then carries them home to their families at night.

Two boys on a farm were tugging with a little bull yearling, trying to get him into a barn. One pulled at his head, the other was pulling on his tail. The yearling refused to move. The animal knew what he wanted and the boys knew what they wanted. The calf wanted a tit in his mouth and the boys wanted the yearling in the barn. Each contended for what he wanted. The mother saw what was taking place and with her common sense she knew how to solve the problem. She advanced to the head of the calf and stuck her finger into the mouth of the stubborn rascal. At once he limbered up and followed the finger right into the barn. The boys and the Bull got what each one wanted and no harm was done. Human beings have a way of wanting certain things. It is often the case that they want the opposite. Then there is stubbornness and balking. The great man in human relationships is that fellow who can see what each wants and then give it to them. We have a habit of doing things because we want to. When people pull and drag us about against our will and against our wants, like the little bull, we get contrary. Folks will follow a leader who learns the art of giving to them what they want.

The sporting spirit flows through my veins in the warm days of Spring. The rod and the reel calls for me to hunt the fishing places. The pole and line and the bait call me to the bank of the creek. I have observed that when I am preparing to go fishing that I never think about the kind of bait that I can relish. Personally I like strawberries and cake, but I am not much interested in a nice juicy worm for my own pleasure. Still I do not carry strawberries fishing, for the simple reason that fish do not care for berries. They like worms and so I fill my can with them. When I go after fish, if you want to be a leader of folks you must learn what they want. If they like worms, then bait your hook with worms. Any one who wishes to lead people must learn the art of getting himself out of the way. What makes a man a politician is learning how to bait his hook. He puts his ear to the ground and listens to the wants of folks. Then he baits his hook with their wants and they follow him.

I have made two observations, one of a sheep, the other of a hog. When a sheep falls into a mud hole, he will bleat and call for help to get him out. When the hog falls into a mud hole he is at home and will object to being lifted out, or run out. I have made two observations of human beings. When an individual is trying to live right if he falls into sin, he knows himself to be out of place and he repents and calls for help to get out. When a man has lost his ideals and cares nothing for honor and right, he is in his element when he falls into sin and he cares nothing about help. You can locate the hog nature in folks by watching them when they are in the ways of sin. Any one who has a sheep nature and desire, will feel himself out of place when he falls and he will struggle to get out of the mud, but if he is dominated by a hog nature when he falls into a mud hole he is at home there and will revel in his wickedness. There is hope for any one as long as he has enough sheep nature to make him unhappy in a mud puddle.

Clanton

as Vernon Waldrop Becomes Bride Of Alton n Connatser In Home Ceremony Of Beauty

Following was taken from a Rock C. newspaper of recent date. It is of wide interest in this town where Mr. Connatser is well known.

Setting of rare beauty Miss Waldrop became the bride of Alton Connatser of Clanton, Ala., yesterday afternoon at the home of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Waldrop, on East Main Street. R.C. Granberry, of Gaffney, S.C., officiated in the use of the service.

The altar she was awaited by the groom, who was attended by Waldrop, brother of the bride, and a train of Mendelssohn's Wedding March sounded as the ceremony proceeded and as relatives and friends of the family who witnessed the lovely service surged forward to congratulate the young couple.

Reception

Immediately after the ceremony of the bridal party and guests were invited into the dining room for a formal reception and cake-cutting.

Green and white were also the dining room, where many white flowers with white taper. The beautiful three tiered cake used only white and silver. The cake was white, its third tier with a dainty bride couple in a flower-decked arch centered on a silver. Sprays of flowers banked the first tier and streamers by which the bride drew favors completed the cake. Other appointments were a formal reception and cake-cutting.

silver bowl of white double larkspur. During the reception, Mr. and Mrs. Connatser slipped away on a wedding trip after which they will go to Tuscaloosa, Ala., where Mr. Connatser will attend summer school at the University of Alabama.

Mrs. Connatser, the only daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Waldrop, is descended from pioneer settlers of the Piedmont section of South Carolina. On her maternal side she is the granddaughter of R. G. Smith and the late Mrs. Smith, of Fort Mill. Her paternal ancestry is through the Waldrop family and its wide connections of Greenwood and Greenwood county. She is a graduate of Limestone College in the class of 1937, and has a host of friends who will regret that marriage takes her from this state for residence.

Mr. Connatser's paternal ancestry is that of the Connatser family of Knoxville, Tenn., and his maternal the Massey family of Alabama and Tennessee. He is a graduate of the University of Alabama and holds a teaching position in the Birmingham school system. This summer he will complete the academic requirements at the University summer school for his Master of Arts degree. After their wedding trip and after summer school at Tuscaloosa, Mr. and Mrs. Connatser will be at home to their friends at Siluria, Ala., near Birmingham.

Beauty Hints

By Jane Heath

It's going to be a gay and giddy summer with everyone of us wearing brilliant colors, vivid stripes and prints. If we aren't careful all this brilliance will overshadow our features, so that we will be known for our costume and not for our faces.

Don't despair, there is always a way to overcome most things. In this particular case you'll have to highlight your features as you've never done before.

Your eyes will have to shine like stars, your eyelashes will have to be long and gloriously curled upwards. That is where that handy little eyelash curler comes in! It takes only 30 seconds and the effect is amazing!

To make your eyelashes and your brows luxurious and silky, use Kurlene and put it on every single night before you go to bed. Use it on those days when you go to mascaraless—it gives your eyelids that youthful shiny look.

As for eyeshadow, you'll find yourself using it in the daytime as you never did before. The colors will be fascinating blues, from aqua to royal. Greens will be of great importance too, particularly spring-green. You'll want to use silver or gold for evening glamour. Be sure to paint it on with an eye-beauty brush so you achieve a smooth, lovely line. Don't smear on Shadette with your finger.

Don't forget to keep your eyebrows trim and neat, the easiest way to do it is to use tweezers. Last night's mascara that is flake-proof and water-proof, you'll find a delight for warm weather use and for swimming. It will keep your eyes glamorous at all times.

Two Bodies Found In Alabama River

Two Corpses Recovered By Searchers Believed Those Of Negroes

Two bodies, one so badly decomposed that positive racial identification was impossible but believed to be that of a negro, were recovered from the Alabama river above Selma Sunday.

Only the skeleton remained of a body found, lodged against the shore at Gardner's Island Sunday by a searching party on its second trip there, a first trip having been made Saturday afternoon after a party of negroes seeking the body of J.D. Goodwin, young Tyler negro who was drowned Wednesday at Durand's Bend, had reported sighting the body near the island and believed it to be that of a white man. The party of searchers going out from here, and including deputies Moseley and Casey and Coroner A.D. Brislis, was unable to reach the spot on their first trip to the island but returning there early Sunday morning they found the skeleton.

Certain features established by the coroner led to the belief that it was that of a negro. Burial took place on the island.

Goodwin's body also was recovered Sunday near the spot where he sank while swimming with companions.

BEST AGES FOR BREEDING HEIFERS GIVEN BY BURNS

Auburn, Ala.—"Calf club heifers should not be bred until they are from 15 to 18 months of age," advises F. W. Burns, livestock specialist of the Alabama Extension Service in giving club members a few suggestions on how to make their calves produce 300 pounds or more of butterfat per year.

"Be sure and breed them to the best bull in the county, because you cannot afford to pay $50 to $75 for a good heifer and then breed her to a scrub bull," he writes club members of the State.

When on good pastures, bred heifers will need 4 or 5 pounds of a good grain mixture. Equal parts of cracked corn, ground oats, and wheat bran is an excellent mixture for this purpose.

"Be sure to provide all the roughage in the form of good legume hay," he concludes.

—o-o-o—

If skim milk is available, heifers should be fed 1 to 2 gallons each per day until they are 6 or 8 months old, advises F. W. Burns, livestock specialist of the Alabama Extension Service.

Easy to Teach Baby Calves to Eat Dry Food

Task Is Simple After Calf Gets First Taste.

Dairymen who visit the Purina Experimental Farm always remark on the well developed calves raised at the farm and question the men in the calf barn how calves can be taught to eat dry feed at such an early age.

"Getting the calf started on dry feed is really a simple task and does not require a great deal of time," says W. B. Arendt, calf raising authority with Purina Mills. "When the calf is four days old the feeder should allow it to suck his finger for a few moments to start the flow of saliva in the calf's mouth. While his fingers are moist the feeder should dip them into calf startena and again let the calf suck them. Thus the calf gets his first taste of dry feed."

"Drop Feed Into Calf's Mouth"

"The next step is to hold the calf's head up, open its mouth and put a little calf startena on its tongue. The calf starts chewing immediately and is then well started on dry feed."

The feeder should drop a little dry feed into the calf's mouth.

Arendt says. "Finally, the calf's head should be guided into the feeder containing the calf startena, so that thereafter it will know where to find dry feed."

No Milk After First Month

By the time the calf is a month old no milk at all is needed because the calf's complete needs are taken care of by the calf startena, milk, water, and a little salt. This eliminates all bothersome work with scraps and bucket feeding, and actually gives the calf a more complete and nourishing feed than milk alone can supply. Milk is about 87 per cent water which means that a gallon of milk weighing eight and two-thirds pounds contains little more than a pound of solid feed. A growing calf needs more solid feed than can possibly be consumed in milk alone. Feeding calf startena, hay, water, and salt along with milk the first four weeks, and then cutting out milk completely and putting the calf entirely on dry feed, eliminates the danger of scours caused by feeding too much milk.

Calf Raising Book Available

A vest pocket book on calf raising is available, without charge, at any feed store where Purina Chows are sold. It answers such questions as what the baby calf needs; when to start dry feed; how long milk should be fed; costs; money-maker heifers; scours and deboning; and preparing calves for the show ring.

7,500 Feed Dealers Display Baby Chicks

So great have been the strides in poultry raising in recent years that even workers in the various phases of the industry are amazed at the results. Several years ago, Purina Mills, seeking to give visual evidence to poultry raisers of what modern feed will do for chicks, distributed two thousand small electric brooders to chicken and feed dealers. Merchants handling Purina feeds and concentrates were urged to place in these brooders twenty or twenty-five chicks, and to keep them before the public as actual evidence of what good feed will do for a chick.

Displays Now Nation-Wide

The idea became popular last one season. In the succeeding years it has spread rapidly, so that today in almost any town, city, or village where a Purina dealer is located, the public is invited to see for themselves the profitable results of good feeding. These demonstrations have been an active factor in convincing people that good chicks, good management, and good feeding will bring in extra profits.

This season, seventy-five hundred Purina feed dealers all over the United States are displaying brooders filled with growing chicks. These chicks are being fed on startena, fortified with puritene. Above the brooders are charts showing average government standard weights for chicks at various ages during the first six weeks as compared with the startena fed chicks on display. The chick raising demonstrations now under way in Purina dealers' stores tell an interesting and profitable story to the modern poultry raiser. These 1937 chicks present an outright case in favor of modern management, care, and feeding.

Community Honors Steel Man

HAPPY RELATIONS in business, civic and industrial life are not impossible, George M. Verity, chairman of the board of The American Rolling Mill Company, said in accepting a bronze plaque presented him by citizens of Middletown, O., on the occasion of his seventy-second birthday.

The plaque was given the veteran steel executive on behalf of the community by a committee, representing labor, industry and business and professional men, in appreciation of his "example and encouragement in the development of a higher type of citizenship in our community."

"It has been assumed—but wrongly so—that happy relationships in business, civic and industrial life are impossible," Mr. Verity said. "You, as friends and neighbors and associates, have taken up the battle-cries that we want peaceful, happy communities, and you have in your hearts approved such business and community life. That is the reason it has come about."

The plaque was designed by Mr. Verity's daughter, Charles R. Hook, a talented artist.

Last year citizens of Middletown declared a community holiday to honor Mr. Verity in his leadership in community development.

moved farm conditions in the vicinity are of the Soil Conservation Service near Clanton are becoming more and more apparent in the "discussed" appearance of the land, and to James H. Wood, Camp superintendent.

fields for the first time last year were clothed in green cover, such as close-growing legumes, small grains, to protect the soil from winter rains. The legumes, under this spring, will add to fertility of the soil and increase yields of following crops.

the approach of hot weather, the legumes and grasses are taking their part of the job of erosion control and soil building as the newly planned cropping system goes into a systematic rotation, Mr. Wood pointed out.

and stripes are coming into style in the vegetative covering of the land and more farmers are adopting the strips of close-growing cover between strips of clean-tilled land to increase the effectiveness of their plan in protecting the soil against erosion.

ly built terraces, winding cultivated fields; broad green strips, which conduct surplus water out of the fields and the farmer with an additional hay; young trees and permanent crops growing on the steeper slopes are adding to the attractiveness of the general appearance of the land as well as protecting the soil against erosion, Mr. Wood said.

you have to take a laxative occasionally, you can on Black-Draught.

A GOOD LAXATIVE

HOGS DO BETTER WHEN KEPT CLEAN

Greater Growth, Fewer Losses, and Bigger Profits Result.

With humans, cleanliness is next to godliness. With hogs, cleanliness is the backbone of profits. Big dividends in the form of healthier hogs, fewer losses, greater growth, and minimum disease and infection are the results of keeping hogs clean.

That the hog is naturally a dirty animal is disputed by most hog raisers and swine specialists. The old expression "to try as a pig," they say, should be blotted out by hog raisers rather than on the animals themselves. Hogs, without the help of their owners, are unable to clean up their surroundings and consequently are forced to accept filthy environments.

Clean Hogs Pay Profit

The responsibility of keeping hog quarters clean rests on hog raisers. Like all other animals, hogs do better in clean surroundings. A few simple rules of sanitation and cleanliness go a long way in producing money-making hogs.

"Sanitary precautions should be taken before pigs are farrowed," says Ellis Hamel, swine specialist with Purina Mills. "A few days before farrowing the farrowing pen should be thoroughly cleaned. All loose dirt and dust from the ceiling and walls should be brushed down, and all old litter and manure scraped off the floor. The entire farrowing house should be thoroughly disinfected with a solution of one half pint of creso-fec in about ten quarts of water. Watering and feeding equipment should be scrubbed in the same solution several times over, but should be particularly well cleaned before pigs arrive.

Straw Makes Good Bedding

"The best bedding is made from clean, dry straw covering the floor of the farrowing pen. If the straw is finely chopped and scattered as a thin carpet on the floor, little pigs will not get tangled up in it.

"But cleaning just the pen is only half the story in successful hog sanitation," Hamel points out. "The sow herself must be cleaned for the occasion. Several days in advance of farrowing time, the sow should be brought into the farrowing pen and thoroughly washed with soap and water. Disease germs and worm eggs may escape soap and water," Hamel says, "so to play doubly safe, the entire body should be disinfected by a thorough scrubbing with a third of a pint of creso-fec in ten quarts of water.

"These precautions insure young pigs a clean start in life and eliminate a great deal of the danger of infection. The possibility of pigs getting worms from the sow is also prevented.

Move Pigs to Pasture

On a warm sunny day about two weeks after farrowing, the sow and pigs should be moved to a pasture that has not been recently used for hogs. If it is necessary to use the same field year after year, the ground should be plowed in the fall and planted to a good pasture crop," the Purina swine specialist advises.

"The sow and pigs should be kept on clean pasture for at least the first four months and for the entire feeding period if possible.

"At five to six weeks, pigs should be vaccinated for hog cholera. An ounce of precaution is worth more than a pound of cure in this disease since cholera when it strikes in the hog lot, takes both pounds and profits.

"Pigs bothered by lice should be confined in a small pen and sprinkled with a solution of one pint of creso-fec, 3 pints of kerosene and 4 pints of crank-oil in 4 gallons of water. Lice don't stand a chance against this mixture," Hamel says.

Pigules Destroy Worms

"Worms, arch enemies of the hog pen, should be fought with pigules containing oil of chenopodium, tetrachloroethylene, and a vegetable poison. Pigules containing these powerful medicinal drugs may be had from the local merchant handling Purina feeds.

"Pigs should be wormed when they are about 10 weeks old. A patented water gun and jaw spreader for administering the pigules are kept by the local Purina feed merchant. Worming costs less than one pound of pork per pig when done in this way," Hamel points out, "and makes a whole of a difference in the way pigs grow. Worms rob hogs of feed and poison their systems, thereby cutting down gains, and in some cases causing death. Feeding hogs is a profitable business. Feeding worms isn't.

Big piglets are the money-makers of the flock. They lay more eggs and bigger eggs, and they have a stamina that carries them through without breakdown. Knotty little piglets "go to pieces" because they lack the strength and weight to keep up production. From the time chicks are taken off starting feed until they are ready to go into the laying house is the "development" period that determines what kind of layers they will be. It requires a balanced growing feed like Purina Growena to build profitable pullets in those fourteen weeks.

In any discussion of poultry diseases two things must be remembered: First, that poultry is hardy and healthy if given a chance; second, it is much easier to prevent disease and control parasites before they get started than afterwards. Disease organisms and parasites must be kept at a minimum if poultry is to pay a profit. An effective means of keeping poultry houses clean is by periodically disinfecting with creso-fec, an inexpensive and powerful germ killer, obtainable where Purina feeds are sold.

Unscrambling Hens and Chicks

The vicer, awarding prizes at the local dog show, was scandalized at the costumes worn by some members of the younger fair sex.

"Look at that youngster," said he; "the one with cropped hair, the cigarette and breeches, holding two pups. Is it a boy or a girl?"

"A girl," said his companion. "She's my daughter."

Local Health Department Tells Of Disease Known As Trench Mouth Showing Up Lately

During the past few years a disease known as trench mouth, or Vincent's infection, has broken out in certain communities. The World War emphasized how highly communicable the disease could become, when so many soldiers in trenches contracted the ailment. The common name of the disease, trench mouth, arose from that situation.

In "trench mouth" the mucous membrane of the gums, cheeks, tongue and tonsils becomes inflamed and ulcerated areas appear. A grayish membrane is formed in the mouth and throat at the site of the ulcerated areas. When this grayish membrane is removed, there is much bleeding. Saliva increases. The teeth become loose, and are sore. It is impossible to chew food. The gums are often spongy and the mouth may be very red. In severe cases the patient has a temperature, swelling of the glands, a peculiar unpleasant sweetish odor of the breath, constipation, headache, nausea and other physical disturbances.

The majority of cases are among those of early adult or middle age, probably due to the fact that they are exposed to infection in their work or surroundings. Children may have it also, but less often than adults.

Direct contact of a well person with one suffering from the infection is one mode of transmission. It has also been traced to unsterilized eating utensils, carelessly washed drinking glasses at soda fountains, face towels, common drinking cups, swimming pools, personal articles, and kissing. Sometimes the spread of the disease has been among persons living in crowded quarters where there is little or practically no fresh air and sunshine. A person may carry the organism and transmit it to another person, but with no harm to himself.

There are preventatives which every one should observe, especially in this age when we all stop at any restaurant or soda fountain that we happen to.

A CUSTOMER WRITES

Recently Vice President T.K. Jackson received a letter from a Mobile customer, which, in part, read as follows:

"Some months ago there appeared in the local press an advertisement of the Alabama Power Company telling of its wonderful service to the public in resuscitating apparently drowned persons. It fascinated me to such an extent that I have read and will continue to read every advertisement of the Company when I can find it.

"The advertisement appearing in the Mobile Register of this date" is so fact-revealing and so intensely interesting, I wonder that the Company does not see that it reaches every possible consumer, in Alabama and adjoining states . . .

"He refers to the advertisement entitled "You Who Were Children in 1918 May Not Remember This."

"How much are your peaches?" "Penny each, lady." "I'll have one, please." "Givin' a party?"

Georgia has followed the example of Alabama in establishing a milk control board to stabilize milk prices in the State.

Hints for Homemakers

SELF-STARTING electric clock regulated by alternating current have a definite appeal to the modern woman. These clocks are not only punctual time keepers but they come in such a variety of colors and styles as to make possible to choose a clock that harmonize with the decorative scheme of any room in the home. Beautifully tinted glass clock and charming timepieces in wood and plastic play an important part in room design. The Telechron motorized clock illustrated, for example, has been especially designed to appeal to the feminine whim. It is styled of glass with mirror finish, imitation "Cristal" fit metal makes the dial which is encircled with black etched-in numerals. In blue, amber or crystal this particular clock makes a charming timepiece for the boudoir or feminine sitting room.

Did you know that by selecting window shades in a continuous color tone in which a room is decorated the room achieves a feeling of greater spaciousness? Larkspur blue shades—and incidentally Larkspur blue is one of the newest and smartest colors to make its appearance in cloth window shades—have been chosen to create just this effect in a room papered in pale blue where the woodwork is painted a contrasting darker blue.

This new Larkspur blue window shade has been used with great effectiveness in bathroom and bedrooms. The color is a particularly good one for bedrooms as it keeps out the glare of the summer sun and makes for cool restful sleep.

Where Your Tax Tokens Go

The sales tax law enacted by the 1937 special session of the Legislature provides for the distribution of proceeds from the operation of law as follows: Replacement in school fund of the three-mill commuted levy for schools and in the fund of the one-mill levy for State Pensions and the two and one-half mills for general purposes lost by funds by the exemption of roads. After this has been taken three-fourths of the remainder is to the credit of the Special Trust Fund. One-fourth of the receipts is to go to the All counties share equally in the funds set aside for the county. The other half is distributed on a pro rata basis.

For March and part of April the counties have been distributed by the Special Trust Fund is being sent to the counties for the use of the receipts. The earmarks the counties part funds derived from this source for welfare, health, and extension. It does not specify how the funds are to be divided among these three. This is left to the County Court or Board of Revenue. It may be used for exclusive full-time health service, in cooperation with the State Board of Health and the Federal Government; or for welfare in cooperation with the Department of Public Welfare, the Federal Government; and extension service in cooperation with the Alabama Extension Service and the Federal Government.

For the month of March and part of April the counties are getting their share $78,602.49.

The remaining $28,038.70 was received from various sources. The total expenditures for the year were $19,314.88, leaving a net profit to the State from this Department of $736,121.18.

The sale of fertilizer tags by the Department of Agriculture last year amounted to $141,570.00. It will be much larger this year.

The salaries and wages of employees of the Department of Agriculture amounted to $189,227.15 last year.

New Dealer Here Tells History Of Tire Company Founded By Civil War Surgeon

More than sixty-seven years of rubber product manufacture during which it expanded from a small enterprise to one of America's outstanding corporations is the history of the B. F. Goodrich Company, according to Popwell Gulf Station which was recently appointed a tire dealer to represent Goodrich in Clanton.

"The Goodrich Company was founded in Akron, Ohio, its present location by Dr. B. F. Goodrich, a Civil War surgeon," they say.

"From a modest beginning during which production consisted of wringer rolls, belting, carriage tires and fire hose, the Goodrich Company has grown until today the product list embraces more than 32,000 rubber articles."

"Goodrich was the first rubber company west of the Allegheny Mountains and was America's first tire manufacturing concern. As a pioneer in the industry, Goodrich constantly developed new products, new methods of manufacture and new compounds many of which have been adopted by the entire rubber industry."

Spanish War Vets

Will Gather At

Selma June 13th

The fifteenth annual Convention of the Department of Alabama, United States War Veterans, will be held in Selma, Alabama on June 13, 14, and 15.

This organization, composed of veterans of the Spanish-American War, the Philippine Insurrection and the Boxer Rebellion in China, has departments in each of the forty-eight States, Alaska and other territories and several foreign countries.

There are nineteen camps in Alabama. The commander of the Department for 1936-1937 is Dr. H. F. Paddock of Cullman, who soldiered in both Cuba and the Philippine Islands and was twice wounded in action. The Senior Vice Department Commander is G. F. Flournoy of Mobile and the Junior Vice-Department Commander is
C. L. Doggerell of Montgomery.

Mrs. Hugh Kilpatrick of Bessemer is President of the Department Auxiliary; Mrs. Panzy Bezena is Senior Vice-President, and Mrs. Anna Har-kins of Mobile is Junior Vice President.

Headquarters for both Auxiliaries and Veterans will be open Sunday, June 13th at 9:00 A.M. at the Hotel Albert. Sunday afternoon there will be a band concert by the High School

Band of Selma, after which the city officials and other veteran and patriotic organizations will formally welcome the Encampment to the city.

The ladies of the Auxiliary will be tendered a reception at the Albert Hotel at 5:00 P.M. Sunday afternoon by the Auxiliaries of patriotic organizations of Selma.

At 8:00 P.M. on Sunday the annual Memorial Exercises of the Department will be held. This meeting is open to the public and is very impressive.
Monday at 7:30 A.M. the Past Presidents breakfast will be given by the Department President. This is an annual event at all Department meetings.

At 9:00 A.M. on Monday both organizations, auxiliary and veterans, go into business sessions, to adjourn at 12:30 P.M. for an immense barbecue given by the City of Selma, after which the veterans and their families will be given rides to Cahaba, Hob-son's home at Greensboro, the old breastworks and other places of interest. Baseball and the movies will also be on the entertainment program.

A feature of the annual Encampment is the reunion of several of the regiments which served during the Spanish-American War, among which are the 1st, 2nd, and 3rd Alabama Volunteer Infantry and the 5th United States Volunteer Infantry (Immunes). At each of these reunions men meet who served during the War and have not seen each other since.

At 9 P.M. on Monday the annual ball of the Convention will be given in the new city Armory. This dance is mostly for the younger members of the Auxiliaries, but the veterans themselves together with their wives often trip the light fantastic until the wee hours of the morning.

On Tuesday at 9 A.M. both the Auxiliary and veteran organizations go into their business meetings to elect officers for the ensuing year, and to select a place of meeting for the next annual encampment, after which adjournment sine die is had.

Did you know that Alabama uses one billion, seven hundred million board feet of timber every year? That Alabama raises only 800 million board feet a year? That Alabama could raise between five and six billion board feet annually? Conserve the forests.—U.S.
Forest Service.

Rule of Chivalry
The new play was a failure. After the first act many left the theatre; at the end of the second, most of the others started out. A cynical critic, as he arose from his seat, raised a restraining hand.

"Wait!" he loudly commanded, "Women and children first."

That's What I Think

Saul M. Goldstein

Whether the present national business boom is or is not founded on sound needs and healthy development is a question which only the future can decide. Whether or not prosperity is here to stay depends altogether on which side of the fence you stand.

It is a usually accepted fact, however that the South as a whole, and Alabama and Mississippi even more so in particular, get the shock of a depression sooner and keep it longer than other sections of the country. If you want to find out why, look deep and see what differentiates our region from those others.

Our territory is predominantly agricultural. When you depend on the products of the soil for your living, you must labor long before you reap your crop; and assuming that it is successful, you receive your remuneration for all the long months in one lump sum; and that lump sum must last you until another successful crop brings in another lump sum.

The uncertainty of the success of a crop, the human inability to predict the career of prices, makes the farmer hesitant to spend his hard-earned money; and prosperity depends on the free unhampered flow of money spent for goods.

On the other hand, folks who work for wages paid at regular intervals are less careful of their pennies. The knowledge that next Saturday night will bring another sum equal to that received last Saturday night adds impetus to the desire to purchase and use the needs, comforts and luxuries of today's civilization. This free spending in turn whirls the wheels of prosperity.

In simple terms, the cure for slow seasons in this and similar sections of the country is: More weekly payrolls.
Other sections have not been slow to see this sign, and other states in the South have made definite campaigns for greater industrialization.

Chilton County in particular should realize the importance of this fact, for fact it is. Primarily an agricultural community, it exhibits all the signs and symbols of such a section. Let harvest time arrive, and Clanton's wide streets and spacious sidewalks are too narrow to accommodate the flood of County and neighboring-county residents here to spend their money; but between harvest seasons, the activity of the county's main center is that which might be expected of a town of 3,500 souls.

Industry does not come begging for location. Too many sites are begging for industry, and if Chilton County wakes up to its own vital needs and wants industry, it must go out and communities. That fight cannot be can succeed only through organized

Come Club girls, let's give them a hand. The Annual County-wide Rally was held Saturday, May 29, 1937 at the High School. This is the big occasion of the year and is always looked forward to with pleasure. Mrs. Anna Phalin, County Council President presided, and the meeting was opened with the song "America." Judge J. Lee Smith welcomed the club women and their guests and assured them that he and his Board of Commissioners were behind their program of work 100 per cent. Bob Goode, from the State Department of Agriculture was the outstanding speaker of the afternoon. His address was on the "Possibilities of Alabama and the South and the part the Rural people will play in this development." This was one of the finest speeches ever given our rural women. Miss Helen Kennedy, Foods Specialist of Alabama Polytechnic Institute, stressed leadership development among the club women and after asking the leaders that each and every one put forth every effort in making their club a success, which will help to strengthen their club and themselves individually. She awarded each of the leaders having attended three-fourths of the leadership schools and assisting with these demonstrations back in their own clubs a Leadership Certificate and the leaders who won these certificates were as follows: Mrs. Harry Anderson, Mrs. Russell

SHILOH HOME COMING

The program began at ten o'clock with a song, "There is a Fountain." Prayer was led by the pastor, Rev. W. P. Lowery. The devotional was given by Mr. J. I. Bice. Response by W. J. Billingsley. Then there was a few minutes for open discussion in which Mr. Charlie Huett, Rev. Manning and Rev. T. W. Billingsley took part. The Rev. Paul Oden delivered a wonderful sermon at 11 o'clock, closing with a song, "Heartbroken For Jesus." An offering was taken for Rev. Oden. This brought us to the noon hour, which was enjoyed by all.

Opening song in the afternoon was "How Beautiful Heaven Must Be," led by Mr. Clem Billingsley. Prayer was offered by Mr. Charlie Huett. The following sang songs each: Mr. Sam Henley, Raymond Brigrance, Dave Melton, Melvin Devaughn, William Lee Henley and Miss Gladys Popwell. The Fairview Quartet sang one song. The closing song was led by Mr. Clem Billingsley. Closing prayer was by Rev. W. P. Lowery. Pianists for the afternoon were Miss Gladys Popwell and Mrs. Carrie Davenport.

THOMAS DIXON HALL

The death angel visited the home of Mrs. T. D. Hall on Friday morning, May 28, and bore her loving husband away. He was feeling well that morning and went out to work in his garden early. He came back in a few minutes and complained with his heart. Within an hour God saw fit to take him away. He was only sick a few minutes.

Mr. Hall was an ardent christian and a most loyal citizen to his community. He was greatly loved by all who knew him. He never made friends to lose, but always kept them.

Mr. Hall came to Birmingham from Louisiana while a young man. There he met Miss Dee Youngblood, whom he later married. They lived there for several years, then moved to Chilton County where they lived about sixteen years. He always made a host of friends wherever he lived. Mr. and Mrs. Hall had been married thirty-one years, one month and twenty-eight days.

It had often been said that no one had ever visited in a more pleasant Christian home, than this home was. Mr. Hall and his family moved to Sylacauga in 1933. There he made lots of friends. He leaves a widow, four children, Mrs. Greene Dorminey, Misses Justene and Zalia Hall, all of Sylacauga; one son, Elbert Hall of Ensley; three grandchildren, Olene and Emogene Dorminey and Shirley Hall; two sisters, Mrs. D. J. Atkinson and Mrs. D. G. Dungan, both of Ensley; one brother, Mr. Fred Hall of Pratt City; a mother, Mrs. W. W. Hall who is in the T.C.I. Hospital, and a host of friends and relatives to mourn his death.

Funeral services were held at Jenson, Union Grove cemetery with Service Funeral Home in charge. Rev. Lowery conducted the services, assisted by Rev. Carroll and Rev. Berk-

CAN YOU TELL WHICH IS THE WATER HEATER?

TALKING about placing a water heater in a kitchen suggests to some people that you are recommending that their kitchens be "uglified" instead of beautified. But look at the above illustration! Nothing ugly about that kitchen, is there? And yet the water heater is there—next to the range. Where space permits, many women prefer to have the new square, flat-top type of electric water heater, because built table-high, it gives that much more working surface. (Oh, no, the electric water heater doesn't heat-up the kitchen!)

Electric water heaters are also made in the round type which cost a little less than the square type.

Don't Let Anybody Confuse You About the Operating Cost of the NEW TYPE Electric Water Heaters

Eight or 10 years ago electric water heaters were expensive to operate, because manufacturers had not discovered the BEST way to build them. But today, an electric water heater for the average family of 4 persons uses only 300 kilowatt hours a month, which come to you at the lowest rate.

While You Are Buying An Electric Range Ask About An Electric Water Heater Too!

You'll be surprised at the low price and easy terms. Any of the following makes of electric ranges or water heaters will give you satisfaction:

- M-W—MONARCH—GENERAL ELECTRIC—PEMCO
- MARION—L&H—STANDARD—ENTERPRISE—REX
- GRAYBAR—CRAWFORD—ESTATE—KELVINATOR
- PROSPERITY—WESTINGHOUSE—UNIVERSAL
- SEPCO—HOTPOINT—HOFFMAN—HERCULES

SIDE-DRESS COTTON BEFORE SQUARES APPEAR

The soil is composed of three elements that are essential for vigorous growth of the cotton plant. These elements are nitrogen, phosphate and potash. Nitrogen is found commercially in complete fertilizers and in Chilean Nitrate of Soda.

To insure study crop growth in cotton that has been fertilized with a small amount of nitrate it is essential that it be side-dressed with nitrate of soda in order for a profitable yield to be made. Experiments conducted at the Auburn Experiment Station have cash crop for this section makes it proven this fact. Cotton being the basic very important that we make each acre yield its very best. Hence it is necessary that cotton receives at least 30 to 40 pounds of nitrogen per acre. In order to apply this amount of nitrogen it is necessary to apply 400 pounds of 3-8-5 fertilizer at planting and then side-dress with an additional 20 to 30 pounds of nitrogen. This can be applied by side-dressing with 80 to 125 pounds of Chilean Nitrate of Soda per acre.

For a good view of the contrast of cotton receiving 150 pounds of Chilean Nitrate as side-dressing compared with cotton receiving no nitrate visit the Chilean nitrate demonstration sponsored by the Isabella Chapter of Future Farmers. The demonstration is located about one-half mile east of the Isabella school on the farm of Mr. Span Jones.

HOW'RE YOU BETTING

THOSE loose old days, before betting was considered illegal, brought considerable wagering on the results of presidential campaigns—the amounts at stake frequently totalling millions.

It was back in that era, 1908 to be specific, that brokers making book on the election actually recorded 60,000 to 1 against the chances of one of the candidates. The long shot entry was Eugene V. Debs, perennial Socialist candidate.

That same campaign demonstrated that the professional odds-layers knew considerable about their business. In September, 1908, Taft was the 2 to 1 favorite over Bryan; by October the odds lengthened to 3 to 1 and on election day Taft's chances were rated at 8 to 1, with few takers.

Anyone who believes the professional wagers are infallible should thumb back the record to 1916 when it is estimated from five to ten million dollars changed hand on the result.

Wilson and Hughes were the leading contenders, with Wilson on the inside track because he was up for re-election. In September, 1916, the financial district in New York was betting 2 to 1 on Hughes. In October the odds were 10 to 7 and even money was placed the day of election.

Closeness of the contest, in doubt for days until California returned moved into the Wilson column, perhaps was excuse for the error in judgment by the financiers.

They may be wrong again in 1936 but perhaps it would be well for readers to confine themselves to freak bets, if any at all are made. Perhaps the most ingenious of these occurred in that same 1916 election.

A man, apparently three sheets in the wind, strolled into a commissioner's office, bet $5 he could name 20 states Wilson would carry. He then bet $10 he could name ten additional states. Then he offered $20 he could name still another 10 states.

"And now," he announced, "here's $50 says I can name eight states more for Wilson."

When the rush to take him subsided, the better, miraculously sobered, named his states. The "pitch" of his game was that he reserved eight states of the solid South as the block on which the $50 wager was laid. He could not fail to win at least $15!

MUCH INTEREST BEING SHOWN IN INSTITUTE

Interesting Article Tells Of Preparations Now Being Made For Meet

We are sure that all Christians are anxious that we make a success of any thing so far reaching in its consequences for good as the Mission Institute. It is far too large a thing for a few people to manage. If it is to be what it ought to be, every good person in Chilton County will have a part in it. First, we will all be praying. Second, we will attend ourselves, if possible, make plans for others to attend. We will be especially careful that our pastor comes. We will plan ways for all our children and young people to come, because the speakers and teachers are unusually fine. Mr. Roswell Owens, missionary from Palestine, is one of the most interesting speakers. Mr. Chas. Leek, who teaches the Adults the book on Palestine, has visited the country, and is one of the best teachers to be had anywhere. Dr. Plainfield, who teaches the other (Continued to Back Page)

Baptist Revival Is Well Underway Here

Dr. Flemming is one of the very best preachers that Clanton has ever had the privilege of hearing. Fred Bond is a singer that knows how to sing and also how to get the people to sing. There is a fine spirit in the meeting and those who are missing the services are missing a real treat in spiritual things.

The pastor urges upon the public not to miss these services. You are most urgently invited to come. We want you to come and hear. It will do you good.

SUPERVISOR CLAIMS THAT COURT NOT COOPERATING

Judge Smith Refutes Charges Made By Road Supervisor; Arledge Says Order For Timber Not Given Attention

Letters, said to have been delivered from the Commissioners Court to the Road Supervisor and from the Road Supervisor to the Commissioners Court, copies of which were furnished the News for publication, tend to show to the public just what is going on regarding the road working in this county.

Following is a letter written by Judge J. Lee Smith to Road Supervisor T. J. Arledge, relative to charges made last week by Mr. Arledge that the Court was responsible for the bad condition of the roads:

"Clanton, Ala., June 10, 1937.

"Hon. T. J. Arledge,

"Road Supervisor,

"Clanton, Ala.

"Dear Sir:

"I have noticed an article in The Union-Banner of June 10th, headed,

"Supervisor Blames Court For Bad

Road Conditions." I, being a member of the Court of County Commissioners, wish to deny the charge as to being responsible for the bad conditions of our roads.

"I have approved all resolutions

made by your office except your request in 1936 for approximately $3000

worth of machinery. You knew at the time that there were not sufficient funds in the treasury to pay for same.

"I believe that you will agree with me that I have given you and your office

100 per cent cooperation in the working and maintenance of roads, and inasmuch as you have attempted to place

the blame on the Commissioners Court

for the bad road conditions, I am sure you will agree with me that the citizens and taxpayers of our county should be properly informed as to who is responsible.

"Therefore, I feel that it will only be fair to all concerned that we have a meeting of the taxpayers of our county at an early date at the court house, so that each side can present

his side of the question. I am willing for the citizens to place the blame

where it belongs, inasmuch as they pay

the operating expenses of our county.

I shall be glad to explain to the people

the deplorable condition, and the great handicap the Commissioners Court is laboring under in connection with the roads of our county.

"Please advise me if it is agreeable with you to have the meeting and at what date you can be present.

"Yours very truly,

"J. LEE SMITH,

"Chairman of Commissioners Court."

From the Supervisor: "June 14, 1937

"Hon. Commissioners Court,

"Chilton County, Alabama.

"City.

"Gentlemen:

"Receipt is acknowledged of a letter from your Chairman, dated June 12,

1937, enclosing copy of a resolution to the effect that you have discharged from duty as clerk and office manager for this department, Mr. A. D. Maddox effective June 30, 1937.

"I fully appreciate your consideration and "cooperation" and take this to be another childish effort to disturb and attempt to destroy the morale of the road organization and thereby contribute to cause strife and bitterness among the people of Chilton County.

"In this connection I will state that the road department will continue to operate so long as funds have been appropriated by you in full accord with the law establishing this department, to carry on the work as may come under this office.

"That A. D. Maddox will remain at his post as clerk and office manager until he has been removed by this office; that T. C. Sims will remain and continue his duties as district foreman or supervisor of District No. 1 and No. 2; that H. D. Traywick will continue his duties in Dist. No. 2 and No.

3, and J. T. Thompson will remain and continue to carry-on in his duties in Dist. No. 4, regardless of the fact that you have withheld payment of claims for wages earned by them during the month of May, 1937—wages justly earned and the most of which was expenditure by them for gasoline and upkeep of their personally owned auto-ton County. Also, those others, L. F.

claims for wages and truck hire in work for the County, will continue with the organization until advised by this office their services are no longer needed.

"And, in order that they may have sufficient compensation that they may live and devote their time and energy to the good of the County roads, the road supervisor, I personally, will see been declared unlawful.

"Respectfully,

"Thomas J. Arledge, Supervisor."

Letters, said to have been delivered from the Commissioners Court to the Road Supervisor and from the Road Supervisor to the Commissioners Court, copies of which were furnished the News for publication, tend to show to the public just what is going on regarding the road working in this county.

Following is a letter written by Judge J. Lee Smith to Road Supervisor T. J. Arledge, relative to charges made last week by Mr. Arledge that the Court was responsible for the bad condition of the roads:

"Clanton, Ala., June 10, 1937.

"Hon. T. J. Arledge,

"Road Supervisor,

"Clanton, Ala.

"Dear Sir:

"I have noticed an article in The Union-Banner of June 10th, headed,

"Supervisor Blames Court For Bad

Road Conditions." I, being a member of the Court of County Commissioners, wish to deny the charge as to

being responsible for the bad conditions of our roads.

"I have approved all resolutions

made by your office except your request in 1936 for approximately $3000

worth of machinery. You knew at the time that there were not sufficient

funds in the treasury to pay for same.

"I believe that you will agree with me

that I have given you and your office

100 per cent cooperation in the working and maintenance of roads, and inasmuch as you have attempted to place

the blame on the Commissioners Court

for the bad road conditions, I am sure you will agree with me that the

should be properly informed as to who is responsible.

"Therefore, I feel that it will only

be fair to all concerned that we have a meeting of the taxpayers of our county at an early date at the court house, so that each side can present

his side of the question. I am willing

for the citizens to place the blame

where it belongs, inasmuch as they pay

the operating expenses of our county.

I shall be glad to explain to the people

the deplorable condition, and the great handicap the Commissioners Court is laboring under in connection with the roads of our county.

"Please advise me if it is agreeable with you to have the meeting and at

what date you can be present.

"Yours very truly,

"J. LEE SMITH,

"Chairman of Commissioners Court."

Have Faith In The Future

Those who vision only a dismal future for our nation because of the industrial strife and confusion of the present, would derive much comfort out of a knowledge of the past. Consider how mankind has struggled from the very dawn of history in the slow and irregular course toward a higher civilization.

Think back of the age when civilization was almost extinguished in the deluge of barbarian invasions out of the east. Read how all Christianity once trembled before the onward surge of the Moslem fanatics. Turn a few more pages and read of the bloody religious wars when the torture chamber became an effective means to win converts to any faith.

Then come closer to our modern times, and study accounts of that greatest of social upheavals when mobs of France sought to destroy everything that reminded them of the older culture, and the guillotine in Paris was busy day after day eliminating those with even a tinge of aristocratic blood in their veins.

We may even turn to our own country for a few examples. After victory in the revolution, the new nation found itself with government. Rebellion and sedition were rife. Anarchy threatened the future.

Then came our own war between the states, which was followed not many years later by desperate strife between labor and capital. We have all heard about the Haymarket riot in Chicago and the bloody Homestead strike in Pennsylvania. Each depression has been followed by labor unrest. Strikes accompanied by rioting and violence are not new in our country nor in any other industrial nation in the world.

And yet each are marks of stage of advancement. There is something almost cosmic about these periodic waves of discontent. After each period of violence and struggle differences between groups and classes were adjusted. Common sense and moderation again assumed a place in the adjustment of industrial relations. And an era, better than the best that went before came into existence.

With minor variations history always repeats. Have we reason to assume that it will not repeat again? It seems logical and reasonable to us that we are not many months from another era of industrial peace and adjustment, and an era of unparalleled prosperity and progress.

The Charity Racket

Some of the worst rackets of the day parade under the name of charity. On our desk recently there appeared a circular telling of strenuous campaigns in communities of an institute for the blind which puts throughout the nation. Investigation discloses that more than 80 per cent of all funds collected go into the pockets of the promoters.

This particular case is not the exception. It is almost the rule. With the exception of a few great institutions that are nationally known and recognized for their good work, most charitable enterprises are merely schemes by means of which glib talking promoters take advantage of the best of human motives and intentions.

It is a safe rule to confine your charities to worthy enterprises here in Chilton County, or to those few national institutions whose work is so well recognized that there can be no argument.

Whenever some plausible scheme is advanced for the aid of the blind, the crippled or the destitute, withhold your support long enough to make an investigation. The promoter whose scheme is not honest will quickly cease to molest you.

Casualty reports lead to the conclusion that every day is a week end holiday in Spain.

Notice To Space Grafters

The typical editor's desk has become the subject of many an amusing joke. We never complain vigorously when some good friend disposed to utter "wise cracks" twists us about the accumulation of papers that usually occupy its surface.

But we feel disposed, at this time, to offer a few remarks in the way of self defense. There is a cause for this which we will gladly demonstrate to anyone who may feel interested in the subject.

Scarcely a mail arrives at our desk that is not literally jammed with stunts to secure free publicity. If we were given to statistics, we would probably calculate how many times the free publicity space graft schemes would encircle the globe in a given period. But sufficient to say the volume of such mail, at this time, reaches proportions beyond calculation.

Local citizens are not serious offenders. Occasionally someone brings us a ready prepared story which parades under the title of news for the purpose of boosting some product or some service. But most of our friends realize that newspaper space cannot be produced without cost, and they are willing to pay us a fair price for what they desire or need.

The guilty ones are organizations located outside our community which are today making elaborate efforts to secure advertising without paying for it. Some of these space grafters are cleverly concealed under alleged findings of institutes and associations. Others are brazen attempts to secure something of value for nothing. A large volume of these bluffs, we are sorry to explain, come from government agencies which are seeking to justify their existence. Like most editors who find plenty of work to do in each twelve or sixteen hour day, we permit some of this material to accumulate on our desk while we await an opportunity to sort the grain from the chaff. Finally a moment of exasperation arrives. Then we hurl it all promiscuously into our spacious waste basket.

But we have now made a resolution. It will not comfort the space grafters in the least, but it may serve to bring us some peace of mind. We are going to consign it to the discard upon arrival. Those who desire to make use of our newspaper space will receive a rate card immediately upon application.

Watch Fire Hazards

Have you ever watched flames dance through a grain field or sweep across a sun dried meadow? Have you ever seen roadsides burned black, fence posts smoldering, and orchards blackened? Have you paused at such a scene long enough to note that probably the fire was started by a cigarette tossed from some passing car?

If such a sight has never greeted you, this editorial will be of little interest. But many of our rural readers will recognize immediately that we are talking about something which is of vital concern to them as the summer advances.

All the fires due to carelessness do not occur in forest areas. During recent drought seasons every farmer in Chilton county has had good reason to fear the spread of fire from the highway along his property. Much damage has been the result, an dall of it could have been avoided if motorists would exercise a little care.

As the summer season advances the fire hazard throughout the country increases. Sometimes these little grass of marsh fires sweep on into valuable woodlots or reach into the farmyard where much valuable property is jeopardized.

The next time you are thoughtlessly disposed to flip a lighted cigar or cigarette from your car window, consider the loss and havoc your thoughtless act may cause. Then use the ash tray with which your car should be equipped.

Cause And Effect

It is not merely a coincidence that successful business people in large cities and small towns like Clanton alike are steady and consistent advertisers. Their experience has proved that it pays to keep their names and their merchandise and service in the public eye.

The fellow who doubts the efficacy of advertising because he tried it once and it didn't work, should look about him. He will invariably find that those who have made the most conspicuous success in business are also those who make the most effective use of printers ink and newspaper space.

"Thanks a million" is a poor expression of gratitude in this age of billion dollar appropriations.

"The Man Who-o-o"

ALLISON OF IOWA
FIRST honors for "coming close" to the presidency, although he is minus even the standing of an "also-ran," must be awarded William B. Allison of Iowa.

Allison's doubtful honor came to him at the Republican convention of 1888, which ended finally with the nomination of Benjamin Harrison, later elected President.

Delegates to the convention had balloted ineffectually for several candidates when a four-hour recess was taken to permit a counting of noses. Delegates from New York, Illinois, California, Wisconsin, Pennsylvania, Massachusetts, Iowa and Missouri, went into conference.

Representatives from each of these states were practically empowered to act for the entire state delegation. Senator Hoar of Massachusetts spoke in favor of Allison, and Iowa after several of the candidates had been discussed. It was finally agreed that Allison's fitness for the high job was apparent and that he should get the support of the conferring states.

New York state had been represented, however, by only three of its four delegates-at-large. The three who acted on Allison failed to reckon with their absent colleague, Chauncey Depew, the rapier-worded banquetter.

Depew was president of a railroad at the time. He had been supported as a candidate but was forced to withdraw because of firm belt opposition to the railroad. Much of the opposition to him had come from Iowa and so he turned thumbs-down on Allison.

Subsequent events proved that if Depew had not balked, the conferring states would have nominated Allison and he would have been elected President in place of Harrison.

The ironical part of this personal catastrophe is that Allison's stature measured fully as high as the job demanded. He had moved out to Iowa as a young lawyer, served eight years in the lower house of congress and, beginning in 1872, was a United States senator from the Tall Corn state for an unbroken period of 35 years.

WHO LIKES HIS JOB?

Several instances have come to notice recently which seem to discredit the old theory that in order to be a success one should follow a congenial line of work.

It is said that the late Joseph Conrad the most famous of recent authors of sea stories, hated the sea and detested writing.

O. O. McIntyre tells of a leading and successful New York theatrical producer who has a deep antipathy to actors and actresses and despises the theater; also of a man who has made a fortune as a florist, but who does not care for flowers and is nauseated by their perfume.

Now comes Irving S. Cobb, one of America's most famous writers and humorists, with the statement that he utterly dislikes writing, but keeps at it because he doesn't want to be a loafer, or words to that effect.

The average newspaper man will tell you that he loathes the eternal grind, but somehow you could not drive him out of it. Many musicians suffer mental torture when before an audience—and so it goes.

These may be exceptions to the rule, but the lesson to be drawn from the instances noted is that determination to do good work will develop ability and bring success, whether one likes his job or not.

EMPLOYMENT OF WOMEN

It may be surprising to some to be told that for nearly 100 years after the Declaration of Independence no women were employed by the government, but such is the fact, according to a statement by the president of the Civil Service Commission.

The first law permitting the employment of women as clerks in Federal government offices was passed in 1870. Today more than 25,000 women are employed in such offices in Washington alone, while nearly 60,000 or more are employed outside of the capital city.

Women are being appointed to such government positions as bacteriologist, biologist, botanist, chemist, economist, educationalist, patent examiner, pharmacologist, physicist, statistician, zoologist and technologists of various kinds, and many women hold post-masterships. A woman is Secretary of Labor and several are court judges.

The employment of women in private business has shown a steady increase also, the number of women wage-earners being nearly ten million.

Whether this increasing activity of women in industry, business and the professions is an indication of an improved civilization depends upon one's viewpoint. However that may be, women have shown their ability to engage successfully in nearly every vocation under the sun, and that they will continue to do so can not be doubted.

Interesting Essays Are Written By Chilton County Club Boys

Now you will find two essays written by two 4-H club boys on the value of Winter Cover Crops. The purpose of this contest was to teach boys the value of growing winter crops in regard to building up soil.

The prizes of this contest is a free State Short Course at Auburn July 5 through July 9.

The essay written by J. W. Glass, Maplesville, Alabama was the winner. This essay along with the other winner will be found below.

THE VALUE OF WINTER COVER CROPS

J. W. Glass, Jr., Maplesville, Ala. writes vetch ranks at the top of the list as a winter legume for Alabama. It grows on practically every type of soil. No other plant will withstand winter in Alabama better than vetch.

Austrian winter peas is a new winter legume for Alabama. It is becoming much more popular than hairy vetch in South Alabama. It grows in the fall and winter and can be plowed earlier than hairy vetch.

It will not less than twenty (20) bushels per acre. Austrian winter peas should be drilled at the rate of not less than thirty (30) bushels per acre.

There are two methods of inoculation which may be used. Commercial method and the inoculated seed method.

In the three-row drill is used and the inoculated seed is applied, the inoculated seed is put out through the fertilizer drill in large quantities. Use inoculated seed freely. The larger quantity of soil, used, the surer the inoculation will be.

The seed are being sown broadcast-moisten them with water sweetened with syrup and roll in air dry inoculated soil.

When sowing broadcast do not let sunlight reach the inoculated seed as a very few minutes in the direct ray of the sun will kill the inoculation.

In getting inoculated soil, scrape the immediate top surface off, dig up the soil and make sure there was a previous good crop of vetch or Austrian winter peas on the land.

Vetch or Austrian winter peas should be planted the last half of September or the first half of October. The weather records show that, on the average there is some rainfall around the last half of September. Early planting enables the crops to form a root system and become established before winter.

Experimental work and field experiments shows that drilling is the safest and surest method of planting hairy vetch or Austrian peas. Furthermore, drilling is a rapid method and also the most practical method of planting, before the crops are gathered. By drilling the depth of planting and covering can be controlled. Short narrow plows should be used on the drill. Also, some means should be provided to drag the loose dirt back into the planting furrow and fill it practically level.

Failure to do so will result in soil being washed into the furrows on the young vetch or Austrian winter peas, thereby smothering them. This is usually termed "sanding out." Much vetch is lost each year by failure to observe this precaution.

Sowing the seed broadcast in cotton middles and straddling the rows with a two horse cultivator with the disk-hillers on plows is a very good way of covering and can be done before the cotton is opened by sowing just behind the pickers.

When you don't have a disk you can use a one-horse turning plow and leave it in about the same condition. It is not necessary to wait until the vetch or Austrian winter peas are in full bloom. Turn when enough growth has been made to pay. When a square ten feet by ten feet taken in the average vetch of the field will cut twelve pounds of green matter.

The equivalent is nitrogen to that contained in three hundred (300) pounds of nitrate of soda has already been stored in the soil. Austrian winter peas should weigh about fourteen (14) pounds in a square, ten by ten feet.

Corn is expected to increase about twenty-five bushels to thirty bushels after following legumes.

My father has planted cover crops several years and finds that it is cheaper than buying fertilizer. He says that winter cover crops saved his field from being washed away during the past winter.

75c per bushel; 30 bushel increase—$22.50 expected from corn.
10c per pound; 100 pounds increase—$10.00 expected from cotton.

"KINDS OF WINTER LEGUMES TO GROW"

By Charles Shoults, Lawley, Ala. Austrian winter peas are becoming more popular than hairy vetch, especially in Alabama. It grows more in the fall and can be turned under earlier. You should plant the cover crop that grows best on your land, and the one that gives better results. Your cover crop depends upon the seasons you have while they are growing. They will not do so well in dry weather.

You should plant about 30 to 40 pounds of Austrian peas per acre. These seed should be drilled, or use the broadcast method. You should get new tested seed every year. The amount of seed depends upon your land.

If you plant the seed in the broadcast method moisten them with water and roll in the inoculated soil. When planting, do not let the sun reach the inoculated seed, as the sun rays will kill the inoculated bacteria. Your seed will be a waste if they are not inoculated.

Austrian peas should be planted the last half of September or the first of October. There is usually much rain in September. If you plant early the roots form a good growth before winter.

Drilling is the safest and surest method. By drilling you can tell how deep you are planting your seed. You should have it where dirt has been dragged into the planting row, so that the ground is left level. This is to keep rain from washing dirt in on the seed and smothering them out. Many seed are lost in failing to do this. Many farmers fail to get a good stand of vetch or Austrian peas, because they do not know how to plant the seed. They do not take the good advantages that they have of getting bulletins from the County Agent. They do not try to find out the best ways of planting and cultivating their land.

You do not have to wait until the Austrian peas or vetch are in full bloom. They can be turned under when you think they have had a good growth. The crop you are going to plant after you have turned under your cover crop may be hindered by waiting for an extra big growth. Dry weather may come and the land become hard.

It is then hard to turn under the cover crop. Crops may be damaged by worms if you wait too long to turn under your cover crop. The cover crop should not be turned too early. Some farmers think that the vetch or Austrian peas grow rapidly in a very short time.

The increase per acre depends upon whether your cover crop was a failure or a success. If the cover crop was good, you should expect from 30 to 40 bushels increase in corn where you plant a cover crop. If it was a failure you would not get more than 8 to 10 bushels of corn per acre. Farmers of today make good money on increased yields.

My Daddy did not know how all the different cover crops could help his farm until he planted a crop of Austrian peas. He has never planted any other cover crop except Austrian peas. The land that he owns is more of a medium heavy soil. All that this land needed was to be built up by planting cover crops on it. We have been planting a cover crop for about three years.

We have been rotating this cover crop every year. It has made our land produce more corn to the acre. Where we have not planted this cover crop yet, we raise from 6 to 7 bushels of corn per acre. Where we have planted this cover crop we raise anywhere from 20 to 30 bushels per acre. By planting this cover crop our fertilizer bill is not so high, our debts are not as hard to pay, and we can pay our debts with the increased yield.

By planting this cover crop, it has kept our land from washing away during the winter months.

Corn Problem:
25 bushels increase on one acre; 75c per bushel—$18.75 from corn; $5.00 expenses—$13.75 net profit realized from increased yield on corn.

Cotton Problem:
250 pounds of cotton increase per acre; 10c per pound—$25.00 from cotton; $6.00 expenses—$19.00 net profit expected from increased yield on cotton.

PROVIDE THE EXTRA MARGIN OF SAFETY ON THE SPEEDWAY OR HIGHWAY

THOUSANDS said that tires could not stand the terrific grind. They said cars had been built with much greater speed, turns in the track had been repaved with granite-like surface, yet Wilbur Shaw drove to victory on Firestone Gum-Dipped Tires setting a new record of 113.58 miles per hour on one of the hottest days in the history of the Indianapolis track.

Think of the terrific impact on these tires as the cars roared into the treacherous turns and out again. Tons of force straining, pulling, and twisting inside the tire, yet not one cord loosened, not one tread separated from the cord body—all because Gum-Dipping, the Firestone patented process, successfully counteracted the internal friction and heat that ordinarily destroy tire life.

You will never drive your car at these record-breaking speeds, but for the safety of yourself and family you need the safest, strongest and most dependable tires. Come in today. Join the Firestone SAVE A LIFE Campaign by equipping your car with a set of new Firestone Gum-Dipped Tires—the safest tires that money can buy.

Above is a section cut from a smooth, new Firestone tire. Note the thick rubber tread which provides extra protection against skidding. Tires in this condition are more blowout and skidding resistant, puncture resistant, and longer lasting.

Alabama Handles 8 Million Pounds Farm Surplus

More than 8,000,000 pounds of surplus farm products, removed from price-depressed markets in order to increase returns to producers, were distributed in Alabama during 1936 to needy and unemployed persons certified to the relief rolls of this state, reports the Federal Surplus Commodities Corporation to P. Opens New Place Of Business On Selma Highway

A. T. DAWSON

Mr. Dawson, formerly of Maplesville, Ala., has announced this week that he has recently opened a new place of business three miles south of Maplesville, on the Selma highway. He formerly owned the Sanitary Grocery in Maplesville where he was in business for approximately eight years.

"In our new place," Mr. Dawson stated, "we have a full line of staple and fancy groceries. We operate a good grist mill where we are buying corn and selling meal. We want our old customers to come to see us as we are fully appreciative of the splendid business we were favored with while in business in Maplesville.

The new place now operated by Mr. Dawson also handles a line of fresh meats and popular brands of flour. He extends to the people of the western part of the county, and surroundings, a cordial invitation to visit his store just out of Maplesville.

DEBUNKING NOAH

Many of the important personages of history have been shorn of much of their supposed greatness by modern historians and near-historians. It was inevitable that old Father Noah should get his debunking in due time, and so it has happened.

Dr. C. Leonard Wooley, noted archeologist and field director of the joint expedition of the University of Pennsylvania and British Museum in Mesopotamia, is the debunker. He declares that excavations along the Euphrates show that the Flood of Noah's time, mentioned in the Bible, was only a local condition, and that many of the inhabitants of the region escaped to safety in the hills.

The presence of Noah at the scene is doubted by Dr. Wooley, who places the date of the flood at about 4000 B.C., while the Jews first came to Mesopotamia some 2,000 years later. The archeologist believes that the Jews heard the legend of Noah, the ark and the dove from the Assyrians and adopted it as their own. In support of this view he pointed to Assyrian tablets which portray the story.

Anyway, 6,000 years is a long time back, and while most archeologists agree that the popular idea of the flood is greatly exaggerated, it is doubtful whether we shall ever know just what happened around the Euphrates valley in that distant day.

Quite a number of Baker club members attended the rally at Clanton Saturday, May 29 and reported an enjoyable time. It was decided by the club to have July as vacation month instead of August.

After the business session was over, the members were invited into the dining room where a delicious salad course, cake and iced tea were served by the hostess assisted by the leaders.

EVEN a whole newspaper wouldn't be big enough to tell you what all of the 20,000 Alabama women who have electric ranges in their kitchens are saying about them. And if we printed what they are saying, perhaps you wouldn't believe it, because, with few exceptions, they say, "FINE!"

Why Do They Like Their

Electric Ranges?

Recently an electric range manufacturer determined to learn just why women DO like electric ranges. So he had his representatives ask thousands of women who already had electric ranges. He found almost as many reasons for liking an electric range as there were owners of them. But the

Chief Reasons For Liking An Electric Range The Women

Visited Gave Were:

- "I LIKE MY ELECTRIC RANGE because it's easier to keep pots and pans clean."
- "I LIKE MY ELECTRIC RANGE because it doesn't heat up the kitchen so much."
- "I LIKE MY ELECTRIC RANGE because the whole kitchen's easier to keep clean."
- "I LIKE MY ELECTRIC RANGE because I like to be up-to-date."
- "I LIKE MY ELECTRIC RANGE because it gives me more time to do the things I like to do--and I spend less time in the kitchen."
- "I LIKE MY ELECTRIC RANGE because it costs so little to operate."
- "I LIKE MY ELECTRIC RANGE because it seems that when I started cooking electrically, food tasted better."
- "I LIKE MY ELECTRIC RANGE because it gives me more time to help me with other things."

Although July 4th this year is on Sunday, it promises to be a red letter day for Clanton and Chilton County and for those persons who will witness the largest number of airplanes ever assembled at one time in Clanton.

Band Coming

It was announced Tuesday that arrangements will be made to bring one of the state's largest bands to Clanton to furnish music for the dedication. Just what band will be secured was not known at this time.

While the dedication program is scheduled to take two days, the actual ceremony of officially naming the airport Gragg Field, in honor of Dr. V. J. Gragg, will consume less than one hour. The remainder of the time will be given to stunt flying, parachute jumping and other maneuvers. Mr. Thompson stated.

MISSION INSTITUTE

Adult book, is an outstanding man in our Southern Baptist Convention. He brings the key addresses at Ridgecrest during Home Mission Week, in July, which is evidence that he is the finest that can be gotten.

Mrs. Sam Heath, Y.W.A. teacher, is Eastern District Young People's Leader. She is a young woman of fine training, great charm, and unusual ability. Miss Margaret Hall, our young Scholarship girl from Eastern District and Miss Lois Thompson, Honor Graduate from Montevallo, have the junior girls. All Intermediate girls who were here last year, know that Miss Juliette Weeks cannot be beaten. She will teach them again this year. All our boys have the most unusual treat for them. The Napier boys, who grew up in China, and three other very fine young men, will lead their classes. Don't let the boys miss this great experience.

All who love to sing will greatly enjoy Brother W. L. Cooper of Montgomery, one of our very fine evangelistic singers, who will have charge of the music.

These things, we have done, but we must have help. So we are asking the following women to make certain that there will be lunch each day. We are trusting these leaders on her lunch committee, right away and make plans. It will be hard for no one, if each does her part. If each association prepares lunch for 150 each day, we will have enough, for Clanton will serve sandwiches to all the small children and tea for everybody.

"It was on Monday night in the afternoon that this woman struck me," Mrs. Theresa Kohl of Chicago testified in an assault case.

Joseph Sauer of San Francisco was sentenced to prison after admitting that he had robbed 60 churches of $100,000.

Hugh Mason of London was fined $75 for throwing an egg at James Collins during an election contest.

Garnishment on Summons.

D. D. Atchison vs. Dock Perry—Damages for a trespass.

J. M. Steverson vs. John T. Ellis and Edward Erle Ellis—Recovery of Land.

Wofford Oil Co., a cor. vs. Mary E. Martin, otherwise known as Mrs. W. E. Martin—Promissory note.

CARD OF THANKS

We wish to express our sincere thanks to our neighbors and friends for their kindness and sympathy shown during the death of my dear wife and mother. Especially do we thank Bro. G. G. Williams for his words of comfort, also Mr. Cope and sister for their services. We are very grateful for the beautiful flowers—E. B. Culp and Children.

Sixty years after they were young sweethearts, James Lowrie and Janet Ferguson of St. Louis were married.

SIXTEEN PAGES

NUMBER 36

PASSING FOOTPRINTS Of The Times

— Billy Smith

Didn't Intend So
The thoughtful signs placed at limits on both main highways Clanton are most attractive carry out our idea in making the city it is, they are begin-create so many comments since we are a bit afraid we started we didn't intend to. That discussing of the correctness of signing. On another page in this of the News will be found two about this, and these letters are few of the comments we have ed since mentioning the signs in column last week.

To Have Them
We are indeed glad to see our friend,
Mullins of the firm of J. R. Mul-Sons, back on the job after being away due to illness for several weeks. We are glad, too, that Mrs.
Earle Parrish is on the road to recovery and that Mrs. Earle Parrish is operating following a recent operation.

A Kid Again
We may be just a kid again, doing it again when it comes to present enthusiasm over the community of July—and the Third of too. The more we write and read the program in store for the dedication of Gragg Field on those two days the more we have decided we want to purchase some fire works to celebrate.

Reminders
We learned many years ago that the most timely, a mere gentle reminder will get things done quicker than constant nagging. Yes, we thank you very much for your reminder in deciding not to join the city at this time. The city crew did a good job and we appreciate it.
We will see you sometime—anytime.

Congratulations
We extend congratulations to Miss Margaret Nix, of Maplesville, Ala., for her recent honor of having been selected in the group of students from Alabama in American Colleges and Universities. Chilton County is proud of you, Miss Nix.

Altogether Printing
We thank you for your comments on printing done out of town for local community has met with considerable approval by many. But, we learned, with this week that several people Clanton have been guilty of purchasing items of clothing in nearby towns. The identical item is being sold by local stores and at the same price. We refer particular to shirts, ties and other wearables.
One of our local merchants brought this to our attention Tuesday, after careful consideration we decided that the gentleman was correct.

MAZE PARTY EXPECTED TO RETURN THIS WEEK FROM N.Y.

Communication from Mrs. M.
Maze stated that she, with Miss Maricelis and Irvin Lande, expected back in Clanton this week from a two-weeks trip carrying them to New York, Washington and other cities. While in Washington, they were entertained by Hon. Pete Jarman, congressman from this District.

Maze's Store Announces Huge Price Reduction And Cash Raising Sale

Event Opens Friday Morning; Prices Are Listed Inside

One of the greatest price-reducing and cash raising sales ever held in Clanton will open Friday morning at Maze's Department Store, according to Saul M. Goldstein, manager of this store.
"Come And Get It" says the large advertisement appearing in this issue of the News. Mr. Goldstein stated that never before had they sliced their prices on their entire stock so low.
"We really mean it when we say this is a cash-raising sale, and in order to make this event a success, we are offering many, many standard priced items below actual factory cost," Mr.
Goldstein stated.
The sale will open when Maze's store for business Friday morning. It will continue for a period of several days, but the best choice will be had on the first two or three days of the sale, Mr. Goldstein stated. Turn the two-page advertisement in this issue of the News for further infor-

LETTERS ABOUT ROADS, BRIDGES STILL COMING

Varied Opinions Expressed By Commissioners And Road Supervisor

Two more letters, purported to be mailed to and from the Commissioners Court and the Road Department of the county, were given the News this week for publication. The letters, self-explanatory, are published below:
June 19, 1937.

"Mr. T. J. Arledge,
"Road Supervisor,
"Clanton, Alabama.

"Dear Sir:
"We acknowledge receipt of your letter of June 14, 1937, addressed to the Commissioners Court in reply to Resolution of June 12, and note you claim this to be just another childish effort to disturb and attempt to destroy the morale of the road organization and thereby continue to cause strife and bitterness among the people of Chilton County.

Following is published a letter, given the News this week, relative to the condition of roads in a section of the county:
"June 22, 1937.

"Editor,
"Chilton County News,
"Clanton, Alabama.

"Dear Sir:
"On Monday of this week I had an opportunity to ride over a number of settlement roads North of Clanton.
Having heard quite a bit about the roads being in such bad condition, I am writing this out of fairness to the road department of the county. I say, the roads we traveled were never in a better condition, and never will be until they are paved.
"Yours very truly,
"J. M. VANDERVEER."

LEVINE BROTHERS MARK UP PROGRESS MADE SINCE OPENING STORE

Recent Remodeling Adds To Store's Appearance

After approximately eight months in business in Clanton, the two Levine brothers, Sol and I. S., have built up one of the most attractive places of business in the city with a most complete stock of merchandise.

Coming to Clanton as manager of another well known store, I. S. Levine made many friends. He was later joined by his brother and they soon went into business for themselves, independently of any other concern, under the firm name of Levine Brothers, located next door to the Big Four Hardware

Entire State Is Becoming Interested In Dedication

Model Gasoline Powered Airplanes Will Be Brought Here; Well Known Women Flyers Adding To Program

Clanton will be visited by some of the nation's well known women fliers on July 3rd and 4th for the dedication of Gragg Field, according to the chairman of the program committee, and young and old will be thrilled by daring stunts, parachute jumps and tiny gasoline-powered airplanes flying through the air.

Faye Lucille Cox, world's premier parachute jumper that held 150,000 spectators breathless in her dizzy decent at Birmingham's 7th National Air Carnival will make two delayed parachute jumps from 10,000 feet at Clanton's Air Show and Dedication, July 3 and 4. By special arrangements the program committee has been able to entice Miss Cox and Mr. M. C.
Cox, her husband, who will also make 2 jumps.

H. F. Wood of the Wood Chevrolet Company, Birmingham, will take Miss Cox aloft to an altitude of 10,000 feet where she will start her spectacular fall and only by means of a smoke taril can this death-defying leap through space be followed when she first leaves the plane.

FAYE LUCILLE COX
Outstanding woman parachute jumper will thrill crowds here at the dedication of Gragg Field on July 3rd and 4th. Story in next column.

This slender red-haired girl used to be a stenographer in a little Nebraska town. An air show staged a performance and it was there that she met her husband, Mercer Cox. He is a veteran stunt man and has been jumping and performing daredevil acts since 1909. In 1928 at Phoenix, Ariz., his career was almost ended when he was taken aloft for a parachute jump and had to jump without his chute.
The chute became entangled in the tail end of the plane and Cox was forced to turn loose and fall 90 feet and landed in 27 inches of water.

Odell Garrison will take Mercer Cox aloft for a jump each day of the show.

Picnic Grounds To Be Available

Information received Monday from Dr. W. L. Parrish, stated that he would be glad for his large wooded grove to be used July 3rd and 4th by those attending the dedication of Gragg Field.
This land is located immediately south of the hangar at the airport and adjoins the airport. It is shady and an ideal place to spread lunch.
Signs directing the way will be found just behind the hangar. Those taking advantage of this offer bringing their lunch and spending the day, are asked not to abuse the fences, as suitable entrances will be arranged. Do not leave rubbish on the property as containers will be provided for this. Entrance to the grove will opening here at the airport. Drinks and sandwiches will be offered for sale at the airport also.

I. S. LEVINE

Co. of Clanton

"We are proud of the business we have done since opening our own store in Clanton," they stated this week, when commenting on a sale event they are announcing. "Although our store is operated strictly on a cash basis, we have enjoyed a most pleasing pa-

Levine Brothers carry a line of five and ten cent items in one department of their store, while their dry goods and shoe departments are found to be most complete.

Last week, their attractive store underwent a complete remodeling in order that their stock could be enlarged and displayed better for their customers. Their display windows attract much attention through the attractive and tasteful manner of their arrangements. Their business has grown by leaps and bounds since opening here in November. They also use a large storage room in the two-storied building they occupy.

Knows His Rights

There lingers in mind a little jingle which concludes: "He was right all right as he sped along, but he's just as dead as if he'd been wrong."

The man who considers first his own right of way and second the matter of safety is responsible for some of our most serious accidents. You know the fellow. Perhaps you have traveled with him. He sees another car dart out of its traffic lane to weave through the traffic. He might avert an accident by jamming his own brakes and giving the reckless or mistaken driver a chance to get back into his own traffic lane.

But he knows he's "in the right." He refuses to reduce his own speed. So most anything can happen.

Then there is the fellow who insists upon his right-of-way at an intersection. He, too, knows his rights. The other fellow had no reason to pass that stop sign. But the inevitable crash may injure the man in the right as much as the one in error. The laws of chance and momentum pay little heed to the rules of the road.

all subject to lapses. The best of drivers It may also be well to realize that we are a little courteous on the part of other drivers will admit that they do fool things at times. ers in such a situation may avert a serious crash.

In our opinion the really smart driver is not the one who knows all the rules and insists upon his rights, nor the skillful driver who brags about beating all speed records. The smart driver is the one who exercises care and common sense, who practices courtesy, who may not break any speed records but strives never to break the bones or lives of those who travel with him. He realizes that good driving is safe driving.

Where Crime Spawns

"Here's to Crime" is the title of an amazing book recently published by Courtney Ryley Cooper. We were amazed and astounded at the revelations contained therein as presented in a brief digest published in a national magazine.

What impressed us most was the story of how criminals escape the full penalty of their transgressions through the faulty administration of parole boards. The close contact between organized crime and metropolitan politics also helps to explain why America's record in crime is nothing of which we should feel proud.

And as we ponder over what we found in this article, we cannot overlook the opportunity offered to comment upon the contrast between the government of big cities and of small communities like Clanton.

In towns like ours police officials may not be schooled in the latest methods of crime detection; they may not be masterful men who can cope with the cunning of any outlaw, but they are honest and seek to do their duty as they see it. There is no direct contact between men who make their way in the world by crime and the highest officials in the community. There are no fixers to get them free once they are in the hands of the law. And for this reason our community is comparatively free from all crime. Organized crime as a way of life simply does not exist here.

If your great cities were governed with the same honesty and regard for public duty that characterize government in small communities like ours America would not be a crime ridden nation. This problem about which so much is written and spoken would not exist. The great metropolis is the spawning ground of organized crime.

Those of us who were always taught that America was built by pioneers who worked from sunup to sundown cannot be blamed if we question that national salvation lies in the thirty hour week.

All Must Rise Together

If wages were high enough to enable workers to enjoy both the necessities and luxuries that are considered an essential part of the American standard of living; if farmers received prices for their products that assured profitable operation of the farm; if small business could earn a fair profit; if capital invested brought a reasonable return, then, we believe, a condition of sustained prosperity would exist in America.

In other words if earnings of all our people are kept in reasonable balance, adequate buying power will keep the wheels of industry in motion, and a constant and steady advance to higher American standards will be recorded.

But when one class or one group through favorable position secures an advantage above others, then our economic order gets out of balance. Buying is suspended. Industries must close, and the vicious cycle whirls until it carries us to the bottom of a depression.

Here is a thought to be considered in connection with present labor controversies. Organized labor, after all, comprises a minority of the nation's workers. If through mass effort a minority can win undue advantage the result may be anything but satisfactory to all involved, including the very workers who fight for and secure high wages. It matters little whether a small group of capitalists wring excessive profits or a minority of the workers win undue wage advantages, the results are all reflected in higher prices, and those who do not win gains in earnings are compelled to buy less. That leads to unemployment and distress. Out of these two no sustained gain for anyone can be attained.

We are not arguing against organized labor. Its value and opportunities for bringing benefits to the workers is well recognized. But wages that are out of line with the earnings of agriculture, small business people, investors and especially unorganized workers will bring no sustained advantage. They will mean higher prices, and a reduction of general buying power. That in turn will react against the organized workers in the form of unemployment. As their real earnings in contrast with their hourly wages drop, their buying power likewise declines.

All classes and all groups must reach the higher earning levels somewhat together. Our recent history should prove conclusively that economic disturbance follows any trend which gives a few unequal advantages—whether it is a fractional percentage in the highest income brackets or a comparatively small proportion of those employed in industry and business.

Hurrah For The Fourth

We maintain that there is no one event which can be staged in a community that can bring greater general benefit than a first rate July Fourth celebration. For this reason we desire to take advantage of an opportunity to compliment and commend the public spirited citizens of Clanton who are now busy arranging a celebration here.

When the writer was a small tot racing about in knee length trousers, a regular Fourth of July celebration was just about the biggest event in life. We were pleasantly excited for days in advance of the event, and supremely happy in reflection for many days after decorations were removed and the unexploded firecrackers were raked away. To bring like happiness to the youngsters of today is a worthy enterprise. And we may well add right here that some of us never really grow up when it comes to enjoying a circus or a celebration.

But more than all these considerations is the fact that July Fourth is one day which should be observed. It arouses thoughts of national independence, of personal freedom and of individual rights and duties which should be kept fresh in the mind during these days of new and strange developments.

Hence to the committee which is expending so much time and effort to make the occasion a success, we want to say: "Don't fear that your efforts will go unappreciated. You are doing a good job in the way of community service."

There are good reasons why some of us never want to believe in mind reading. We shudder at the thought that anyone might be able to read our thoughts.

Now that they're showing up the tax dodgers, would it come amiss to mention the fact that many large salaried public officials are exempt from all income taxes?

A fishing place can lose its reputation quicker than a new girl in town.

MORAL ECHOES.

D. W. Haskew

Just before the breaking out of the Revolutionary War Governor Gates sent a message to Samuel Adams demanding that he cease his agitation for the liberty of the thirteen Colonies. He was promised great personal advantages if he complied and was told that he would be tried for treason if he refused. On hearing this Samuel Adams made this reply "No personal consideration shall induce me to abandon the righteous cause of my country, and I wish you to inform Governor Gates that I will follow the advice of Samuel Adams to him that in no longer insult the feelings of an exasperated people." It was that firm decision on the part of Adams that led up to the Revolutionary War and the final liberty of our American Republic. Not much importance was attached to the decision of Adams at that time, but it was the power of decision on the part of this great American that gave birth to the United States. It is the power to decide without favor or fear that makes men great and that leads out to great achievements.

One of Henry Ford's most outstanding qualities is habit of reaching a decision quickly and definitely, and changing them slowly. This quality is so pronounced in Mr. Ford that it has given him the reputation of being obstinate and hard boiled. The automobile world was going wild over new model and style for cars but Ford continued to produce the ugliest car ever put on the road, known to us as the Model T. Machine men advised a change but the Ford plant continued to turn out this model. Perhaps Mr. Ford continued too long in the manufacture of this car, but we admire his decision. Most people are too slow in reaching a decision and too quick in changing them. There are moments coming to all of us when a decision should be quickly made and slowly changed if ever. It is the lack of decision that takes opportunity from the path of many. We are told that the time to strike is when the iron is hot. Many a person never amounts to much and all because he never seems to be able to make up his mind.

A person may make up his mind and decide on a course to be pursued and yet amount to nothing and all because he is lacking in persistence. If you have ever had a nightmare you will know the truth of what I am saying. When a nightmare seizes you, you are lying in bed half awake, with a feeling that you are about to smother. You are unable to turn over, or to move a muscle, and yet you know that you must get control of your muscles. Through what will power you have you force one finger to move, then you move your hand and finally you move that arm. The same procedure takes place in the other arm and throughout the entire body until you are able to snap out of the nightmare. By a supreme effort of will power you gained control of your entire body and was soon wide awake. It took persistence to come out of your smothering and to release your mind from the shadows of a semi-conscious state. Without will power and persistence, you would have remained in the suffering of a prolonged nightmare. Life to many people is a nightmare and all because they are lacking in will power and persistence to force themselves through to success. Success is attained through persistence. Success is attained and fortunes are made through persistence.

Kate Smith of radio fame is a perfect example of persistence. For a number of years she sang without money and without price before any microphone she could reach. A call from Broadway was echoing in her heart, but it seemed impossible for her to get a break before an audience of any importance. She never knew when she was defeated and kept on trying. One day Broadway seemed to say "Girl, you do not know when you are licked, just come on and the way is open to you." She was asked to name her price and she named it in large figures and it was paid. There are thousands of singers today who can excel Kate Smith in singing and yet they are folding their hands in idleness, waiting for success. They do not have the persistence of Kate Smith and there is no break for them. Verily it pays to be persistent. "Faint heart never won fair lady." "If you do not first succeed, try again."

When I was a lad I had a little dog and his name was Clip. Many of the sweetest memories of childhood gather about my experience with that little dog. Clip knew nothing about mathematics and he could speak no language but he had the finest technique for making friends that I ever saw. He loved me and loved everybody and I loved him and everybody loved him. He found friends everywhere because he first was friendly. If you want to make friends, take a tip from Clip and make yourself friendly. You can make more friends in two weeks by becoming interested in other folks, than you can in two years by trying to get other folks interested in you. The way to get folks to love you is first to love folks. The way to have friends is first of all to be friendly to others.

After his marriage to Mrs. Nettie Knapp of Philadelphia, Rolin Goodell entertained the wedding guests with a solo, "The Prisoner's Song."

Miss Carrie Love Jones, Of Rockford Becomes Bride Of Mr. Davis At Pretty Wedding Here

Marked with dignity and simplicity was the wedding of Miss Carrie Love Jones and Le Fort Davis, solemnized at 12 o'clock noon on Thursday, June 17, at the First Methodist church, Clanton. The Rev. J. M. Truett read the nuptial vows in the presence of a large assemblage of relatives and friends. He was assisted by Rev. S. J. Ezell, minister of the Baptist church, Clanton.

The altar was banked with palms and Southern smiles festooned with white madonna lilies and gladioli. The bride and groom, flanked by their bridesmaids and groomsmen, stood between ornate candelabra. As a prelude to the ceremony, George McDonald, cousin of the bride, lighted the tapers. Mrs. Ada Sherer Hart of Anniston rendered musical selections and Mrs. Ruby McAllister Murphy of Rockford, Ala., sang "Sweetest Story Ever Told" and "Oh Promise Me". The procession entered the church to Lohengrin's Wedding March. The bride was preceded to the altar by Tom McDonald, cousin of the bride, and Harry Teale of Rockford, Ala. Schubert's Serenade was played during the ceremony.

Attending the bride was her sister, Marie A. Galt, as matron of honor, who wore a brown hat with a navy jacket, frock of crepe and net, the skirt dished with brilliant print flowers. She carried an arm bouquet of blue and yellow daisies tied with blue ribbon. Escorted by her uncle, Mr. C. Penn Jones, who gave her in marriage, the bride was met at the altar by Mr. Davis and his brother, Ivan, who acted as best man. The ring ceremony was used, and the bride wore her mother's wedding band.

The bride was lovely in a dress of flowered chiffon, Eisenberg model, rich shades of orange, yellow and purple on a brown background. She used brown accessories. Her hat was a Neora pill box straw with yellow velvet daisies around the crown, and a tiny veil. She carried an arm bouquet of daisies, larkspur, sweet peas, and garden flowers, tied with yellow ribbon.

Immediately following the ceremony a wedding breakfast was served at the Thompson Hotel for relatives, out-of-town guests, and intimate friends. The bride and groom left for a wedding trip to Bloxi and other points. They will make their home in Anniston, Ala.

Mrs. Davis is the daughter of the late Dr. and Mrs. Julius Jones of Rockford, Ala. Her charm and gentleness of manner has endeared her to her host of friends. On her maternal side she is a descendant of the McDonalds and the Lanes. Her great-grandmother was Elizabeth Lane, direct descendant of Joseph Lane, who was influential in the political life of the '60s. Her great-grandfather, Dr. John McDonald, was the first white man to settle in what is now Rockford, Ala., which was an Indian village at the time. Mrs. Davis is a graduate of Alabama College, Montevallo, where she majored in piano, violin and dramatics, having received her later training under Walter Spry, of the Chicago School of Music. For the past several years she has taught piano, violin and music kindergarten in Anniston, Ala., where her work is much appreciated. In 1925 one of her pupils from Ft. Payne, Ala., won first prize in the state high school contest, which was held at Alabama College, another of her pupils coming second in the same contest.

Mr. Davis is a representative of one of the pioneer families of eastern Alabama. The town of Fort Davis was named for his father, Fort Madison Davis. The reunions of the Fort family have been held annually at Darlington, S. C., for the past 60 years. Mr. Davis is associated with the firm of A. J. Godwin, real estate and insurance, Anniston, Ala. Business for the firm has shown much progress since Mr. Davis has been connected with them. Aside from his executive ability, his jovial disposition has won him many friends. He is vice president of the Sportsman's Club of Anniston.

The following ladies assisted in the amenities at the wedding breakfast: Mrs. H. C. Pipes, Misses Mildred Pipes.

Soil Erosion Control Aiding Farm Crops

The control of erosion is bringing about a new standard of values for farm crops in the Soil Conservation Service area near Clanton, according to Mr. James H. Wood, Superintendent.

The old system of farming which put the production of clean-tilled crops ahead of everything else, left only a small proportion of the farm acreage for pasture and hay crops and thus further increased the amount of land needed for clean-tilled crops to supply the feed supply.

The legumes, small grains, and other close-growing crops which were given little consideration are now being grown much more extensively since their value for erosion control has been fully recognized. By providing additional feed they have reduced the acreage required for other feed crops.

The growing of legumes, which increases the fertility of the soil as well as aids in erosion control, has made it possible to reduce the acreage needed for clean-tilled crops.

The fields of these crops, in addition to the legumes, are now being planted in the same manner as the old system.

NEW LIVESTOCK LABORATORY WILL BE CONSTRUCTED SOON

Within the next few weeks the federal government will construct a huge regional livestock research laboratory at Auburn to serve all states east of the Mississippi and south of the Ohio rivers, announces Dr. L. N. Duncan, president, Alabama Polytechnic Institute.

The Board of Trustees of the Alabama Polytechnic Institute has provided the land on which to build the laboratory and the United States Bureau of Engineering has asked for bids for constructing the buildings.

Livestock and poultry diseases and pests and methods of controlling them will be studied at the laboratory, Dr. Duncan said in explaining that "the laboratory is a great thing for Alabama and other states in the southeast. It will enable farmers and livestock producers to solve one of their greatest problems—that of controlling diseases and pests among their livestock and poultry—and will help farmers in carrying out a better balanced farm program by utilizing more livestock in their farming operations," he said.

The new livestock research work will be financed by the federal government under the Bankhead Bill passed last year, providing for the establishment of regional laboratories in various parts of the country. Immediately following the passage of the bill, Dr. Duncan and other officials of the Alabama Polytechnic Institute worked with the federal officials in locating the livestock laboratory here.

AAA ASKING FARMERS FOR IDEAS ON 1938 PROGRAM

The Agriculture Adjustment Administration in Washington is asking farmers throughout the United States for suggestions on developing the 1938 AAA program.

"These suggestions, together with recommendations already made by County Planning Committees in most counties in the South, will provide valuable material in suggesting the kind of program best adapted to local conditions and in line with the needs from a regional and national point of view," say H. R. Tolley, administrator, and C. A. Cobb, director, Southern Division, in a letter to Walter L. Randolph, administrative officer in charge in Alabama.

"Thus from experience gained during the past several years, in which period farm income almost doubled, largely from the efforts of cooperating farmers, your suggestions for improving the program in 1938 will be very helpful," they further state in a letter to cotton farmers. "A summary of all suggestions and information together with County Planning Committee recommendations and other information will be available—at State and Regional meetings to be held during the summer when specific plans for next year will be formulated."

BOYS 4-H CLUB NEWS

Oak Grove

Our 4-H Club sure enjoyed a ball game last Wednesday. Mr. Ivey was in charge.

We had good attendance. There were 17 old members and four new members. Ruth Cobb, Louise Cobb, Shirley, Rogers and Bud Rodgers. We surely are glad to have them with us.

How many of us are going on our vacations. I, for one, hope to go to Blue Creek Camp for the first time. Don't you know I am anxious for the time to come for us to go.

We are sorry to learn one of our members, Verle Killingsworth, is ill in a Birmingham hospital. Here's hoping for him a speedy recovery.

Reporter, A. G. Hucks.

Enterprise Club

The Enterprise 4-H Club met Thursday, June 4th. Our attendance was very low due to the fact that so many of our members were helping in the crops. We hope to have a better attendance next time.

Mr. Ivey talked about boll weevils, their origin and control, which was very helpful to us. He also told us about the club camp to be held in July. There being no other business we adjourned.

Reporter, Norman Thomas.

Thomas Jr. Club

The Thomas Jr. 4-H Club boys met at Thomas Jr. school May 15. There were fourteen members present.

The club enjoyed a baseball game before the meeting was held.

The meeting was called to order by the president.

Mr. Ivey told the club some very important facts about the boll weevil and their control. The members were very attentive during the talk and seemed to enjoy it.

The club then made plans for going to Camp at Blue Creek on the backwaters of the Coosa River on July 21, 22 and 23.

After a very successful meeting the club adjourned until next month.

Tribute Paid To Dr. Gragg For His Untiring Interest In Aviation

A very timely tribute to Dr. V.J. Gragg, well known physician and surgeon, appeared in last Sunday's issue of The Birmingham News. Dr. Gragg has spent untiring efforts to bring to Clanton and Chilton County, one of the state's most modern small airports.

Following is the tribute paid him in the column "Skyways" of The Birmingham News

"The dedication of Clanton's new airport will be held July 3-4. Gragg Field as it has been named in honor of one of the staunchest aviation supporters in the state, will be the center of a gala affair these two days. Notable fliers and guests from over the state will help celebrate this city's forward step in providing facilities for air transportation that is fast spreading its network of airlines throughout the nation.

"These smaller airports are of vital importance as emergency fields for the main air routes and future development of feeder lines. Tomorrow's growth of commercial aviation depends primarily on establishment of these small air fields, and even in this country's national defense will they prove invaluable.

"Dr. V.J. Gragg and Leo Thompson have been the guiding figures in aviation in Clanton and the fruits of their labor and tireless efforts are being realized.

"Movies have been taken starring the country doctor, novels written making them heroes but there is no other small group of men that so richly deserve more praise than has been given them. In Clanton we find one playing the role in a most modern way. Well past the 60 milestone, Dr. Gragg received his private pilot's license and is a plane owner.

"In getting this fine air field for his city, Dr. Gragg has made his avocation another valuable service to his city. But this hobby he has selected has not once made him lose sight of the all-important task of administering to the sick and in his modernly-equipped hospital, which few towns the size of Clanton can boast, Dr. Gragg can be found day or night going about his duties of relieving some unfortunate injured or sick person."

DR. V.J. GRAGG

SIGNS DESIGNATING ENTRANCE TO CLANTON CREATING COMMENTS

Is It "Careful" Or Carefully

Since the column "Passing Footprints" mentioned last week the new signs placed on the highways at the entrance to the city limits, considerable discussion has arisen as to the correctness of the wording of the signs. In the "Passing Footprints" the signs were stated as being worded "Drive Carefully" while in reality they are worded "Drive Careful."

Following are two letters addressed to the editor of the News, carrying on this discussion:

Why Not The "ly"?

"Verbena, Ala., June 21, 1937.
"Editor of Chilton County News,
"Clanton, Ala.

"Of course there are quite a number of us in Chilton County, the best County on Earth, who do not 'Spickka Der English' very eloquently, but we feel sure of hosts of motorists who pass through Clanton who had compulsory education long before we enforced it here and who may notice the brand new highway signs recently installed on each side of Clanton.

"These perfectly sensible and helpful signs are understood and appreciated by all decent-minded drivers, especially those who reside in Chilton County, but there is no reason why an 'ly' should not have been added to the thoughtful signs, or just 'Drive With Care' placed thereon and give outsiders of the traveling tribes a fairer opinion of Chilton County's intellect, as to our language.

"If the signs were meant for a great many of us citizens only, probably this one would be more effectual: 'Gittin Nigh Clanton, Be Kam An' Keerful'.

"On the other hand, according to the way a great many persons use the pavement, we would suggest this notice: 'Drive Without Any Horse Sense, Regardless Of Rights Of Others And Be Assured That Patrolmen Waites And Henley Will Kindly Assist You To Quick Justice, And Pick Up The Remainder Of The Useless Pieces.' However, Drive Keerful.

The Kings English

"Editor, Chilton County News,
"Clanton, Alabama.

"In your column entitled 'Passing Footprints Of The Times' you discuss our city's signs recently erected. And quoting from the signs you make the observation that the signs say: 'City

Dr. Parrish Announces New Plans For Vaccinating Dogs In County

The new State law regarding the vaccination of all dogs in the state, requires that this be done, or the animals disposed of. It also sets up a cash fee of fifty cents per animal. Dr.

Of Clanton. Drive Carefully. Unfortunately, that is NOT what the signs say, but only, perhaps, what they should say. So we'll give you good on everything except CAREFUL observation.

"In studying the King's English from Webster's Unabridged Dictionary we find that 'Careful' is an adjective, and further find that 'carefully' is an adverb, and that 'drive' in this connection is necessarily a verb, an intransitive verb. We have learned that an adjective modifies a noun or pronoun and does not modify a verb. We also know that an adverb modifies a verb, participle, adjective, or another adverb. Therefore, the adverbial form, or 'carefully' should be used with 'drive'.

"It might be well for us to at least make use of correct English if we see fit to caution our visitors.

"A READER."

DR. W. L. PARRISH

W. L. Parrish, well known local veterinarian has been appointed inspector for this county. Following is a statement from Dr. Parrish to the dog owners of this county:

"From the inquiries I am having from various individuals and communities I am writing a letter to let the people know my intention about the vaccination of the dogs of the county.

"As most of you know, it is a state law now that all dogs must be vaccin-

Alabama Will Have Huge Sum For Unemployed

Decision of the United States supreme court upholding the Alabama unemployment compensation law means this state will have about $7,000,000 reserve on January 1, 1938, with which to begin the payment of bene- ficiaries of the unemployed. The Alabama state has been made by M.H. H. chairman of the unemployment compensation commission, after a check of commission records. He pointed out that the com- mission has already collected $3,000,000 has been deposited with the States treasury and is draw- ing. Litigants deposited in es- timate $1,750,000 which will be the unemployment commission the next few days. This total $5,000,000 represents contributions of employers and employees under the unemployment compensation law for a small portion of 1937. The law employers were re- quired to pay nine-tenths of one per cent of their total pay rolls in 1936 and they had eight or more per- cent employed during any 20 weeks of

1400 FARM BOYS WILL VISIT AUBURN IN JULY

Auburn, Ala.—Plans have been com- pleted for about 1400 Alabama farm boys to visit the Alabama Polytechnic Institute during the first two weeks in July. Over 600 4-H club boys of the state will attend the 4-H club encampment July 5-14, announces T.A. Sims, state 4-H Club leader. Immediately follow- ing the 4-H gathering, over 800 FFA boys will be in Auburn, July 15-17, at- tending the 8th annual convention of the Alabama Association of Future Farmers of America, states C.W. Well, state FFA president.

the year. This amount was increased to 1.80 per cent of the total pay rolls this year and will be further increased to 2.70 per cent next year. After 1938 the assessment will remain stationary at 2.70 per cent until 1941 when the unemployment compensation com- mission will make an assessment against each employer based on the experience for stability of employment in his par- ticular class during the years between the time the law became effective and 1941.

The return of $4,750,000 in fifteen months on an assessment of only nine- tenths of one per cent against em- ployers for a greater part of the time and an assessment of one per cent against eligible employees caused Chairman Harper's prediction that the total to be available for unemployment benefits will reach $7,000,000 by the time the first payments are made to unemployed.

Records of the unemployment com- pensation commission show that 4,100 business and industrial organizations are paying contributions to the un- employment reserve fund and that ap- proximately 214,000 wage-earners are protected. Field agents' estimates are that between 400 and 500 additional employers will be brought under the law this year and that protection against unemployment will be provided for about 250,000 wage-earners.

Alabama's unemployment compensa- tion law provides for payment of bene- fits of not more than $15 a week or one-half of an idle wage-earner's salary for not more than 20 weeks during a period of idleness. Alabama was the sixth state to enact unemployment compensation legislation, being pre- ceded only by Wisconsin, New York, California, Massachusetts and New Hampshire. Governor Graves approved Alabama's law September 14, 1935, ex- actly one month after congress enact- ed the social security law.

"We have sold over 20,000 pairs of these all leather shoes in the last four years," Mr. Lande stated. "We have learned that Star Brand shoes cost no more than other shoes of inferior quality. When we sell these shoes, we know our customers are assured of ab- solutely the best for their money," Mr. Lande continued.

The Leader carries all sizes and widths in these well known shoes, which are recommended by The Leader for real foot comfort. The "Poll Par- rot" shoe is for the youngsters, the "Heel Latch" shoe is recommended for the laides and the "Uptown" shoe is for the men.

On another page in this issue of the News will be found a large advertise- ment from The Leader, listing prices on shoes and many other bargains they are offering this week.

IN MEMORY

Tuesday morning at the dawn of day the death angel visited our home and took away our dear mother. She had been sick every since February, but she bore her suffering patiently. She was 87 years old.

She leaves to mourn her loss two daughters, Mrs. Willie Griffin and Mrs. Lillie Blackmon; seven grand- children and 8 great grandchildren. She was laid to rest at New Harmony Wednesday at 11 o'clock. Martin & Sons were in charge. The pallbearers were: Frank Griffin, Julius Ward, Buster Thomas, Clifford Traywick, Harry Parker, Vernon Bell.

Her chair is empty, Her voice is stilled, And a place is vacant in her home That never can be filled. —Written by her Daughters, Willie Griffin, Lillie Blackmon.

CARD OF THANKS

We wish to express our heartfelt thanks for all help and kindness shown us during the long illness of our dear mother. We especially thank Dr. Mas- tin, Mr. Martin, Brother Parker, Mrs. Rush and Mrs. Atchison, also all the ladies for the pretty flowers. May God's richest blessings rest on all of them in our prayer.—Her Daughters, Willie Griffin, Lillie Blackmon.

New Miracles Of The Photoelectric Cell

By James D. Purdy Director, Schools of Electrical Engineering, International Correspondence Schools

ASTRONOMERS at the Wash- burn Observatory, Wisconsin, are testing the use of a photoelectric cell as an automatic guider for the observatory's giant telescope, thus relieving them of the onerous task of keeping the telescope trained on a particular star during the hours required to take a photograph. The light of the guide star is divided into two beams of equal brightness which are directed onto the light- sensitive surface of the photoelec- tric cell. If the telescope swerves in any degree from the proper posi- tion one beam becomes brighter than the other. This variation in bright- ness resulting in an electric pres- sure in the cell, starts a motor which swings the telescope back into position.

A photoelectric cell device has been developed for use at dangerous highway intersections and curves to check motorists who drive at ex- cessive speeds. Two "electric eyes," set half a mile apart and connected with an automatic timer, measure the speed at which the car is travel- ing. If the speed is excessive the de- vice flashes a signal ahead of the driver, warning him to slow down before the intersection or curve is reached.

That's What I Think

Saul M. Goldstein

There is something inherently wrong in the make-up of things when a man—or woman, for that matter—can find no better way to amuse himself than by absorbing all he can hold of intoxi- cating liquors, and then parading him- self publicly in a drunken stupor. The fault is not in the liquor itself, although all our efforts to solve the problem have been based on that assumption.

A wise, sane and temperate use of alcoholic compounds has always been conducive to bringing out the best that is in us. The ancient Talmudists turned their realization of this into fact when they incorporated into the prayers the blessing: "Praise be to Thee, O Lord our God, Ruler of the universe, who createst the fruit of the vine." The Persian tentmaker, whose verses still attract young and old, put together in one verse what he consid- ered the three great desires of a man's life—bread, wine and love—when he said, "a loaf of bread, a jug of wine, and thou—"

No, the fault does not lie in the liquor itself. If we must look for it, we must look to find it either in the man or the environment that makes him what he is. And when, in one con- centrated community you find a dis- proportionate share of common drunk- enness, then you must look for it in the society which surrounds that man.

That we have the problem with us, none but the most blind would deny. Our court dockets are filled with cases of VPL, PD and DI; our highways are strewn with the wreckage of automo- biles and human bodies because al- cohol and gasoline do not mix—es- pecially when one is in an engine and the other in a human being.

Our attempts to legislate intoxicat- ing liquors out of the way have proven a failure. Lack of law is no key to the problem; it must be sought in society itself. I repeat, there is something inher- ently wrong in the make-up of things when a man can find no better way to amuse himself than by constant in- toxication. There might be a thousand errors necessary of correction before the individual would change his habits, and far be it from me to discover and point out all of them. I can only judge by what I see and have seen, and it is my firm opinion that if you give the average man enough in other ways to amuse him, he will not resort to liquor as a constant companion.

That is where our society fails. We can raise tens of thousands to invest in a new factory, but cannot find a dime to provide the things for which man may hunger and yet not realize where his food lies. It is my guess that adequate facilities for study, re- creation and amusement would go a long way toward solving the problem. Keep our people busy reading good books in a public library, playing clean wholesome games in a public recrea- tion center, engaging in outdoor sports, and you will find less of them wrap- ped around telephone poles or standing before the judge on Monday morning to answer charges of drunkenness.

A CROSS rugged mountains, through rich valleys, along highways and by-ways—to you the electrical trans- mission line may appear to be just a com- monplace bit of landscape . . . unless you are one of the initiated!

Then it seems to be a great harp, singing noble songs of doing and daring; songs of risk of life and fortune so that ELECTRIC SERVICE MIGHT BE YOURS AT SMALL COST. Or your ears might hear a ballad telling of the contentment in homes where mothers are no longer slaves to household tasks—thanks to the time- saving and youth-extending benefits of electricity.

Or the wires may seem to be singing mighty songs of the workmen in factories who no longer must do tasks that only a machine should do, and who can now produce in a few hours what once required many. Perhaps the great harp's strands will seem to be singing of new indus- tries which Alabama Power Company has brought to Alabama so there may be greater opportunity for Alabama boys and girls.

Or, if you have the ear for the music of the wind as it touches the great strands suspended between mighty metal towers, you may hear them singing of brave deeds during catastrophes when linemen come forth from the shelter of their homes to make repairs, so your electric service may go on.

The next time you are riding or walking through the country, when you see the gleaming metal strands suspended from great towers as on a loosely strung harp, see if you, too, can hear the martial MUSIC OF PROGRESS they're singing during this

Picnic Grounds To Be Available

Information received from Dr. W. L.
Parrish, stated that he would be glad for his large wooded grove to be used July 3rd and 4th by those attending the dedication of Gragg Field. This land is located immediately south of the hangar at the airport and adjoins the airport. It is shady and an ideal place entrances will be arranged. Do not

A Word Of Thanks

"Working for the community is a thankless task. There are plenty to complain when some idea or project does not meet with complete success. There are few to help when a lot of work is demanded. There are few thanks for those who buckle in when there is work to be done."

How often we hear such remarks. How frequently the citizen who devotes time and energy to civic projects becomes discouraged when he receives little assistance and much criticism.

We take advantage of this occasion, therefore, to extend a word of appreciation to those energetic citizens who are ready to help make Clanton a better and more wide-awake community. It always is a few, maybe only five or six public spirited citizens, to whom we must look when a job of community improvement requires attention. They should at least receive the praise and encouragement of their fellow citizens for the spirit exhibited and for what they do or endeavor to accomplish.

Without a few such citizens our community would be a drab and stagnant place. If it were not for such people there would be little progress and little improvement. It was people like them who built this community and the great nation of which we are a part. It would be well for all of us to extend them a word of sincere appreciation and acknowledge the great value of their civic loyalty.

What Are We Celebrating

Many of our readers will recall fond memories of at least one of those old time July Fourth celebrations. It all started with the sunrise cannon and ended late in the evening after a pyrotechnic display of skyrockets and roman candles. It was quite a day for the youngsters and elders too for who didn't enjoy the big street parade or the fire run which opened the evening's festivities.

But with most of those old time celebrations there was almost always a program. The local band played a concert. A few instrumental and vocal solos were presented. And some local citizen with a stentorian voice read the Declaration of Independence, and informed his audience that "we are here today to commemorate that great and significant event in history."

How long it has been since we have heard that type of program. How long it has been since we were even reminded that July the Fourth is a day of real national significance, marking the very beginning of our independence as a nation and devoted to those immortal ideals of liberty and freedom.

In this day and age it seems peculiarly fitting that this one phase of the old time "Fourth Celebration" might well be revived. When that immortal document was first signed America pointed the way to new ideals in a world where human rights were disregarded and governments were dominated by despots. For seven years after the Declaration was adopted by the Continental Congress the patriots who signed it and a few thousand other men who saw principle above personal comfort and safety fought a desperate war to give to posterity a nation in which their ideals might be realized.

But the world even today does not fully accept these principles. Only a few countries are left where the high idealism of the Declaration of Independence is even considered. Here in our own land there seems to be a definite swing away from such principles, and a July Fourth celebration might well be an occasion to re-dedicate ourselves to ideals of social organization which this land so long represented.

It is with regret we note that so few celebration committees even think about the old tradition of reading the Declaration of Independence.

Loss Of Self Government

A resolution was introduced in the Legislature of the State of Wisconsin seeking to force members of that body to disclose the amount of real estate and personal property taxes they pay. It was offered by a member who resents the disposition of the law makers to impose additional burdens on cities, villages and towns which must be met by those who pay taxes on the land and homes they use.

While the resolution may not lead to tangible results, it offers something worthy of consideration. An investigation of the problems of Chilton County will show that many things for which we pay when tax-paying time rolls around are beyond the control of our local officials. "The state demands this; the state requires that, or the state offers aids which make it advisable to do this." These are the answers our local officials will give.

There was a time when every community like ours was almost a political unit with itself. That condition is now long in the past. Year after year our state has taken over powers, duties and responsibilities that were once exercised by the community. As a result we have lost control of some of the most important functions of local government.

Some of these changes were undoubtedly made in the public interest, but the trend has extended beyond the realm of reason or common sense. It does little good now to complain about high taxes without taking the complaint to the state. Our local officials are in a considerable measure quite powerless.

Perhaps the generosity of our state legislature with the money of our local home owners and farmers might well bear a little scrutiny. It is always easy to be liberal with the other fellow's money.

Time To Wake Up

From the National Capitol in Washington to council chambers and town halls of thousands of large and small communities comes the realization today that riotous spending in government must come to a halt. The public debt of all units of government has grown to staggering proportions in recent years, and if needed services are to be continued, if public credit is not to become an oppressive burden in the years ahead, our nation from town board to congress must soon bring income and expense into balance.

But the cause of this condition lies as much or even more with the vast majority of people rather than with elected representatives. They only do our bidding, and all they hear is demands for new appropriations, new projects, more public spending. Those who believe that sound, thrifty policies must replace extravagance are strangely silent. It is time for these people to make their views known.

When some new scheme for public spending is advanced, do you give the matter your personal attention and then let your representative in congress, or in the state legislature know where you stand? This question is merely rhetorical. We assume you are like all of us. You write when some piece of legislation affecting your own business or job is under consideration. You pay little heed to matters of broad, general policy which affect us all.

We have observed this attitude here in Clanton. When a budget for the next year is under consideration the audience is small. When a demand for some new appropriation is being heard every available seat is taken, and many of those in attendance are quite ready to advance arguments in favor of the new plan to withdraw money from the public treasury.

Do we dare to neglect indefinitely our public duties and leave everything in the hands of men whose primary interest is the next election rather than the coming generation.

First place among the meanest men goes to the fellow whose paper was stopped for non payment and then tells that he quit his subscription because it was no good.

Perhaps we shouldn't say too much about lack of co-operation here in Clanton. Look how the civilized nations of Europe fail to practice it. Also take note of the results.

A half truth is like a half brick. You can throw it farther.

There is one thing, it seems, which cannot be modernized. That's human nature.

The champion hog callers, says a friend, are really our elected representatives in Washington.

D. W. Haskew

I saw a Mocking bird on the fence and she was all agitated over a cat that was sitting crouched under the shubbery near by. I knew where the mother bird had her nest and I knew that the nest was full of little birds. This feathered mother seemed to be screaming to her babies, "Little ones I see a cat. Beware! A few days later I saw those little birds as they hopped about on the limbs near the old nest and still I could hear the cry of that mother saying, "Children beware, there is an old bad cat near! Then I saw the cat coming toward the house one day, licking her lips and there were no little birds in the back yard. From a limb on the old oak tree I heard the plaintive cry of a heart-broken mother. She had lost her young and all because the little birds refused to listen to the warnings of a mother. Verily, verily, do I say unto the youth of today, "You had better pay heed to your parents when they warn you against the evils of the age in which you live. Young man, young woman, listen to the cry and the warning of those who love you. "There is bad cat crouched to do you harm!"

The gas in the tank of my car was running low and a filling station loomed before me on the highway. I slowed down and was about to turn in when I saw a sign printed in large letters "Drink Beer Here." I turned my car back into the road and rode away to another station. As a listener, I sat in the court room and heard the trial of a man accused of murder. The witness on the stand was a hardware dealer and the prosecuting attorney asked him this question, "When the accused here was buying that gun from you, did you know that he intended using it in killing the man?" That lawyer was saying this "If a man knowingly sells a man a gun when he is getting it to commit murder he is then guilty with the one who pulls the trigger. We all know that one glass of beer under the skin of the driver of a car will make him unsafe on the highway to a certain extent and that leads me to say that when a filling station operator is selling Beer and whiskey to the traveling public he becomes a party to the accidents occurring from the drinks sold. Any filling station selling Beer and whiskey can be none other than a murder joint. They do not merit the patronage of God fearing people."

While sitting on the grand stand watching an interesting ball game, I saw two men pass a dollar each to a man. They were betting on the outcome of the game. That reminded me of two little boys who met in the road. One of them carried a Skunk on his arms and the other one carried a Pole cat. They got up a heated argument as to which one had the loudest odor. About that time another boy came along and they gave the Skunk and the Pole cat over to him to hold and judge which one had the loudest odor. It seems to me that all three boys had a mighty poor job, but the worst job of the three was the boy who had to hold both the Skunk and the Pole cat. The man who holds the stake in a bet has a mighty poor job. As for me I had rather hold the odorous cats.

Old Lady Grouch lived in a country community and one night her grandson called her to the back porch to look at the New Moon that was hanging above the valley to the West. The old lady replied, "No Sonnie, I well remember the beauty of the New Moon when I was a young lady and I never expect to see another one like that." It was good enough for me and I will just remember it! To be sure many people have changed their minds and hearts fixed on the past. To hear some aged folks talk you would think that all the beautiful things, all the lovely things, all the fine things of the world passed out many years ago. The New Moons are just as beautiful and lovely today as they were forty years ago. Folks are just as fine and youths are just as good as they were when grandmother was a girl. Why not train the eye to see the good and the heart to respond to the fine things of today. To me everything seems more beautiful and people seem better than I have ever known them before.

A neighbor mother carried her eight year old boy to the circus and on going in at the gate she said to him, "Now Sam, enjoy yourself. I have heard enough about this thing and I want you to know that it is here for you and if you do not have a good time I am going to skin you all over when we go back home." The joy of the occasion was knocked out of the boy's heart and it was hard for him to have a good time when he was ordered to do so. If a man should sit you down in front of a double barrel shot gun and tell you to laugh or get shot, you might do something at the laughing, business, but you would get no pleasure out of it. When you are tickled you have got to laugh or burst. I hear preachers saying to the folks, "Be happy my friends" and they have no cause for happiness. Lots of our preaching and lots of our comradeship should not be ordered happiness, but happiness produced. When conditions for happiness are produced you do not have to order folks to be happy; they will be happy or burst.

PLANTING ADVICE

In a bulletin issued by the Iowa State College of Agriculture some timely advice is given concerning the planting and cultivation of soybeans, a crop which is becoming of increased importance, and the planting season for which is at hand. Among the recommendations made are the following:

Be sure to inoculate the seed, and disc or harrow repeatedly before planting, to free the ground surface of germinable weed seed. The best time for planting is usually late May or early June.

Use either Manchu, Illini, Mukden or Dunfield variety of seed, regardless of whether the crop is to be used for seed or hay. Not less than two bushels of seed per acre should be used if put in with a grain drill, and at least one bushel per acre if planted in rows.

The crop should be cultivated with a harrow, weeder or rotary hoe in the early stages of growth to control weeds.

Considering the wide variety of uses to which it is adaptable, the soybean seems destined to become one of the country's most important cash crops. Within the last few years the oil has come to be utilized in the manufacture of many commodities of widespread use, while soybean oil meal is recognized as one of the best protein feeds for livestock.

Because of its palatability, digestibility and its superior nutritional qualities, soybean oil meal has proved to be highly desirable in the feeding of hogs, poultry and dairy cows.

When Mrs. Sarah Loomis, 7, of Boston, was arrested for drunkenness, the judge said: "You're a nut! You're a lady; now go home and be good."

Mrs. Edna Russell of New York City put two letters in the wrong envelope, as a result her husband got a divorce.

WHAT THE DAY IS WORTH

Below we publish a flashing thought, brought to us from the mind of our friend, S. L. Gibson, of Verbena, while he was sitting in Clanton Tuesday thinking of the dedication of Gragg Field:

You who walk upon the ground
And fear the great High Way;
Come to Clanton July Third
And watch brave souls portray
What man can do with his keen mind.
When linked with God's great Will,
Just gather at Gragg's Flying Field,
Enjoy a lasting thrill.
But don't forget when you reach home
Just what the day was worth.
Remember these brave human birds
Are lifting up the earth.

TWO MORE FRESH COTTON BLOOMS ARE BROUGHT IN

Shortly after the News went to press last week, two more cotton blooms, among the first of the season, were brought to the office.

Tom Kemp, well known planter and former merchant of the county, brought in one from his farm, raised by Oscar Gunn, colored farmer.

The other bloom was mailed in to the News from Earl Ousley, of Plantersville, Ala., and an active member of the county 4-H Club. Earl stated he is "mighty proud of his one acre of cotton" and that it is certainly looking good. He has also planted an acre of corn this year.

HERE'S WHY FIRESTONE ALWAYS GIVES YOU SO MUCH

More for Your Money

Firestone Rubber Plantations in Liberia furnish ever increasing supply of finest quality rubber.

- WIDER FLATTER TREAD GIVES LONGER WEAR, MILEAGE AND PREVENTS SKIDDING
- TWO EXTRA LAYERS OF GUM-DIPPED CORDS MAKE THE TIRE MUCH STRONGER
- GUM-DIPPED BODY GIVES GREATEST BLOWOUT PROTECTION
- 3 EXTRA POUNDS OF RUBBER TO EVERY 100 POUNDS OF CORD FABRIC

FROM the day of its introduction, the Firestone Standard Tire has more than lived up to its name by setting a new high standard of tire values. Hundreds of thousands of car owners have already bought it because they saw in it more value for their money.

"How does Firestone do it? How can they build so many extra value features into Firestone Standard Tires and yet sell them at such low prices?" The answer is simple. Firestone controls better-quality rubber and cotton supplies at their source, keeps manufacturing costs low by efficient factory methods and sells in such huge volume that distribution costs are held to a minimum.

Make no mistake about this! The Firestone Standard Tire gives you the blower protection of Firestone's patented Gum-Dipping process. Its scientifically designed tread gives greater non-skid protection and longer wear. And those two extra layers of Gum-Dipped cords under the tread guard against punctures.

Before you buy ANY tire at ANY price, see today's top tire value—the Firestone Standard Tire. Don't risk your life with thin, worn tires on your Fourth of July trip. Join the Firestone SAVE A LIFE Campaign today by equipping your car with a set of new Firestone Standard Tires.

Letters, Cards To Be Mailed From Clanton On Dedication Day

Letters and postal cards will leave Clanton on Saturday, July 3rd, bearing a postmark of that date, after being held for sometime, by request, according to Postmaster H. F. Downs.

Mr. Downs stated that shortly after the Clanton airport was being built, he began receiving cards and letters with requests that they be held until the airport was dedicated and mailed on that date. This started back in 1935, he stated.

So, in order that the recipients of these cards and letters may not be disappointed, Mr. Downs has made a special rubber stamp for stamping on the letters and cards, these words, "Gragg Field Dedication, Clanton, Ala., July 3rd and 4th."

Mr. Downs stated that these cards and letters were sent him by stamp collectors who will probably file the letters or stamps in their collections of rare postmarks, etc.

Farmers Become Suburban Residents

Thousands of farmers are riding to town on "three-way" roads paved by the State, counties and Works Progress Administration. Only a few of the 58,885 miles scheduled for completion by June 30 remained to be paved on June 15, giving Alabama more paving through use of relief labor than has been laid by relief labor in any State in the Union.

Above: The town of Elberta, in Baldwin county, which had its share of dust and mud before the "three-way" paving from Foley to Lillian Bridge gave the residents an all-weather road to market.

Below: A "depression cart" and two other types of traffic in Franklin county on the "three-way" roads between Russellville and Tusculuma.

"Electricity Paves The Way"

With its wonderful power, electricity is fast paving the future way for America. The age is being transformed overnight with a setting that is wonderful to the home. With its many devices and appliances the scientists have already given to the public and with their services continue to fit the needs for the people, it's to be seen what the next ten years will offer us.

When we think of the human energy that can be saved and the beauty and comfort that can be gained, it isn't any wonder that we, as a human race, will be elevated onto a higher realm of living. Our standards are being changed and along with the increase in responsibility that is thrust upon us daily, electricity must show us the way. With the washing machines and the ironer to help the housewife with her laundry problems, with the new dish washers, which both wash and dry the dishes, the new stoves of various types and for all occasions and small appliances that saves the energy of the housewife.

Housekeeping will be much easier than it has been in the past. It should no longer be a life of drudgery, but first the counties must get the power, with the power should come light, and when the home is being wired it should be wired, not for just the simple drop lights but in view of adding future electrical equipment, and the best time to do this proper wiring is at the beginning, not later, and then year by year we can add piece by piece to the household equipment. What a wonderful thing is electricity and how much it is meaning to our rural women of America.

Verbena Club Meets

The Verbena Club met at the home of Mrs. Joe Gaines on June 3. After singing "America" the Secretary read the minutes and called the roll. We had a good attendance with several visitors present.

We decided that each member shall give $5 each month to the treasury to be used as the club sees fit.

Mrs. Oscar Howard read a poem, "The Conqueror," which everyone enjoyed.

As our work is based on foods and diets the article "Eat and Be Cool" given by Mrs. Lucile Williams, was very interesting.

Another interesting article, "Let's Eat Outdoors," was given by Mrs. Louie Allen.

Publisher Of Coosa County Newspapers Named Editor Of The Alabama Farm News Recently

Montgomery, Ala.—In line with enlarged plans for service to the membership of the Alabama Farm Bureau, announcement was made Wednesday by Clifton Kirkpatrick, Executive Secretary of the Bureau, that Wayne E. Scrivener, Editor and Publisher of the Goodwater Enterprise and the Rockford Chronicle, has been appointed editor of the Alabama Farm Bureau News and publicity director for the Bureau. Mr. Scrivener will assume his new duties July 1.

"After a preliminary survey of the possibilities in farm organization and cooperatives," Mr. Scrivener said, "I have been impressed with the fact that despite the forward strides made by the organization and its constantly growing membership, the majority of Alabama farmers have not yet seen the desirability of cooperative effort. The unorganized farmer is the only producer in the world who buys his raw materials at retail and sells his products at wholesale. Such a state of affairs has brought about the condition in which the average farmer finds himself today."

"The steel workers, garment workers and others have organized and through collective bargaining, have lifted themselves by their bootstraps from abject poverty, while the average non-cooperative farmer goes his way, working from 'can't' and depending upon the generosity of a grasping world for a market for his goods. He pays what is asked for the things he needs, and takes what he can get for what he produces. If he makes a profit he is lucky; if he doesn't there is no one to care. Only through cooperatives can the Alabama Farmer demand and get that which he so justly deserves."

"It is my sincere hope that I will be able to bring to such farmers the information they need to make them see that only through cooperative effort can Alabama farmers lift themselves to the level reached by other organized groups."

Mr. Scrivener has been engaged in different branches of newspaper work for more than ten years, starting out in the circulation department of the Mobile Register and News-Item in 1926. In 1930 he became Secretary to Frederick I. Thompson, then publisher of those newspapers, and also served in the editorial department of those newspapers. When the Public Works Administration formed an organization in Alabama in 1933 he became secretary to the Alabama Advisory Board, which position he held until the Board was dissolved in 1934. Returning to newspaper work, Mr. Scrivener served again as Secretary to Mr. Thompson, publisher of the Alabama Journal, and took up journalistic activities. Later he became classified advertising manager of the Journal. In 1935 he resigned to accept a position with a Montgomery law firm. On May 1, 1936, he purchased the Coosa County newspapers from Billy Smith, publisher of The Chilton County News.

Mr. Scrivener has also had considerable experience in radio work and announced that plans are underway for a series of broadcasts over the various stations in the State with the view of bringing home to the farmer many of the plans of the Farm Bureau. He will be remembered in South Alabama as the author of a series of sketches, broadcast for three years over the Mobile station, known as "Highlights of Alabama History."

Readers of Birmingham, Anniston and Mobile papers will recall his daily illustrated feature "Alabama Anniversaries," depicting notable events in Alabama's past, which appeared in 1934-35.

"While we have been hard at work for the farmers of the State for 15 years," Mr. Kirkpatrick said in releasing the above announcement, "we now have our second wind, and the Alabama Farm Bureau, with its years of experience in fighting for the farmer is confident that under its extension plan more and bigger results will be obtained."

TEN FARMER PLANKS

In a published booklet the American Federation gives, among other valuable information, its platform for American agriculture. The ten planks of this platform, in condensed form, are as follows:

1. The support of sound and economical production practices.
2. Placing in the hands of producers the control of the sale of farm products.
3. Equality for farmers in the standard of living enjoyed.
4. Adjustments to give the farmer parity with others in purchasing power.
5. Development of schools, roads, rural electrification, churches, health agencies and all other factors contributing to an ideal community environment.
6. Farmer representation on all important public boards and commissions.
7. A national agricultural policy based

Medical Director Warns Of July Swimmers

Predicting that there will probably be more swimmers in the water on the fourth of July than on any other day of the summer, Dr. Robert A. Fraser, Chief Medical Director of the York Life Insurance Company of three simple rules which should be followed in preventing the large number of swimming accidents which occur every year during the summer months. Fraser has been making a specialty of hot weather accidents and ailments. "If everyone," he says, "remember the following three many lives will be spared and sorrow avoided: First, never go swimming alone; second, keep out of the water for at least one full hour after a meal; third, never dive into the water until you are sure of its depth. These are just 'common sense rules,' Fraser said, "yet failure to observe them probably accounted for the great majority of the 5,500 swimming fatalities estimated by the National Safety Council for the year 1935, the figures that are available. Many people are drowned every year because they insist on going swimming alone and are powerless to themselves when seized with a spasm or faced with some other sudden emergency. For keeping out of the water after eating, a life guard at the large semi-public swimming pool here in the East tells me that the other guards know that the busy period will occur in the afternoon between two and three o'clock, when diners rush from the city into the water and are seized with cramps. More people get into the water during that hour than at any other time during the day. And finally, the dangers of diving without first knowing the depth are obvious to every one."

MEMBER OF LEXINGTON FFA WINS 1937 ESSAY CONTEST

EMORY BEHEL
Emory Behel, 18-year-old junior at Lexington High School, has been declared the winner in the 1937 Essay Contest sponsored by the Alabama Association Future Farmers of America in cooperation with the Chilean Nitrate Educational Bureau.

More than 3,000 words were written by Behel in his winning essay, "How the Major Crops Grown on My Farm Are Fertilized."

District prize winners in the essay contest were also announced by George T. Sargent, assistant supervisor of agricultural education. They were designated as first, second, and third prize winners as follows: District No. 1; Dolphus Price, Falkville; Calvin Jones, Colbran; and Jim Dismukes, Prattville. District No. 2: George Owens, Aliceville; James Albert Graham, Reform; and Woodrow Albea, Marion. District No. 3: Edward Mosely, Gilberttown; Gray Tew, Slocomb; and Billy McAvoy, Jackson.

THE RAILROAD BURDEN

Owing to the loss of much freight and passenger traffic formerly enjoyed by the railroads, through the competition of automobiles, buses, trucks and airplanes, a situation has been created which makes it increasingly difficult for the railways to meet operating expenses and maintain efficient service.

The disposition to increase their burdens by further adverse legislation will, if persisted in, inevitably cause a partial or complete breakdown of the nation's splendid railway structure.

Federal, state and local governments are clamoring for more and more tax money with which to meet their mounting expenditures. This tax money must come from solvent enterprises, not from those which are bankrupt. As a recent writer aptly says:

"For the sake at least of our public revenues, let our governors and legislators and bureaus and all our host of material and spiritual pastors and masters give the hard-pressed agencies of commerce and manufacture a much needed opportunity to attend unhindered to their own business for a while, and see if they can not improve their own condition and that of the whole country at the same time."

In the present state of affairs the harassment of business and industry through oppressive taxation and regulation is another way to "kill the goose that lays the golden egg."

BE CAREFUL

Be careful of the little deeds you do, For oftentimes they echo back to you. Across the years,

The tiny note you sent one sorry day The coin that helped a beggar on his way.

Oh, always take the time to stop and say

The word that cheers!

Perhaps some little deed will bring you fame,

Perhaps the world will learn to love your name.

Because of tears you dried for others; and

When life is through Perhaps the little deeds you thought less'de

Will be a glowing monument to you For Countless years.

"Repent for the Kingdom of Heaven is at hand."

FACTS FROM THE RECORD

Written by
F. G. Stephens, Publisher of The Southern Democrat, Oneonta

The Homestead Exemption Law which under a recent decision of the Supreme Court, applies to taxes due and payable on October 1st, of this year, was passed by the 1936-1937 session of the legislature. The exemption applies to State taxes only.

The law defines a homestead as a dwelling occupied by the owner and consisting of not more than 160 acres or an assessed value of not more than $2,000.00.

A law passed by the Extra Session of 1936, requires that the owner in listing his property for taxes, shall list separately and value separately his homestead. Since this has not been done each home owner, in order to get credit on his tax receipt for taxes due this year must secure a certificate from the Tax Assessor, setting up his claim for exemption and present this certificate to the Tax Collector when he goes to pay his taxes. This certificate should be secured before October

BARBECUE AT RANDOLPH LAST SATURDAY IN JULY

We are planning on having a barbecue at Randolph for the benefit of the school the last Saturday in July—July 31, 1937. We hope to have an outstanding speaker and a double header baseball game. Watch the paper each week for further announcements.

I'm still anxious to teach a music school at Randolph beginning after "laying-by" time. This is not for personal profit, but the money will be used to pay for the school's piano. All those people who are interested in this should see me very soon and give me the number of children you expect to send. The admission will be $2 per pupil to be paid the first day of school. Please do not ask for credit since we are trying to pay for the piano. Plan now to have your money ready.—J. Hudson Williams.

1st. Every home owner who occupies that home is entitled to the exemption whether the home is assessed at $500.00 or $5,000.00, or more. The maximum deduction that any person is entitled to in any one year is $130.00. The minimum amount depends on the assessed value of the homestead.

The loss in revenue sustained by the State because of the Homestead Exemption Act is made up by receipts from the sales tax.

LIVESTOCK "GO TO COLLEGE" PROGRAM PLANNED IN STATE

Auburn, Ala.—Alabama's "Go to College" poultry project is proving so successful and popular with boys and girls that other forms of livestock, including beef and dairy cattle, hogs and sheep, are being included by leaders of the project.

It also has been included as one of the leading projects in the program for expanding and improving Alabama's livestock industry to bring about a more balanced agriculture in the state. P. O. Davis, director of the state extension service, and Dean M. J. Funchess, director of the state experiment station, are working with livestock specialists, including J. C. Grimes, head of the animal industry department, Alabama Polytechnic Institute, F. W. Burns, Dr. R. S. Sugg, extension livestock specialists, and John E. Ivey, extension poultryman, in formulating a program for helping farmers with their livestock problems.

That the "Go to College" poultry plan is proving popular is indicated by the fact that some 250 boys and girls are participating and are making a success with their work, says Mr. Ivey. "College presidents and extension service directors of 35 states also have written for full information on the project," he says.

The boys and girls carrying out the livestock projects are being urged to save their money for paying their way through college. The need of this being done is emphasized by 7000 letters from boys and girls to the higher institutions of learning in the state each year asking for work to help pay their way through college.

Columbia River Honors King Chinook

Bernice Warila, Queen of Columbia River Jubilee, surveys her Court.

MORE than a thousand salmon fishing boats joined in a colorful waterfront Jubilee celebration at Astoria, Oregon, headquarters of the river, on the opening day of the salmon season this year, celebrating 75 years of commercial fishing on the river.

A parade and race of the fishing fleet featured the morning ceremony at which all Astoria turned out to honor its greatest industry. At high noon, the Columbia River's thousands of fishermen laid their vast gillnets—each net 1400 feet long and made of linen twine—continuing fishing through the day and the night.

Queen of the Columbia River's Salmon Jubilee was Bernice Warila, blonde, gray-eyed, of Finnish extraction, granddaughter of a pioneer river fisherman.

The opening day of the salmon-fishing season on the river this year netted a record catch of the highly-prized King Chinook.

TWO LOCAL PEOPLE ARE STUDYING AT FLORENCE

Florence, June 28—Mrs. Louise Chambers of Maplesville and Houston Robinson of Verbena are doing intensive work in the Training School of the Florence State Teachers College this summer. ALABAMA GOING FORWARD IN BANG'S DISEASE WORK

Bang's disease control work continues to go forward in Alabama with the Federal Government paying owners up to $25 a head for the destruction of diseased grade cattle and up to $50 a head for diseased registered purebreds.

The owner also gets the salvage value of the cattle destroyed.

"Probably one of the greatest disadvantages we have in Alabama in fighting the disease is the ponds or pools that, in some instances, seem to be necessary for use as water supply for cattle," says Dr. R. E. Jackson, inspector in charge of the work in Alabama. "Of course, when cattle have access to these pools they become a serious source of infection. Getting rid of the disease under such conditions would naturally take a longer time than where a good running water supply was available."

New Electric Rate Comes To Clanton

This month Clanton business houses begin enjoying the new low "commercial rate" of Alabama Power Company, which became effective with June billing. Under this new rate, probably 50 per cent of the company's commercial customers will enjoy some reduction in their rate. The reduction in rate will be greater for some than others, depending entirely upon the volume of electricity used and the nature of the service to which it is put. Under this revision and simplification of the rate schedule, no customer will have his rate increased.

The new rate is particularly attractive to business concerns who will use electric cooking, refrigeration and air conditioning equipment, as well as those who wish to modernize their stores and offices with adequate, more efficient light. With the new lower rate, this additional equipment can be used with only a modest increase in the amount of the monthly bill.

FORMER CHILTON GIRL WEDS

An announcement of much interest to her many friends in Chilton County is that of the marriage of Miss Ruth Roebuck to George P. Reagan Jr., which took place very quietly Saturday evening at the home of the bride on Bull Street in Savannah, Ga. The ceremony was performed by Rev. W. A. Saliferro, Pastor of Bull Street Baptist church.

The house was beautifully decorated with palms, ferns and baskets of gladiolas.

Mrs. C. R. LeCroy, who was her sister's matron of honor and only attendant, wore a dress of dusty pink chiffon made on simple lines and a wide brim leghorn hat. Her corsage was of yellow rosebuds.

The bride wore a dress of cornflower blue faille silk crepe, made on princess lines with white button trim. Her hair was an off-the-face model of white crepe made with pleated crown. Her corsage was of pink rosebuds.

Mr. Reagan's best man was his brother, Thomas H. Reagan.

Mrs. Robert N. Roebuck, mother of the bride, wore a chiffon dress of navy blue with white accessories.

A small reception was held immediately following the ceremony. After a short wedding trip, Mr. and Mrs. Reagan will be at home to their friends at 2207 Barnard Street, Savannah, Ga., where they have taken an apartment.

Miss Sara Maude Pattillo, attractive daughter of Circuit Clerk and Mrs. J.C. Pattillo, of Verbena, left Monday for New York City, where she will do advanced studying at the Columbia University. She will be away for several weeks.

DEDICATION

the front page of this issue of the News, gives a good idea of what visitors may expect. Walton Petee, who is scheduled to make parachute jumps from ships high in the air, will thrill the crowds with his daring.

The mass flight of all ships present over the City of Clanton will be a sight worth seeing. It will be the largest number of ships ever to sail over Clanton at one time.

The actual dedication ceremony, with Cohen E. Stapp, of Selma, formerly of Clanton, as master of ceremonies will not consume over one hour, and all ships will remain on the ground during this part of the program which will officially name the airport Gragg Field in honor of Dr. V. J. Gragg, well known physician and surgeon of Clanton, whose untiring efforts in behalf of Clanton and the securing of the fine airport, have brought outstanding recognition to this city and county.

Aerobatic Flying

The Alabama National Guard planes will put on a show that will put kinks in the minds of those trying to watch their aerobatic flying high in the sky. The parachute jump by Mercer Cox, famed stunt flyer and jumper is a feature of the first day. When Odell Garrison, of Birmingham, starts flying Saturday morning, he will show what can be done with an airplane when the motor stops in mid-air. This is called "dead-stick" maneuvers.

But, when Faye Lucille Cox, jumps from the plane of the Wood Chevrolet Co., of Birmingham, and from a height of ten thousand feet, the thrill of a lifetime will come to those watching this daring young woman. She will fall thru the air from that height and will not open her parachute until she gets within approximately 1,500 feet of the ground. Only by a trail of smoke will the eye be able to follow her as she leaves the plane at 10,000 feet in the air.

For Sunday

The first thing on program Sunday morning will also be interesting and instructive. Those attending the dedication will be given the privilege of inspecting the airplanes on the field and will also be given the chance of taking flights. There will be a small charge for these passenger flights over the city.

Clip out the program on the front page and bring it to Clanton with you Saturday and Sunday, so that you will be able to keep up with what is going on.

ROAD DEPT.

I was appointed road supervisor of Chilton County, Alabama, duly qualified and commissioned. Section 5 of said act provides in part as follows:

"Section 5. That the duty and authority as to the building, maintenance or repairing of public roads and bridges in Chilton County, Alabama, be and the same is hereby vested in said Road Supervisor, subject only to the control of said Commissioner's Court of Chilton County, Alabama, as herein set forth. And to that end said Road Supervisor is given the duty, power and authority to employ or hire teams, machines, trucks and all necessary employees, laborers or helpers to properly construct, maintain and repair the roads and bridges of said County."

"Under the authority given me under this Act, I appointed three district road foremen who have been serving under me for the past eleven months. On April 29, 1937, the Commissioners Court of Chilton County passed a resolution dismissing my three district road foremen. A copy of said resolution is attached hereto and reads as follows:

"It appearing to the Court that the County is not deriving benefit from the services of the four District foremen or District Supervisors in proportion to their salary, and also that there is a duplication in their services. It was moved by Commissioner Bean and seconded by Commissioner Oden that the services of said four District foremen or District Supervisors be discontinued, beginning May 1, 1937 and further that the County Supervisor and said District foremen be notified of this and said motion being put to the Court the same was adopted."

"I am continuing my three district road foremen in the employ of the County and am personally guaranteeing their wages."

You request my opinion: "I wish your advice as to whether I have authority to hire and fire the district road foremen under the Act, supra, or whether the Commissioners Court has the right to fire or cause the removal of the district road foremen."

Answering your question, it is my opinion that under Act No. 3, H. No. 3, approved March 10, 1936, (Local Acts 1936, P. 4), you, as the Road Supervisor of Chilton County, have the sole authority to hire and fire the district road foremen and the Court of County Commissioners of Chilton County does not have authority to fire or cause the removal of said road foremen.

Section 5 of said Act No. 3, H. No. 3, approved March 10, 1936, (Local Acts 1936, P. 4) provides in part as follows:

"Section 5. That the duty and authority as to the building, maintenance or repairing of public roads and bridges in Chilton County, Alabama, be and the same is hereby vested in said

CEMETERY CLEANING AT MT. CARMEL CHURCH, 2ND

The News has been requested to announce that there will be a cemetery cleaning at Mt. Carmel Church (Adams) Friday, July 2nd. All persons interested please come on this day set and bring your tools for work.

Lloyd Bell, of Atlanta, Ga., is spending several days as the guest of J.D. Bell, of the Murray-Bell Hardware Co.

Road Supervisor, subject only to the control of said Commissioners Court of Chilton County, Alabama, as herein set forth. And to that end said Road Supervisor is given the duty, power and authority to employ or hire teams, machines, trucks and all necessary employees, laborers or helpers to properly construct, maintain and repair the roads and bridges of said County. *

Section 8 of the Act is as follows:

"Section 8. That the authority of said Road Supervisor shall be limited to the expenditures of such funds for the purpose of construction, maintenance or repairs of the public highways and bridges of Chilton County as may be set aside and appropriated by the Commissioners Court of Chilton County, Alabama, as hereinafter provided. That within one month preceding the first Monday in February, May, August and November the Commissioners Court of Chilton County, Alabama, shall by order or resolution spread upon the minutes of said Court fix and determine the amount of funds which will be available for the purpose of building, maintaining and constructing the public roads of Chilton County, for the following three months period, and which amount, other than the salary of the said Road Supervisor and his necessary expenses shall not be exceeded by him in constructing, maintaining or repairing the public roads in Chilton County during said period, provided, however, that said Commissioners Court is authorized from time to time within such period to increase the amount allowed to be expended by the said Road Supervisor during any such period."

I am of the opinion that the road foreman may be discharged only by the Road Supervisor of Chilton County. Under the Local Act the authority to employ is vested in the Road Supervisor, and the authority to employ carries with it the authority to discharge.

See opinion of Attorney General to Hon. Saxton P. Payner, Judge of Probate Houston County, under date of April 28, 1937, a copy of which is enclosed for your convenience.

In the case of Touart v. State ex. rel. Callaghan, 173 Ala. P. 453, the Supreme Court of Alabama said:

"If the appointing power is given the right to fix the term during which appointee is to hold office, then of course, the right of appointee terminates at the end of the will of the appointing power; that is, the appointing power can remove him at pleasure, unless the act or statute authorizing his appointment provides otherwise."

After a careful study of the Local Act, it is my opinion that "Subject only to the control of the Commissioners Court of Chilton County, as herein set forth," means that the Court may limit the expenditures of the Road Supervisor by not appropriating the necessary funds, but that the Commissioners Court cannot hire or discharge any of his employees.

In the case of State ex. rel. McIntyre v. McEachern, 166 Sou. 36, the Supreme Court of Alabama, in construing a similar local statute said:

"Nothing will be presumed in favor of the jurisdiction of a court with general and limited powers. When general or unlimited jurisdiction is not specially conferred on the court of county commissioners, its powers are special and limited by the grant, and its proceedings must show on their fact that it acted within the limits and terms of the grant."

The premises considered, it is therefore my opinion that under the Local Act the Road Supervisor of Chilton County is the only one who has authority to hire and fire the district foremen, and the Commissioners Court does not have the authority to fire or cause the removal of said district road foremen.

Yours very truly,
A. A. CARMICHAEL,
Attorney General.

A Public Responsibility

This newspaper is the business in which the writer makes his living. But it is something more than just a private enterprise to be operated entirely according to the whims and fancies of the owner. In a measure it is a public institution, founded and maintained to further the welfare of our community.

To publish the news without bias or prejudice; to present editorial views on local, state and even national issues, as we view them; to keep the activities of the wide-awake citizens of Chilton County before all of the people in this territory, and to further in every possible way everything which will serve the spiritual, cultural, or financial welfare of our community—this is the goal we keep constantly before us.

The manner in which we handle this job is limited by two things. First the ability of the editor. Second, the support he receives from the citizens of his community. With sincere support, he can go a long way in reaching the objectives which he holds to be in the interest of public welfare.

Tax Evasion

The members of the United States Senate are learning about the clever devices men of great wealth employ to evade their share of the nation's tax burden. But as yet we have heard nothing about two important avenues through which great fortunes or substantial incomes escape part or all of their just share of taxes. Perhaps the fact that all office holders in both State and Federal governments are among those favored by existing laws makes this phase a touchy subject.

Two important outlets through which incomes escape full taxation are the laws which exempt both State and Federal employees from some income taxes. Federal employees pay no Federal taxes. And some state employees are exempt from both state and Federal taxes. Significant is the fact that some salaries as high as $20,000 are among those so favored.

One other great avenue through which income escapes taxation is tax free securities. Persons of great wealth who are content with a comparatively small yield on their capital can evade all forms of income tax through careful investments. It is argued, of course, that municipal, State and Federal bonds wield a low rate of interest because of this and the government is thus permitted to hire capital at a small charge. This, it is said, is one form of taxation. If such securities were taxed the government would be forced to pay a higher rate of interest and the condition of the treasury would be the same.

This argument sounds good, but in view of the vast accumulation of government securities, the subject bears closer scrutiny. We believe that the Senators might give it at least a passing thought.

But we can find no argument of any force to justify the practice of exempting State and Federal employees from income taxes. Why a salary of five or ten thousand dollars though it is derived from the taxpayers should not carry its proportionate share of the tax burden is one of the eternal mysteries of the present system. It seems to us merely a matter of common justice that the man who enjoys the comfort and security of a fat Government job should be willing to pay his share of the cost of maintaining that government.

Perhaps it is a bit indelicate to bring this up now in view of the fact that the tax evasion situation is being investigated by men who draw big pay from the Federal treasury. Perhaps this explains, too, why the subject is treated only with official silence.

European nations still talk about security, but they haven't thought much about it when they're at war.

Nations And Individuals

If we acted as individuals with the same brutality and stupidity that characterizes international relations, what a hideous world this would be. Imagine a comparable situation to the recent Spanish crisis. Suppose a man waylaid you from ambush, and struck you over the head with a club. You would not be severely censured if you should return the insult with your own fists.

But assume instead that you adopted the attitude of nations. Suppose in revenge you went to his home in the dead of night, pulled his small children from their beds and gave them a brutal beating. Would civilized men welcome you into their society thereafter?

But when nations act thus it becomes merely an international situation. A German warship is bombed by irresponsible and reckless soldiers of fortune fighting for the Spanish loyalist cause. The ship was damaged and twenty-four sailors lost their lives.

In revenge, as we all know, the seaport town of Almiria was bombed. Its streets were converted into a shambles. Some thirty citizens were killed and a hundred more injured. These maimed and slaughtered civilians were in no way responsible for the depredation against German shipping but they were compelled to pay the price.

This is the way of international affairs. Under similar circumstances Italy, France, Russia or possibly any other nation might have taken similar action. The point we stress is the barbarity of relations between nations.

In the face of such irresponsible ruthlessness how can we even hope that war, the scourge of modern civilization, may be effectively outlawed.

Better Schools—Lower Costs

A proposition to economize in local town and county government at the price of poorer education for our children would not interest many of us. A plan to economize without hampering education might meet with more favorable consideration. But a program to economize in school administration and still provide better education should meet with favor.

Happily there is such a possibility. This lies in consolidation of school districts. And here we must add that consolidation does not require necessarily the construction of new, modern high cost structures. Many counties in this nation have given the subject some thought and study and have discovered that something of real value in this direction can be accomplished without new school construction in rural districts.

We learned recently of one county where the number of schools was reduced to a third of the original assortment without the necessity of erecting a single new building. If this can be accomplished in some counties, the subject might be given some further consideration here in Chilton County.

There is one argument more cogent than mere economy which should prompt the study. A good school, staffed by able teachers, provides better educational facilities than a small school, poorly attended, headed by an inexperienced teacher. A school of less than ten pupils, so authorities in education declare, is not really a school but a place where boys and girls are coached. It lacks the competitive spirit under which pupils are able to do the most effective work.

Now that economy is again coming in for consideration, it would seem that this idea merits attention.

His Policy Is Sound

The modern and enterprising merchant never questions the need and value of advertising. It fits naturally into his plan of operation.

When he receives a new consignment of merchandise he finds it advisable to inform the public of that fact through the columns of his local newspaper. When he prepares for a new season and finds his shelves stocked with goods which will soon be out of date, he knows that good merchandising demands that he move this stock as quickly as possible. He realizes that it never pays to carry it over to another season. To accomplish this end he naturally reduces the price and advertises the fact.

This is why the experienced shopper knows that one can always get better merchandise and better values from the merchant who uses printers ink and newspaper space.

Dictators are so sure of themselves that they are continually enlarging their body guards.

MORAL ECHOES.

D. W. Haskew

A well dressed lady sat before me in the church auditorium and knowing something of her wealth, I decided to look her way as the collection plate went by. A strong plea had been made for a worthy cause and I was counting on this lady doing something worth while. As the plate drew near she picked up her purse that must have cost not less than twenty-five dollars. She fumbled about in that purse with her hand and not less than five hundred dollars worth of diamonds sparkled in my eye. My hopes went the way of the winds as I saw that diamond bedecked hand drop a twenty-five cent coin into the plate. She puckered the corners of her mouth as she resumed her pose before the altar of God. I could hear her saying, "When we asunder part, it gives me inward pain." I am quite certain that I should not comment on this scene, but I wanted to walk down the aisle and shake my finger in her face and say "You old stingy it!"

One day I saw a little lad as he was running with all the energy of his body. He had his eyes fixed upon his shadow before him. As he went by me I said, "Sonny, what are you chasing?" He replied, "I am trying to catch my shadow." I do not know how long he continued the chase and where the chase carried him, but I am quite certain that he never caught his shadow. To the most of us that seems like childish foolishness and yet it is more foolish than when we see folks running their tongues out after pleasure. You may run after pleasure with all possible speed, but it is like your shadow, it is just ahead. No one ever gets much out of the race for pleasure and all because he wears himself out in the pursuit. The end of the rainbow is always just ahead.

In company with a guide I made the rounds of a shirt factory. A thousand men and women were working like bees in a clover patch. To me the roar of the machinery was hard on the ear. I noticed that the guide could talk to the employee and they understood every word he said. If I spoke to him he would understand what I said, but when I was spoken to all I could see was the moving of the lips. I could not hear a word. After we had gone into the stillness of the open air he told me that he was accustomed to the noise that he could hear better among the machinery than he could in the silence on the outside. Whether we know it or not, we are living in a noisy world and some folks think that God is not speaking to them and all because they cannot hear his voice. When we become accustomed to God's voice and accustomed to the noises of the world we can hear God as he speaks to us. It takes much culture and training of the soul for us to be able to hear God's voice at all times in a noisy busy world. The difference between a Christian and one who is not a Christian is seen in that the Christian can hear and understand God's voice in a busy life.

A friend of mine had a colored boy to trim her hedge row. During the time of the trimming it was very evident that the servant knew but little about his job. When he had completed the task he knocked at the back door for a settlement. He was asked how much he charged and his price was all out of reason for the botchy job that he had done. The lady ventured to ask "Rastus, why do you charge so much for such a poor job?" The young Negro replied, "Missus, you must be done forgot dat my Daddy am de best hedge row trimmer in de city." He told the truth but his father did not do that job and it was not well done. There are folks in this world, other than that negro boy, who are going around trying to capitalize on the goodness of their parents. "Why sir, I had the best Daddy in de world," says many a sorry, no account church member. Because your Daddy could do a first class job of trimming a hedge row is no sign that the son can do the same. Better not try to ride your parents until you have proven your own skill.

One day John Wesley was carrying a large sum of money that had been entrusted to him. As he rode along a dense, dark woodland scene loomed in his path. There came over him an overwhelming sense of danger as he approached the woods and the old man stopped his steed and got down, off his horse and knelt in prayer. Then he arose and went on his way. Years later Wesley was called to visit a dying man and heard this story from his lips, "I know you sir" confessed the dying man, "At one time I was hid in a dense forest of trees by the roadside where you were to pass with money in your possession, and I was determined to rob you. I was watching you closely as you approached the woods and I saw you get down off your horse and knelt in prayer. Then I saw you as you mounted and came on toward me, but there were two of you. An armed attendant rode by your side and I dared not try to rob you. Yes, I know you. You are God's man and I am glad that you have come." Prayer does things that we know nothing about.

Bureau Estimates

Cotton Carryover
Auburn, Ala.—A carryover of about 4,400,000 bales of American cotton in the United States on July 31 this year is estimated by the Bureau of Agriculture Economics in a report to P. O. Davis, director of the Alabama Extension Service. This will be about 1,000,000 bales less than the carryover on the corresponding date last year. World cotton production in 1936-37 is tentatively estimated at 30,900,000 bales, of which the farm production is placed at 10,500,000 bales. Both figures are record high, the bureau says.

Letters To The Editor

SCHRECKLICHEIT
"Dear Mr. Editor:
"I hear quite a bit of discussion regarding the 'deplorable' condition of the roads in Chilton County, under the present set up in the county and would like to comment on this 'deplorable' condition.
"I drive an ordinary car of well known make and was never stalled or had to be towed out of the mud. Being able to travel over every mile of public road in Chilton County at any time has rarely been possible under the former set up in this county.
"In comparison with other counties, Chilton's roads are up to par. The citizens to whom I have talked to regarding the roads are all unanimous in their opinion that the road Supervisor and his staff are functioning in perfect order, and are well pleased with results, despite those who persist in tossing a wrench in the gears.
"Now that we have the question of hiring the boys and the tractor affair straight, may we have more cooperation and less child's play.
"Of a truth, I say unto you, Mr. Editor, that I have in life fought two kinds of warfare, one kind in 1918 and one in 1931, and strange as it seems, he who fought with bullets and bayonets, fought the cleaner fight.
"To the supervisor and his staff, we say, we have ridden over every foot of your work in our county and know it is there.
"We who have tasted of the bitter of personal vengeance, salute you.
"J. H. PIER."

IN MEMORY OF OUR HUSBAND AND FATHER, MR. J. A. SIMS
It seems like a dream, and want to awaken
To find that he really has not been taken,
But we realize only too well that he's gone,
And we feel so burdened, so lost and alone.
For he was a rock of strength to lean upon in time of joy or stress;
An understanding, loyal soul, a heart of tenderness.
We miss him more than we can ever say.
Only time can ease the pain caused by his going away.

All who are interested in helping to clean off the cemetery at Mr. Carmel, better known as the Childress cemetery, bring your tools Wednesday morning, July 14th.—Mr. Phil Childress.

The Music School at Randolph seems to be growing very rapidly. We are looking forward to a great time. No parents may hesitate to send their children because of boisterous or unbecoming behavior of any pupil. Any boy or girl who cannot conduct himself in a sportsmanlike manner is requested not to enter. Any child who has been to literary school one year is old enough to be in the music school. I think now that the school will begin the 26th of July. The admission will be 2.00 to be paid the first day of school. This is to be strictly a cash proposition. Please do not ask for credit since we're trying to pay for our piano. Begin now to prepare your money and you'll be through with it when you have paid your $2.00 per pupil, because I'll pay for the rest. Please bear in mind that we're planning to have a barbecue here July 31, 1937. I have already invited two very outstanding speakers for the day. Watch the papers for further announcements.
Very truly yours,
J. HUDSON WILLIAMS.

...the FFA chapter at Vernon, Alabama. Shallow row cultivation often enough to control weeds is recommended for cotton. Three well-timed shallow cultivations produced the most cotton over a five-year period in tests conducted by the Alabama Experiment Station. Consumer demand for farm products during the next several months should remain at approximately the present level, says the Bureau of Agricultural Economics. Cotton bags are used for packaging about two-thirds of the cotton shipped in the United States but the trend in the use of cotton for this purpose has been downward during the past decade.

A Pie to Please the Palate

Meringue topped pineapple raisin filling in crisp, golden crust suggests a modern version of the old-fashioned favorite—rain pie.

To add new allure and greater palate appeal to raisin pie substitute Hawaiian pineapple juice for part of the water used in preparing the filling. The pineapple juice adds a tartness and zest totally lacking when all water is used. Try the following tested recipe when making the pineapple juice substitution.

Hawaiian Raisin Pie
 1 egg, well beaten 1/4 cup seedless raisins (soaked for 2 hours in 1/2 cup water)
 1 cup sugar 1 1/2 cups Hawaiian Pineapple Juice
 1/2 cup milk 3/4 cup water
 2 tablespoons lemon juice

To well beaten egg add sifted dry ingredients, mix until smooth and add grated lemon rind and juice. Mix pineapple juice and water and stir into egg mixture. Add drained raisins. Cook over hot water until thick and clear, about 20 minutes, stirring constantly at first and then occasionally. Cool and pour into baked ten-inch pie shell. Top with meringue.

If meringue topping is used prepare meringue as follows: Beat 3 egg whites until stiff, add sugar, 2 tablespoons at a time, until six tablespoons have been added. Beat after each addition of sugar. Spread lightly on pie filling and bake in a moderately slow oven (325 degrees F.) until meringue is puffy and a golden brown.

Miss Shepherd Finds Mexico Most Interesting; Was One Of First Stops On Extended Tour

NOTE: The following is the first of a series of articles written especially for the News by Miss Ruth Shepherd, charming young lady of Clanton, who is on an extended tour through many countries. She is now in Honolulu where she acted as maid of honor in a wedding which was one of the outstanding social events of the season there.

By Ruth Shepherd

My first real visit into Mexico turned out to be a very pleasant one indeed. I had the rare opportunity of not only seeing some of the country but also of visiting in the Mexican homes in Chihuahua. It was exciting meeting people of a different nationality and speaking a foreign language. A great many of the people I met, however, spoke beautiful English and practically all of them could at least understand it.

The houses to which I went were different from any I had seen before and very interesting. The first was the Martinez home. Sr. Martinez is Secretary of the Treasury of Chihuahua state and he and his family are most attractive. Their house is one of the typically Spanish ones. Instead of having a yard in the front, it is built around a patio in the center. From the outside you see only a straight wall with grilled windows, built right against the side wall. The inside is quite luxurious with several living rooms and sun parlors around the patio. This inside court is filled with flowers and palms.

The other home in which I visited the Revilla's is more nearly like an American house from the outside. It has a small front yard, but most of the grounds are in the back. This back is divided into three yards. The first has not only flowers and palms and cactus plants, but a number of the most beautiful cypress trees I've ever seen. They are enormously tall and not much larger around than a person's body. In the second yard a new swimming pool is being built.

The Revilla home has only one story, but the rooms are so large and the walls so thick that the house is almost as cool as if it were air-conditioned.

One of the most interesting spots to me was Sra. Revilla's sun parlor in which there were twenty or thirty kinds of rare birds. Most of them are very highly colored and quite beautiful. In addition to these, she has a pet white canary and the proverbial parrot, who ignores you if he doesn't like you and screams at you if you make him mad.

Chihuahua has a great variety in the types of houses. There is the old Gomery place, which is practically an ancient palace in appearance and right down the street from it a modernistic house that is just as "ultra" as any that the Chicago World's Fair presented. Then, of course, there are the abodes. The countryside itself lives up to the old "land of contradictions" saying, too. When we first drove over into Mexico, it was just about like that part of Texas, of course across the Rio Grande (the famous river between Juarez and El Paso) by the way, reminds you of nothing more than a creek. It looks as though it could be easily waded. After not so many miles, though, the country turned into a real desert with its sand dunes and no vegetation except a few cactus plants. It wasn't long, however, before we came to some of the best grazing land in all Mexico. This lasted into Chihuahua City. The mountains, too, vary greatly. Those near the road were the bald sort you see all over that part of the country, while those higher ones in the distance, I was told, were covered with magnificent pines.

One thing that seemed strange to me was the lack of towns on the way. There were only two very small ones in that whole distance of two hundred and forty miles. And not in either one of those would you dare eat anything or drink any of the water. (Water is even hard to get in Chihuahua City.) So we took a big box of sandwiches and cakes and a thermos jug of ice tea and had our picnic lunch.

We were really royally entertained in the city itself. We were served seven and eight course Mexican dinners, including frijoles (a sort of mashed bean dish) papayas, mangos, and guayabas, all native fruits and very delicious.

Cars were put at our disposal. I was amazed at the number of new big cars there. In fact, there are more of these in Chihuahua City than in El Paso. Every well-to-do family has six or eight cars.

We went to "dancants" and other social affairs at the Casino and the Foreign Club. These are the two largest clubs there and both are very nice. The Casino is particularly attractive. Downstairs, on the left, is a long narrow hall. The floor is marble and lined all around the wall are delicate gold and needlepoint chairs. This is where the afternoon tea-dances are held. Upstairs is the enormous main ballroom, made even lovelier by pinkish lights.

Two of the most interesting things I saw in the whole town were the Tamara Indians and the Charros. The former live in the hills near Chihuahua City and come into town every now and then. You see some of the weird combinations of old and Indian dress and a bit of discarded white man's clothing. One, for instance, had on a breech-cloth, moccasins, and a dilapidated top hat. He was also carrying a cane. Another had on a long shirt and a pair of gum-soled shoes.

The charro costumes, however, just as lovely as the others, are ridiculous. It is an organization dedicated to preserving the old Spanish traditions and customs. Only the aristocratic and wealthy can belong. Their costumes are called charros, too. They are very typical clothes that were worn by the old "Dons" and very elaborate with gold and silver thread. One man has a sombrero that is alone worth fifteen hundred dollars. You feel as though you had really seen Old Mexico when you see these men riding through the streets on their fine horses.

A number of people around here have very fine, and very intelligent horses. There is the General, for instance, who has been uncomfortably fat for years. He finally eliminated the trouble of mounting by simply training his horse to spread his front feet out and go nearly down to the ground. Then the General sits down. Most of the people in Chihuahua City are still bitter toward Villa, I found. The city was sacked and looted by his men and most of the prominent families there lost a great deal during the Revolution. We saw a very old Mexican woman who was supposed to be Pancho Villa's mother. It was exciting even if we weren't sure it was the truth.

About the last glimpse we got of the town itself as we drove out was the old Cathedral facing a large square. While it isn't the most elaborate or priceless cathedral in Mexico, by any means, it is still quite lovely and very impressive. It seems to really dominate the town.

I had enjoyed my stay so much that I really hated to leave Chihuahua. I hope that I shall get back there again some day, or at least, that I shall see some of those people again. They are really as charming and gracious as the traditional "Old South" in "Romantic Old Mexico."

"The Man Who-o-o"
 Tales and Traditions from American Political History
 BY FRANK E. HAGEN
 BY ELMO SCOTT WATSON

CROPS AND ELECTIONS
 IF THE democratic party is dubious about the 1938 election, it may be because of the drought.

History of our political campaigns indicates that the size of crops has an important bearing on national elections. In other words, if there be a scarcity of farm products the party in power is turned out of office.

None can say that this is an infallible rule, yet there are notable periods and events which tend to prove its truth. A seven years' drought, for example, starting in 1833, is the first widespread destruction of crops of which there is record. At the end of it, Martin Van Buren was voted out of office and the Whigs came in with a great show of strength.

A second drought occurred shortly before the Civil war, but the latter event dominated, of course, every trend of political development for that period. In 1874 there was a large Republican majority in the lower branch of congress, but there had been drought years immediately preceding, and Democratic congressmen were elected in droves.

Beginning in 1887, ten years showed a deficiency of rainfall and crops naturally suffered. It was during this period, perhaps more than in any other, that the American voter practiced assiduously his right to vote parties in and out of power.

Conditions may be changed today. The Democratic party, which happens to be in the saddle, has survived one of the country's worst crop years, 1934. There are political observers who assert that we are too much an industrial nation today for Old Man Weather to lay such a heavy hand on political fortunes.

Only time will tell if this estimate of the situation is correct. When this is written, however, indications point clearly that burning, dry winds have destroyed a large part of the spring wheat crop in the Dakotas and Montana.

Industrial nation or not, it is at least an even bet that when the campaign warms up particular attention will be paid to those three states by Messrs. Hamilton and Farley—but to mention Congressman Lemke, who hails from that area himself.

Arthur Cook, Montgomery textile executive, was chosen treasurer, and C.L. Walton, LaFayette publisher, as temporary secretary. Fourteen vice-presidents, five from state-at-large and one each from the state's nine congressional districts were elected with one yet to be chosen from the state-at-large, and one from the Fifth District. Vice-presidents from state-at-large elected are: Alger-n Blair, Montgomery; Karl Langrebe, Birmingham; Donald Comer; B. Dunlap, Mobile, and Sam F. Claiborne, Birmingham. - 2—Fabricate at home the state's natural and raw products of farm and quarry and thereby provide employment for thousands of Alabama.
- 3—Provide year-round market for Alabama grown farm and garden products, increase buying power, come of agriculture, and lighten culture with increased industry.
- 4—Conservation and development of Alabama's forests and promote reforestation. Develop paper industry forests to the highest public benefit.

A series of meetings will begin at the Baptist Church Sunday, July 11. The pastor, Rev. G.G. Williams, will be assisted by the Rev. Jas. Avery of Prattville. Everyone is cordially invited to attend.

Mrs. B.W. Thompson, a son, Tommie, are the guests of Mr. and Mrs. E.W. Woddyard.

Probably no science has benefited more from a greater mass of observation than that of medicine. It is said that some of the prescriptions may possibly have certain curative value although bearing ridiculous at first glance.

A recent writer declares that the brood of red ants was once used in intestinal disorders, and that research finds that the formic acid ants is a strong antiseptic, which have killed intestinal germs.

Some believe that the sting of wasps relieve rheumatism, and insects also secrete formic acid, which through the formic acid, may possibly have a beneficial effect.

Baked trout, ground to powder, used by the Greeks as a remedy for heart disease. Chemists find it is certain alkaloids in the trout, which act as a heart stimulant.

Some other old alleged remedies have not yet been satisfactorily explained, however. Among the number are: a herring to each leg, say; eating a dried and powdered cat for epilepsy; carrying a cat in the pocket or sleeping with a cat for rheumatism; and a cat for the removal of a stone.

Considering the mystery which early surrounded most diseases, it is not surprising that many remedies have been suggested and applied. And while we have made progress in medicine and the highest skill is still in the few maladies that have been since the dawn of civilization.

Over 1,000 tenants bought the Federal land banks in March, and April this year.

That's What I Think

Saul M. Goldstein

The anniversary of the signing of the Declaration of Independence has come and gone; the usual fanfare of firecrackers and patriotic oratory has swept the country and gone back to rest until another twelve months shall have passed.

For Clanton and Chilton County, the date this year had a little different meaning than on previous occasions. Standing, in 1937, on the threshold of the broad avenue of aviation which leads into a future at which we can only guess, we have set our paving blocks into that avenue; we have planned for the future. We have an airport and we have dedicated it to the air traffic which some day will pass through its busy portals.

We have planned well for the future in this particular line. Certainly nothing could have done more for the cause of aviation in this county than the grand dedication and the air show to which we devoted two full days.

What has been done in one field of endeavor by a community minded to do so, can be achieved in other fields also. It is certainly not unreasonable to suggest that a county which could plan and accomplish the establishment of a modern airport, with a large modern hangar, should plan and accomplish the establishment of other public works which would be at least of equal benefit to the community; and which might be more adaptable to immediate use.

Two projects stand before the people of this county still in the dream stage. Neither is impossible of achievement. Both are in fact and in the light of modern life necessities.

Project number one: A modern, up-to-date public library. It is hardly necessary to say that man cannot live by bread alone; our minds as well as our stomachs demand food; and, to continue the simile, if you will not give them the proper foods, they will take what they can get. If they are to develop with the proper and necessary growth, however, they must have the proper and necessary foods. Those foods are good books. So long as we deny to ourselves and our children access to good literature, just so long shall we present, as a community, improperly developed minds and weak cultures. People who can raise the funds and do the work necessary to build an airport, and then stage a big show for its dedication are surely possessed of the initiative and means to establish a public library.

Project number two: A swimming pool and recreation center. The more fortunate members of our community who can afford to do so may be found during these hot summer days in far-off fields of entertainment. One of our citizens told me that on a visit to the swimming pool at Prattville, no small distance from here, he counted no less than twenty residents of Clanton whom he personally recognized; and that on a week-day! Are we so poor in purse and spirit that we must continue to ... to seek such ... other communities, and our poorer neighbors to do without?

It is told that ... of the king seeking relief, the famous Queen Marie Antoinette was disturbed by the noise. Naively she turned to one of her attendants and asked the ... the disturbance. The attendant replied, "They have no bread." In wonderment, the queen pronounced the speech by which she is best remembered to posterity. "If they have no bread let them eat cake."

In a way, it may be ... rather ... fetched comparison, but it does seem rather unusual in an enlightened community of America 1937 ... to those ... goal is ... "Here is the nice cake of aviation. How can you be so bold as to ask for such simple things that any little old town can furnish when you have something big and beautiful like a brand-new airport?"

Some day we simple folks will be tickled to dine on aviation cake, and we will be happy that in 1936 and 1937 we had the foresight to provide it when the opportunity arose; but until that time comes, we are still hungry for bread.

At least, that's what I think.

The Service that adds

Comfort to Your Home

During these hot summer days, the time you save with a telephone to aid in settling daily problems may be the difference between a day that worries your nerves into a frazzle, and a day that includes the time you need for relaxation.

There are so many details in running a household. An extra loaf of bread from the grocer—a six o'clock order of ice cream from the drugstore—and so on. And with a telephone to run your errands, many concerns of the day are easily disposed of.

Of course, most everyone is familiar with the value of telephone service, but if you are trying to get along without a telephone you may be surprised, and pleased, to know how little it costs to have a telephone in your home.

All you need to do is to ask any telephone employe, or get in touch with the telephone Business Office. Order your telephone today, and add comfort and protection to your home.

FARMERS ADVISED STUDY NEW FARM LEGISLATION

Alabama farmers are advised by P. O. Davis, director Alabama Extension Service, to write their United States senators and congressmen in Washington for copies of pending agricultural legislation with a view to helping them develop it into a "law which is as nearly perfect as can be written under existing conditions."

It is obvious that existing Federal laws pertaining to agriculture are not adequate," he said. "Unless present laws are either changed, modified, or new legislation is enacted serious problems are ahead for the farmers of the nation."

"Consequently, this is to suggest to Alabama farmers that they write our congressmen and senators for copies of pending legislation for careful study," he continues. "It is expected of course, that after studying this legislation they will write our congressmen and senators about it with a view to developing it into a law which is as nearly perfect as can be written under existing conditions."

HOMESTEAD EXEMPTION APPLIES ON FARM HOMES

Auburn, Ala.—The Alabama Homestead exemption law applies to farms and farm homes the same as to other homes in the state.

Every farmer occupying the home is entitled to the exemption whether the home is assessed at $500 or $5,000 or more. The maximum deduction that any person is entitled to in any one year is $13,000. The minimum amount depends upon assessed value of the homestead.

In order to get the exemption this year the owner must secure a certificate from the tax assessor, setting up his claim for exemption and present the certificate to the tax collector when paying taxes. This certificate should be secured before October 1 this year.

IN MEMORY

It was only a few days ago, we can never forget the day, when came the silent reaper and took our dear Grover away.

We shall miss him. Oh, we miss him for our savior called him away. But we are praying to meet him in a better world some day. No more on earth we'll see his face. His voice we'll hear no more. But let us live to meet him on that bright and happy shore.

We all love you dear Grover. No human tongue can tell. We say good bye for a little while, but we don't say farewell. Oh, how loving, good and jolly. He was every day by day. All the sorrow that he gave us was the day he went away. He's not dead—just sweetly sleeping beneath the cold and silent clay.

The lonely voice of evening, in silent still rings on. The dear friend we shall remember is gone, forever gone. The friend we'll miss has left the old homestead. He's gone to dwell in safety with loved ones on ahead. Life's evening time is blending. The shadows comes and go. And restless thus life floweth wonder to and fro. When the weary days are over and the sun is sinking in the West, do not worry mother, brothers or sisters, for we know Grover is at rest.

Then again at sunny noon time comes a word of pure delight from across Jordan River, and it seems he's most in sight.

Pray tell me why this life is lonely, why do friends come more forsake, why do shadows fill our pathway that golden sunlight ought to break.

CARD OF THANKS

We wish to take this means of expressing our heartfelt thanks and appreciation to our many friends and neighbors for their many words and deeds of kindness shown us during our recent bereavement—Mrs. J. A. Sims and family.

Dearest mother, thou hast left us, And thou loss we deeply feel, But it was God that has bereft us, He will all our sorrow heal. Home will never be the same;

Conservation farming practices provide "all-weather" protection for farmers' fields whether the season be wet or dry, according to James H. Wood, Superintendent of the Soil Conservation Service Area near Clanton.

When rainfall is excessive, such practices as terracing, strip cropping, contour cultivation, contour furrowing, the use of cover crops, and other approved methods of erosion control slope up run-off water, thereby reducing erosion and increasing absorption.

When rainfall is deficient and moisture is at a premium water that has previously been stored in soil protected by conservation practices promotes better growth of crops in cultivated fields and better growth of grasses in pastures, Mr. Wood said.

On the steeper slopes, where water runs off swiftly and erosion progresses at a rapid rate when the land is unprotected, trees and permanent hay crops serve both to protect the land from erosion when rains come and to retain moisture in the soil against long periods of drought.

There is another angle to the use of conservation farming practices, too, Mr. Wood pointed out. Water held in farmers' fields and fed gradually to streams through underground chan-

These Outstanding Writers and Artists Bring You Entertainment and an Illuminating Interpretation of NATIONAL and WORLD NEWS

Meeting present-day demands for a complete and satisfying newspaper requires the services of many trained observers. The Chilton County News, by syndicate methods and in co-operation with more than three thousand other progressive weekly newspapers, brings you each week the observations of some of America's most famous correspondents, plus a variety of pleasing and instructive departments which contribute much to the enjoyment of the entire family.

Some of the leading contributors who provide this service for you each week are.

VIRGINIA VALE

Covering the screen and radio world is a big assignment at difficultly because she numbers among her friends almost all of the stars now appearing on the screen or over the air. For two years Miss Vale was associate editor of a motion picture magazine and then was called to the desk of a New York daily to handle interviews with screen and radio luminaries. Her column "Star Dust," gives her readers a glimpse into the lives of their favorites of the screen and air through the eyes of one who knows them intimately.

KATHLEEN NORRIS

The name Kathleen Norris on a story is just about the most convincing recommendation that a story could have. Mrs. Norris is the most famous of American women authors of this generation. The clarity of her observation, the real-life character of her portraiture, and the vividness of her action have contributed greatly to her success in the field of popular fiction. A native and life-long resident of San Francisco, Mrs. Norris began writing at an early age and has produced a great number of popular novels and short stories.

WILLIAM BRUCKART

One of the most capable and most experienced of Washington correspondents, who has made a special study of everything concerning government financing and treasury department activities. In a two-column weekly letter, released as the "Washington Digest," Mr. Bruckart provides an interpretative review of the important happenings at the national capital, which gives the reader a thorough understanding of what these developments mean.

EDWARD W. PICKARD

World traveler and one of the most highly trained newspaper observers and writers of the nation. He sees world events through the eyes of an American and writes of these events from the standpoint of their effect on the people of the United States. Mr. Pickard's "News Review of Current Events the World Over" provides a complete review and interpretation of the important events of the week.

A native of Texas, reared on the range, S. L. Huntley, creator of the laughter-provoking comic strip, "Mescal Ike," still is more comfortable in a saddle than in bed. All the tang and charm, the bluff humor and slapstick play of the West which he knows so well he has managed to put into "Mescal Ike." Pa Duffle, Mescal Ike and all the rest of the boisterous characters in the new comic are very much alive and that is why it has attained its great popularity.

FLOYD GIBBONS

Everybody knows Floyd Gibbons. Everywhere Americans have listened to his famous rapid-fire radio broadcasts. They have read his war dispatches and his amazing new stories and adventure yarns that have appeared in some of the leading newspapers and magazines of the country. And now he offers a brand-new idea, a brand-new type of adventure tales—"The Adventurer's Clug"—a thrilling series of exciting incidents gleaned from the lives of everyday persons all over America.

CHARLES M. PAYNE

Little is known about the personal life of this uproarious comic artist, but the antics of his Desperate Ambrose, Pop Wimpus and Old Timber are a riot throughout the land. Here is a comic strip utterly different from any other, yet it "strikes home" so often in a pleasant way that "S'Matter Pop?" has developed into an American institution.

In addition to this assemblage of interesting and instructive material an installment of a serial story, from the pen of an outstanding author is printed each week. Over a period of one year from THREE to FOUR complete books are printed. These books, if bought at a book store, would cost from $1.50 to $2.00 for each book. . . . You get all of this, including all the local and community news, in The Chilton County News, for the price of one year's subscription which is only $1.00 per year.

ARLEDGE LETTER

County has withheld and is now holding the wages earned by the district foremen J. T. Thompson, T. C. Sims, and H. D. Traywick for services rendered during the months of May and July, the greater portion of which was used by these men in the operation of their personally owned automobiles in the service of Chilton County—covering miles upon miles of the public roads directing and supervising the work of both the machine and labor activities on the roads and bridges in various parts of the County. In addition to this the Commissioners Court have withheld and are now holding claims for truck rentals for trucks used in actual work on the roads of Chilton County all because these trucks were owned by the overseers or road foremen and who had been authorized by the Supervisor to use such trucks during an emergency when the County trucks were not available, such authority being given to avoid the delay in sending elsewhere to hire or employ trucks at the same rate of pay. "The people of Chilton County expect the Road Department to give them service; they expect good roads and bridges, and they have a right to expect this, and to the fullest extent of his ability, with the funds available, the Road Supervisor will carry on and every member of his organization will do the same though not so efficiently as they would could they have definite assurance that their wages would not be withheld after such services had been so unselfishly rendered to the people of Chilton County. How do they know they will receive their pay when due? Did the Commissioner's Court not pay others? Most assuredly such action will have its effect on the morale of the road employees; there most certainly will be a doubt, and we all know what "doubt" will do to a lot of workers who are depending on their wages for sustenance.

The Supervisor will carry on; he will continue to aid with his own money where it is needed until light comes through the clouds. He knows that these men will receive their wages, and if it takes court action to clear it up—to court he will go. Yet it seems so useless—an utter waste of money, his money on his side and the County's money on the other side. It costs the other side nothing to go into court; they have the County Attorney and County money, while the Supervisor must use his own to hire attorney aid and at the same time to assist those employees whose wages have been withheld, to enable such employees to continue their unselfish and loyal work for the people of Chilton County.

"The County road work will continue; there will be no stopping of such work because we lack proper supervision of the work. These men are working for Chilton County and they will receive their wages in due time, and they will continue to carry on at the posts assigned to them."

afternoon with light showers Sunday morning, a part of the program for that day was carried out with a large attendance of spectators.

One of the main features of the program Saturday afternoon was the ten thousand feet delayed parachute jump made by Faye Lucille Cox, one of the most famous women parachute jumpers. She was carried aloft in the trim Stinson plane of the Wood Chevrolet Company of Birmingham, and piloted by H. F. Wood. She jumped at this dizzy altitude, sailing down, down for several thousand feet before opening her parachute. She has made more than 300 such thrilling jumps. Mercer Cox, well-known stunter and jumper also thrilled the crowd with a parachute jump Saturday morning.

All in all, the entire program, except that part which was called off on account of rains, was a tremendous success in every way. No accidents of any kind were reported from any section of the county.

Rubber Plantations Diorama Outstanding at 1937 Great Lakes Exposition

Complete in every detail with the distant roar of lions, the incessant chattering of innumerable jungle birds and the steady rhythmic throb of the tom tom, the huge diorama at the Firestone Exhibit depicting a typical scene on the Firestone Plantations in Liberia, West Africa, is one of the most outstanding displays at the Great Lakes

Exposition this year. Pure latex actually flows from genuine rubber trees which have been shipped directly to Cleveland from darkest Africa. Mechanical natives demonstrate the various operations necessary to collect, coagulate and ship the crude rubber to Firestone Factories all over the world.

PASSING FOOTPRINTS

Of The Times
— Billy Smith

Telephoning are truly delighted over the announcement regarding the proposed change in the telephone service Southern Bell Telephone Company. We wish to congratulate the telephone company on this step, and thank them for not having done otherwise. The quarters now occupied by the telephone exchange has been in use for many, many years, and since we can remember, the telephone office in Clanton has been right where it is now, the company, seeing the continued growth of Clanton is falling step with the idea. We hope it will be long until they begin their new quarters.

Subscribers of the telephone company will be glad to pass this progress in their service here, there is a great amount of duty on the part of the company can act, but must be granted by the Public Commission, and this progress will come only when a sufficient number of subscribers place their petition now at the city and up there today and sign same to this petition. Mayor Jones us that the Chilton County was the first signer.

At the meeting was called very early and week to the fact that the business men of Clanton were forward and aided Clanton in the dedication of the field. We were also repaying giving everyone due credit for their success. In our opinion, it was a happy group with one idea, to work together. So much that we fear much more we attempted to name them as received by not mentioning them.

Pool Rumblings
Hearing a few rumblings and much activity on the part of the pool group here in the meeting a swimming pool for Clanton here, from down deep, that rumblings will grow into a big volcano. They will, 30 ft. of the city will throw a wheel behind a wheel—those men mentioned the matter to us shortly at airport dedication.

Kohn, were very busy.

See Them
We pleasantly surprised Tuesday night visit from three out-landers of the state. Webb Stansfield, Greenville Advocate made a rush call when passing Clanton. He leaves Saturday night, Cuba, taking a group of with him on a Roy Brown holiday afternoon our friends, and member of the State Commission and Ray Hensley also on commission, stopped by. Alabama Group Of Attorneys

Hon. Lawrence F. Gerald, well known attorney of Clanton, was elected last week to serve as president of the Alabama Bar Association, succeeding Hon. Douglas Arant of Birmingham. The election took place at the association convention in Tuscaloosa last Friday.

Mr. Gerald is one of the outstanding attorneys of Alabama, and has been practicing here for a number of years. He has been a member of the State Bar Commission since its organization, and represents two of the state's largest business institutions as local counsel.

Alabama lawyers, both as a body and in individual suits attacked the practice of the state administration in placing legislators on the state payroll after their legislative sessions have terminated.

Nearing the end of their convention at Tuscaloosa, members of the Alabama Bar Assn. unanimously adopted a resolution condemning the practice, declaring it to be "contrary to the public policy, public welfare and best interests of the state."

The lawyers also adopted a resolution (Continued to Back Page)

County Agent Gives Out Figures Showing The Benefits Of AAA

Chilton County farmers had been paid $148,945.43 through May 31 this year for carrying out provisions of the 1936 AAA program, announces J. W. Fant, County Agent.

At the same time, County Agent Fant was advised by Walter L. Randolph, Auburn, that Alabama farmers had been paid $9,891,556.18 in benefit payments for cooperating under the agricultural adjustment program in 1936. Farmers throughout the state had received $266,019,844 for cooperating in the program.

Final payment for 1936 was made in many counties and the AAA officials continue mailing benefit checks daily, according to Randolph in his report to Mr. Fant.

Reports from over Alabama show that about the same number of farmers are cooperating under the AAA program as participated in 1936. This means that approximately 200,000 farmers filled out warrants and are taking part in the program this year.

TEEL BROTHERS VISIT OLD HOMEPLACE IN COOSA SUN

On last Sunday, two sons of the late T. J. Teel, Robert and Walter, of Clanton, with their families, visited the home coming at Poplar Springs in Coosa County, where their mother was buried in 1882, when they were six and four years of age.

They decided that a real home coming to them would be to visit the home where they were born, which later was the Duke home. So together with Mr. and Mrs. Will Duke of Sylva, they crossed those Coosa hills back to this partly tumbled-down childhood home, which was partly built from hewn logs, the log partition being in good condition yet. The logs were hewed by their father. Believe it or not, they say they plowed this place where there is grown timber now. They tell us stories of how they drove up on the hill with loads of corn and unloaded it through the roof of the barn.

The day was thoroughly enjoyed by all and will long be remembered and never forgotten.

As they live over their childhood days, their families wondered what it was like as it is a perfect wilderness now.

Dr. Gragg Expresses Appreciation And Views On Dedication Of Clanton Airport

"Well, there was fine cooperation, locally and generally, and there were many present at the dedication July 3rd and all know how hot and dusty it was, and how we lagged some thirty to forty-five minutes with the program. There were many things I would have been pleased to say that had to go unmentioned because it was too hot, too dusty, and too late to try to say it to folks who came to see rather than hear things. I fully realized this and therefore cut my remarks short. I said among other things that due credit should be given the W.P.A. and preceding relief set-ups for what they had done in financing the project, also to the Commissioners Court and others locally, who had helped to finance and put over the job.

"Some of the things that I wished to say were that I hoped that we could enjoy more cooperation in the future than in the past and that I hoped it would not be too late to put in operation an athletic field where young people could enjoy the proper exercise of modern play and sport without having to go so far from home and parental care to find it. I also wanted to state I had hoped for more cooperation in securing a swimming pool right here at home instead of our people going a score at the time, to a town nearly forty miles away, that in no way should be better than our home town. I also wanted to say that while I was too young to know anything about golf, that I saw no reason on earth why we should not have a first class golf course with practically no cost.

"I wanted to say that my greatest desire, THE ONE THING ABOVE ALL, was that our farmers should have a fair ground, and a meeting place where the farmers of this county and in the surrounding counties, could meet in a place that they could feel at home and call it theirs, or ours, and have a permanent home for a meeting place now. I will state that I am ready to have that home been turned over to be one of ten men to sponsor a Centennial Fair.

Where They Live Happier Lives

Often in recent years our interest has been directed to some article by a writer, an artist or a scientist who has moved from the noise, filth and confusion of a great city to the peace and comfort of the country.

They talk enthusiastically about the beauty of the rural landscape, about the pleasure in remodeling an old home, about the fun there is in gardening, and the pleasure they derive through association with their neighbors.

These few people have discovered something new in life. Accustomed for years to the noise, rush and excitement of a great city they have come upon a rural environment with the enthusiasm of an explorer who has found Arcadia. They cannot resist the impulse to tell others about the pleasure it has brought in happy, contented, stimulating living.

All of which leads us to the conclusion that many of us ordinary human beings cannot appreciate the advantages we have. Here in Chilton County life offers all the richness and pleasure that these artists and authors tell about with great enthusiasm. Yet how many people there are in our community who long for an opportunity to move to the big city.

If we could only come to realize that we get more comfort and more pleasure out of life here in Chilton County than we possibly could in one of the great cities, there might be more of a general disposition to help make our town and county even better than it is.

Good Old Newspapers

Maybe the so-called "good old days" offered many advantages that have been lost in this present world of change, confusion, and progress, but we have occasion to wonder if people now would be satisfied with the standards that ruled then.

For an answer to this, one need merely gaze through the old files of the Chilton County News. Your local newspaper of twenty, thirty or even fifty years ago that may have seemed highly satisfactory then would not answer the demands of present day citizens of Chilton County by any stretch of the imagination.

These old files are interesting, of course, from a historical perspective. As newspapers, however, they present something entirely different. A few columns of news and comment so mixed that one could scarcely distinguish between an editorial and a news story, a column of personals, and then standing advertising that remained the same from week to week and month to month characterized the front page. Inside pages consisted either of outside print or accounts of the latest discoveries in South Africa or the state of foreign trade in China. True there was no sensationalism but to modern eyes it also looks as though there was nothing very interesting either.

The old time editors did have a flair for editorial invective. They could call their opponents more names in print without the use of profanity than the most agile present day writer could even conjure up in his imagination. But search those editorials for information or a fair presentation of both sides of an issue, and your search would be long and tedious.

We don't mean, of course, to cast reflection on the journalists of old. They did their jobs well in view of the conditions and the facilities with which they had to work. Some of these old timers are still in the business and the papers they edit now meet modern standards.

The point we emphasize is that the world has been progressing in recent years, and your local paper has been keeping step with that march. Those good old days may have been quite wonderful, but you certainly would miss your present day newspaper if you were transported back into time.

New Things To Come

Chemistry is creating a new industry in America. The men who spend long hours over test tubes and retorts found not long ago how to make news print paper out of southern timber. News print mills are now being erected in the South, and within a few years, many observers predict, America will again produce a substantial share of its paper supplies.

This industry will mean employment in regions which need industry, it will mean new capital at work, and a substantial increase in the buying power of a region where buying power has been none to high.

This is merely one example of how the industrial map of America is changing and how it will continue to change at a more rapid rate in the years to come. These changes call for new expansion in heavy industries, new business activity from one end of the land to another, and new prosperity probably on a higher level than anything we have known in the past.

Those who argue that the economic structure is at a standstill, and who bemoan the passing of the frontier fail to take account of the fact that business is still in the pioneer stage and that the future holds more of promise than anything that the past has ever been able to offer.

The philosophy of radical theorists that there is no hope for the future under a system of private enterprise and individual initiative is false. Apparently they do not know about the amazing new developments which are just ahead.

Violence Is A Boomerang

Law is the protector of the worker as well as the employer. Anyone who encourages or countenances the breakdown of law and order is not serving his following regardless of whether it is made up of big time capitalists or common laborers.

For example we can cite recent developments in a strike situation in Northern Michigan, where timberworkers have gone on strike and have made rather extensive use of stones, bricks, and clubs in an effort to win their argument.

Recently the citizens of three communities formed a band of vigilantes. After one of these outbreaks between strikers and strikers, the "vigilantes" decided on direct action. They proceeded to union headquarters, and made some of the occupants out and administered a vigorous beating, and then instructed them to pack their effects and leave town. The movement spread. Out of the uproar three union halls in three communities were almost completely wrecked. Cars of strikers were damaged beyond repair. Some strikers were severely injured. And any chance of winning a victory became remote as a result.

Americans are people of strong opinions. We never yet saw any overwhelming majority lineup on one side in a controversy of this character. When one side, therefore, resorts to violence, the other is apt to answer with violence. And according to our observation, violence has never solved blem or won any victory for any class.

Leaders of labor today should do everything within their power to avert violence for the good of their own cause as well as to serve the general public welfare. Action produces reaction, and the pendulum of any problem or won any victory for any class.

Up To You

"Why doesn't our Chamber of Commerce do something about it? What's the matter with the outfit?"

When questions like these are put to us, and who in the community doesn't hear them at frequent intervals, we are always disposed to answer, "Why don't you?"

Those who so frequently criticize all organized effort to promote the community are usually the last ones to roll up their sleeves when there's a job to be done. They expend their energy in destructive criticism. They rarely feel that the local organization consists of all the citizens of the community and its effectiveness is always in direct proportion to the co-operation and assistance extended.

Why eternally wait for somebody else to do the job or start the movement which you feel demands attention. Undertake the task yourself, and see what happens. A little more readiness to help and less disposition to find fault will make our community a much more interesting place to live.

"A few million a day will keep the opposition away" is the slogan of the average congressman.

We believe in making preparations for a rainy day, but we also believe in enjoying today's sunshine.

MORAL ECHOES

D. W. Haskew

A southern farmer was sitting in his office when a negro girl entered and took stand by the door. The gruff old man snarled at her. "Now what do you want?" The child meekly said, "My Mammy say for you to send her fifty cents." "I will not do it," said the gruff old man in a tone that almost shattered the bones of the child, "And now you scat from here." "Yas-sah," replied the girl but she did not move. He railed out at her again and again, but she did not go. Each time she just replied, "Yas-sah". Then the gruff old man picked up a barrel stave and made at her as if to strike her to the floor. The negro girl stepped forward toward him, "I tell you sah, my Mammy is got to have that fifty cents". Before striking the girl, the planter stopped, reached his hand down deep into his pants pocket, handed her the fifty cents and went quietly back to his seat. It always did me good to see a brute meet his Waterloo.

In the days of gold digging in Colorado a man by the name of Darby set up a claim to a tract of land, and with pick and shovel he went to work. He found the shining ore in a rich quantity. He organized capital and installed machinery. There was great promise of unlimited wealth, but all at once the vein of gold disappeared. They drilled and sought everywhere for it, but it could not be found. Discouraged, they quit, and sold their outfit to another company and went back east. The junk men who bought the machinery decided to drill again for the vein of gold and the first time he sunk his shaft he found it in great quantities. This man found the vein of wealth in three feet of where Darby had quit. Are you discouraged and ready to quit? Does failure meet you at every effort? Friends, do not give up. If you have lost the vein that promised success, dig again and keep on digging until you find it. You lose all when you quit.

One night the light bulb in my room flicked and then there was darkness. I knew that it had burned out and so I went for a new bulb and when I screwed it into the socket to replace the one burned out, the connection with the current was made and there was light again. The house was wired and with a good bulb there was no reason why I should be in darkness. One thing I know and that is that my God has wired this universe for His presence. His wiring is so correct that there is no danger of a short circuit, or a burning out of the wires. When you see darkness in human life, God is not to blame. Any life that will touch God's current in a harmonious way, will most certainly receive the light giving power that flows out from the heart of God. Our homes may be so well wired, but we get no connection and no light until we complete the circuit. God may be ever so near you, but you will not receive his light and power until you complete the circuit.

As a boy I was watching the men as they carried the log toward the heap at one of those old time log splittings of long ago. As they were struggling along with every muscle quivering at its limit, one man shouted, "Let's go down". The log went down to the ground and I thought that the men were going to declare it to heavy to be carried. Imagine my surprise when the same man shouted, "Now let's get a better hold and let's go". From that act of those straining men I learned a great lesson. Many a time our loads seem to be too heavy to be carried. We need to lay them down for a moment that we may get a better hold and then go again. There is a difference between laying down to quit and laying down to get a better hold.

On many of the islands far out in the sea there are sea gulls and sea birds of all kinds that have no power of flight into the air. We are told that these birds cannot fly because there are no beasts and no enemies on the islands to frighten them. They are never disturbed and spend their time wading about in the shallow water gathering the food that they need. Even the things that frighten us serve a purpose in our lives. When a boy or girl grows up to have no duties, meet no trying times, they are most sure to be powerless to take a flight into the upper air. When we struggle for our living, when we have to battle against foes of all kinds, it is then that we grow the strength and the skill that will lift us upward. You may think that life is unkind to you when it brings with it the necessity to fight for your own existence, but even then life is kind. Your very enemies serve the purpose of creating in you the power to master them.

A friend of a man jailed in Conway, S.C. phoned the mayor, pleading, "I must get him out." When the mayor inquired the reason, the reply was: "He hasn't any pajamas with him."

It's a crime to make ugly faces at a fellow citizen in Zion City, Ill., as it is everywhere else. But Zion City has an ordinance prohibiting such conduct.

And They Don't Have Feathers
A friend remarks that these people who are always tracing their ancestry back to family trees don't seem to realize that there are only two forms of life which live in trees—birds and monkeys.

BIG JIM TULLY

Big Jim Tully washed automobiles and did other commonplace jobs around a garage in New York for several years before his death, which occurred not long ago. He was not ambitious, and judged by the world's standards he did not amount to much. But he had a heart of gold. He was a friend of childhood.

Each week he drew $30 as wages, of which he used $10 for his living expenses and saved the rest. When the opportunity came, he set up in the neighborhood many days as the savings would permit and turned the money over to the poor children in the neighborhood for their free enjoyment. This use was repeated many times.

When Big Jim died he did not have enough money to pay his funeral expenses, but his children friends now grown up, chipped in to him a decent burial. Fifteen ragged kids of the East Side, a traffic jam through their neighborhood on paying a last tribute to their little hearts were said to be trickling down grimy cheeks, their grief because the friend they loved was gone.

To the world at large, Big Jim didn't amount to much, but he brought sunshine into the lives of many underprivileged boys and besides teaching them a practical lesson in benevolence. How many have done more?

A Denver church advertised money on "Future Home of the World" adding that "a 100 per cent" is extended to all.

GIBSON'S BIRD SANCTUARY IS A REAL PARADISE FOR FEATHERED FRIENDS

Forty Acres At Verbena Dedicated To Birds

Tenderly dedicated to all birds of Verbena, Ala., forty acres of wooded land has been turned into a real paradise of the feathered friends of man, through the kindness and unselfishness of S.E.L. Gibson, one of Chilton County's wide-awake and prominent citizens, of Verbena.

Given the appropriate name of Gibson's Bird Sanctuary, these forty acres are heavily fenced in and protected. The sanctuary is located just north of the main part of Verbena, right on the Birmingham-Montgomery highway, with the entrance facing south.

Officials of the Audubon Society, of New Orleans, have taken considerable interest in Gibson's Bird Sanctuary and have visited the place several times, paying tribute to Mr. Gibson for this step.

In the sanctuary Mr. Gibson has three full coveys of quail that were fed by him during the last snow in this section and have remained in the enclosure since that time. Doves, too, are found there with their nests and young ones.

The only species of birds that cannot be mocked by the Mocking Bird is to be found in Gibson's Bird Sanctuary also. These are the Swamp Sparrow or Wood Thrush. Quoting Mr. Gibson in his description of the Swamp Sparrow, we hear, "To my little mind, Beethoven and the immortal Franz Schubert must have arisen at sunrise and stolen from the Swamp Sparrow, notes and ideas for their undying and soul-satisfying symphonies and other compositions which to music-loving humans, bring so much joy and peace."

"Of course," Mr. Gibson stated, "in my Sanctuary there are many Mocking Birds about which Sidney Lanier wrote so much and so beautifully, and also many common wood thrushes, brown, speckled-breasted and also long-tailed. In my opinion, this kind of thrush or thrasher, as sometimes called, can almost excel the Mocking Bird in his music."

Gibson's Bird Sanctuary is further enhanced by the beautiful Chestnut Creek flowing through it and the favorite swimming hole of Verbena boys and girls. These youngsters who go swimming there have complied with Mr. Gibson's request that they do not molest the feathered inhabitants there.

Following is the wording of sign that has been placed at the entrance of the Gibson's Bird Sanctuary:

"This protected bird refuge is tenderly dedicated to all the birds of Verbena, Ala., who were unthoughtfully killed by sling-shot and rifle during the past fifty years by Verbena boys who were not taught to love God's Handiwork and His music. May the Creator of all things beautifully rest the innocent spirits of these poor dead birds and may the notes from their now silent throats, which they gave so freely at Sunrise live and resound in the quiet hours of this harbor, to bring cheer, comfort and strength to their descendants of all varieties and to human beings who love God's gracious gifts. And may this safe nesting place partially compensate for the thoughtlessness of boys."

Mild, mellow, old Southern tobacco tamped in your companionable pipe—a careful lighting—and you settle back to mull over a knotty problem, count your blessings—or just dream.

Deep, satisfying pleasure, isn't it, neighbor? But look into the curling smoke again. See those long lines of freight cars gliding through space on gleaming steel—through blistering heat or numbing cold—storm or fair weather? That's the L & N, my friend, bringing from all sections of the South the choice tobacco you enjoy so much.

Perhaps it has never occurred to you what an important part the L & N plays in keeping your pipe filled, your home warm in the winter, your corner grocer stocked with meats and garden-fresh vegetables. But 28,000 loyal L & N employees know, and they constantly strive to make the service you receive safe, dependable and satisfactory.

Supplying the needs of your daily life is just one of the hundreds of ways in which the L & N tries to be of friendly service—a good neighbor in all that the term implies.

Silent Prayer Given For Amelia Earhart At Airport

The News learned too late for publication last week, of a most worthy thought and act which took place during the dedication of Gragg Field here
July 3rd and 4th.

This thought came from S.L. Gibson, of Verbena, and was broadcast Sunday morning from the loud speaker of the Orange Crush Company at the airport. The announcer made the following statement:

"It is requested by S.L. Gibson, Glenn Messer, Mrs. Glenn Messer, Odell Garrison, L.W. Petet and all others who love and travel the Great High Ways of the Sky, that while Mr.
Petet is coming down to earth from his parachute jump at ten o'clock, which exhibition is sponsored by the merchants of Verbena to help Clanton dedicate Gragg Flying Field, each person at this field will utter a silent and sincere prayer for the safety of Amelia Earhart and her co-pilot and save them for themselves and the advancement of aviation."

NO VACATION FOR BLOW-OUTS!

HOT WEATHER BLOW-OUT WARNING

Equip your car with Silvertowns, the only tires with Golden Ply Blow-out Protection

• The next few months are going to be the hardest in the year on your tires. Because this is the time of year for long trips to the seashore and country—trips that pile up miles—take more out of tires than many months of driving in other seasons.

When you're speeding along at 30, 40 and 50, you can't be too sure of your tires. Unless your tires can stand the terrific heat generated inside all tires at these high speeds—unless they can "take it," this internal heat sooner or later may lead to a dangerous blow-out.

Play safe this summer. Come in and let us equip your car with Goodrich Safety Silvertowns. Silvertowns are the only tires in the world with the famous Golden Ply. This life-saving invention is a layer of special rubber and full-floating cords, scientifically treated to resist internal tire heat.

And when you have this protection inside your tires, the great unseen cause of blow-outs is beaten before it starts.

Yet think of it! These life-saving Silvertowns cost even less than other super-quality tires.

It Pays To Trade In Clanton!

That's What I Think

Saul M. Goldstein

Culture is a very peculiar thing. It is difficult to define, and harder still to localize. We generally think of culture as including only the higher things of life; and yet, it should be possible also to have a culture of the lower things. We know that by properly caring for a plant in all stages of its growth, we can produce a better, more vigorous plant than that which, like Topsy, "just grows." So it is with the minds and habits of human beings: by the proper care in all stages of its growth, we can produce a more vigorous mind, better equipped to serve its purpose in this world.

The average man has an entirely different conception of culture, however. Cultivation of the mind, like cultivation of a plant, requires steady hard labor, and the average man is inclined to avoid as much of that as he possibly can. To hide his laziness, he will put up a front by scorning the outward evidences of a cultivated mind. He will express a preference for the "simple, plain and ordinary" things of life, and either sneer at the cultivated as being "highbrow," or assume an air of frankness and boast of being too dumb to understand the higher things of life.

As time goes on, certain things come to be associated with culture, and put into a group for the "highbrows" only. Mr. Average Man laughs in sympathy with Jiggs because he refuses to go to the opera with Maggie. Any literature older than the magazine short story of 1920 that is worth reading, is classed as highbrow literature, to be avoided by him, and needless to say, Shakespeare is out of the question.

Some of the biggest financial failures in the pictures have been the dramatization of Shakespeare's plays. The magnificent spectacle produced by Max Reinhardt in "Midsummer Night's Dream," went unpraised and unsung, and in general unattended by the general public. Why? Is the work of Shakespeare so intellectually advanced so mentally above our powers of understanding and appreciation that we purposely avoid him?

Some few weeks ago, there appeared at the local movie theatre a picture whose name I fail to recall at the moment, but which starred the great comedy team of today, Laurel and Hardy. The story dealt with two close friends, portrayed by the stars, living a respectable life with their respective wives in their respective homes. Each has a twin brother, and these others are ordinary seamen—the black sheep of the family. After a long absence, the black sheep turn up in the same town in which their respectable brothers live, and a merry confusion ensues, in which even the wives mistake their brothers-in-law for their husbands. As I recall, it was enjoyed immensely by those present; and it drew a large attendance. (I'll have to check with Charlie Wade about that!)

Suppose that same picture had been advertised as being taken from a play by William Shakespeare? And suppose that since so many errors were made by confusing the two pairs of twins, it had been given the name "Comedy of Errors?" Would it have drawn nearly as large an attendance, and would the audience have enjoyed it nearly as much? I doubt it.

Yet, William Shakespeare wrote a play almost exactly like the one described above, and he called it "The Comedy of Errors."

So if you attended the Laurel and Hardy picture, and enjoyed it immensely, as so many of us did, Shakespeare is surely not over your head.

In fact a little effort spent in converting Shakespeare's sixteenth century language into modern twentieth century speech is all it takes to make available to you a grand selection of stories, plays and poems which now, closed behind the locked doors of the name "culture," are rejected by most people without even a casual inspection.

At least, that's what I think.

Wright-Suitte Wedding Is Solemnized Recently

A wedding of much interest though out of the county, was that of Miss Mary Jo Suitte to Mr. Barrett Wright of Sylacauga. The wedding was solemnized at the home of the Rev. and Mrs. Holdredge at Sylacauga on July 9. Mr. and Mrs. Sylvester Rozelle were their only attendants.

The bride was beautifully attired in navy blue triple sheer with matching accessories. Her bouquet was killarney roses and baby breath fern. Mrs. Wright is the youngest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Suitte of Birmingham, and was a student of Woodlawn High School, where she was very popular.

Mr. Wright is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Wright of Sylacauga. He graduated from Sylacauga High School later attending the Alabama Polytechnic Institute at Auburn.

The couple will make their home in Sylacauga where the bridegroom holds a responsible position.

Indian Grave

Our Sunday School is planning a trip to Montgomery next Sunday where they will go through Kilby Prison. We had 54 present Sunday with the Ladies Class in charge of opening and young peoples class the closing.

Mr. R. D. Wilkins entertained his Sunday School class at his home Sunday. They all had a nice time. Several from here attended the singing at White City Sunday afternoon.

Misses Ella Mae and Maudie Jones returned Saturday from a visit with their brother at Bessemer.

Miss Iva Hand is visiting relatives in Birmingham.

Mr. and Mrs. G. C. Traywick had as their guests Sunday Mr. and Mrs. Sam Brigrance.

Mr. L. F. Askins, Mr. and Mrs. Auburn Grey and little son, Royce, had dinner with Mr. and Mrs. Clifton Billingsley Sunday.

Mr. and Mrs. Sam Hayes spent Saturday night and Sunday with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. G. C. Billingsley.

Mrs. G. C. Traywick and little Alma Jean, are spending the week with her daughter, Mrs. Clifton Billingsley and attending the revival at the Methodist Church.

Mr. Pratt Billingsley is visiting in Montgomery.

We are glad to report that health in this community is very good at present.

SULPHUR WILL CONTROL COTTON FLEA HOPPER

Cotton flea hoppers, numerous in several Alabama counties at present, "may be controlled by dusting cotton with superfine sulphur at the rate of 10 pounds per acre," advise officials of the Alabama Experiment Station. The sulphur should be applied with a dust gun at intervals of 4 to 6 days until the insect is under control.

"If weevils are numerous the sulphur may be mixed with calcium arsenate in the proportion of 3 pounds of sulphur to 1 pound of the arsenical and the mixture applied at the rate of 16 pounds per acre, they say."

8 EXTRA POUNDS OF RUBBER

TAPPING RUBBER TREES ON FIRESTONE PLANTATIONS IN LIBERIA From these plantations come an ever increasing supply of rubber. Firestone saves in producing raw materials, manufacturing and distribution to give you more for your money

Another Reason Why FIRESTONE GIVES YOU SO MUCH Extra Value at No Extra Cost

YOU GET EXTRA PROTECTION AGAINST BLOWOUTS—eight extra pounds of rubber are added to every 100 pounds of cord by the Firestone patented Gum-Dipping process. By this process every fiber in every cord in every ply is saturated with liquid rubber.

This counteracts dangerous internal friction and heat that ordinarily destroy tire life.

YOU GET EXTRA PROTECTION AGAINST PUNCTURES—because under the tread are two extra layers of Gum-Dipped cords.

YOU GET EXTRA PROTECTION AGAINST SKIDDING—because the tread is scientifically designed.

YOU GET LONGER NON-SKID MILEAGE because of the extra tough, long-wearing tread.

Before leaving on your vacation trip, join the Firestone SAVE A LIFE Campaign by equipping your car with a set of new Firestone Standard Tires—today's top tire value.

COTTON LEAF WORMS MAY DAMAGE PRESENT CROP

Chances are that the cotton leaf worm, commonly known as the cotton army worm, will appear in Alabama and other southeastern states before the end of the present cotton season.
The insect has already appeared in Texas. The first reports came from Neuces County, Texas, on May 27 and from Calhoun County, Texas, on June 9. These dates are about 2 to 3 weeks later than the first reports of worms last year.
Farmers are warned by W. A. Ruffin, entomologist of the Alabama Extension Service, to watch for the first appearance of the insect and to dust the cotton with calcium arsenate if the worms appear in large numbers on cotton with immature bolls. The dust may be applied undiluted with a dust gun at the rate of 5 to 6 pounds per acre

NEW CHRYSLER PRESIDENT IS A WORKER AT HEART

David A. Wallace, newly-appointed president of the Chrysler Sales Division of the Chrysler Corporation, brings to the job exceptionally complete and varied equipment. Ever since he was a boy, Dave Wallace has been making things with his hands. He has come a long way since he started his working life as an humble apprentice in the Santa Fe railroad shops out in Kansas, and there haven't been any short cuts. Step by step he has learned the manufacturing business in all its phases.
So now when he finds himself in complete control of some 11,000 workers, he knows how to speak their language. He knows the problems of the man at the bench because he, too, has worked at the bench. He's the boss and a very forceful one when it comes to making decisions and enforcing them. But at heart he is a working man. It's easy for any one of the workers in the Chrysler plant to approach Dave Wallace. The door always is open to anyone who has business with him. Being an extremely busy man he hasn't much time for fanning bees during office hours, but he always has time to talk about anything that will improve the product or the working conditions.
Dave Wallace has one extremely valuable trait in dealing with his subordinates, he they lesser executives or drill press hands. He can put a man perfectly at ease—bring out the best in him. In this vast organization efficiency has reached a high peak but there is no caste system and no military routine that raises a Chinese wall between the “big guy” and the men who turn out the cars.
There is an interesting parallel in the early life of Dave Wallace and Walter P. Chrysler, head of the Chrysler Corporation. Both are Kansas boys—small town boys who had to fight for whatever they got out of life. Dave was born in a little settlement in southern Kansas. Very early in life he decided that mechanical things were more interesting than the farming career that most of his associates had thrust upon them. His first job was in the Santa Fe shops, a hard school but a thorough one. Mr. Chrysler started in the Union Pacific shops at Ellis, Kansas.
Like Mr. Chrysler he decided that the automobile industry offered the best chance to a young fellow who knew how to work with his hands and he joined forces with an automobile company in Flint, Mich. This company wasn't making an unqualified success of it at the time and after a couple of years in Texas handling sales and service work, Dave decided to give himself a whirl.
He went to Mexico to conduct a mechanical operation at a mine owned by Corrigan-McKinney and among other things operated a truck line for that company. Again the experience proved hard but extremely valuable. Following the Mexican adventure, he allied himself with Hart-Parr of Charles City, Iowa, a big steel concern. There he was successively toolroom foreman, master mechanic and general superintendent. The company's main product was farm tractors but during the war it made an immense number of shells for the British government, especially the “nine-point-two’s.”
During the war Mr. Wallace served in the Motor Transport branch of the army, entering the service as a lieutenant and being promoted to captain.
For the next 10 years he was with the John Deere Plow Company, of Waterloo, Iowa, one of the leading manufacturers of the middle west. He started there as master mechanic and became superintendent and general superintendent.
In 1929 K. T. Keller, then vice-president and now president of the Chrysler Corporation, asked him to come to Detroit as a member of his personal staff. His first position was that of master mechanic but in about a year he was appointed vice-president in charge of manufacturing at the Chrysler Division plant and the Ker-cheval body plant. Here he was in complete charge of the manufacture of Chrysler cars and until about a year ago he De Soto as well, that division now occupying a fine new factory of its own in another section of Detroit.
Under his regime the quality of Chrysler cars has steadily improved and as manufacturing efficiency has increased, it has been possible to offer these improved cars to the public at lower prices. Approximately 100,000 cars a year are being produced in the Chrysler factory, as well as certain important parts for other Chrysler Corporation products.
In addition to being president of the Chrysler Division of the Chrysler Corporation, Mr. Wallace is president of the Pekin Wood Products Company of Helena, Arkansas, a subsidiary of the Chrysler Corporation and in itself a very big business. He likewise is president of the Chrysler Marine Motor Company, a Chrysler Corporation division that manufactures marine and industrial engines and that is growing very rapidly. Thus he is the head of not one but three big manufacturing companies—rather a complete program for anybody.
Dave Wallace has been too busy to cultivate any recreational hobbies. He gets out on the Detroit river occasionally in his modest cabin cruiser and he owns a ranch out in Nebraska where they raise blooded cattle. He is fairly proficient performer on skis, though he hasn't reached the jumping stage.
Ever since he has been in charge of manufacturing at Chrysler that factory has been known as a good place to work. Mr. Wallace has been enthusiastic in developing recreational activities among his men. He also has been a leader among American industrialists in promoting safety in his factory, with the result that Chrysler has made extraordinarily good records in preventing accidents that result in the crippling of workers and the loss of working time.
Dave Wallace's creed might be summarized thus: “The efficiency of the product means less. The efficiency of the man means more.”
There are two important elements in successful automobile manufacturing,” he says. “First the car must be soundly engineered and correctly styled.
Second it must be manufactured to such high precision standards that it will continue to give economical, satisfactory service throughout a long life.
Good manufacturing of a poorly engineered product means little and good engineering of a badly manufactured product means less. The efficiency of one department is absolutely dovetailed with that of the other.”
In his new capacity, Mr. Wallace will devote himself largely to manufacturing activities. Joseph W. Frazer, vice-president and Director of Sales, will assume responsibility for the sales and advertising departments, taking over the duties in this connection heretofore performed by former president J. E. Fields, recently promoted to an important executive position with the Chrysler Corporation.

Improved Telephones

New Office Quarters

For many, many years, the office of the telephone company in Clanton has been in its present building, with small space of one room. The plans now call for a separate building erected especially for the telephone company with modern fixtures and telephone apparatus, Mayor Jones stated. Pictures of the proposed new office may be seen at the city hall now.

Small Increase

The present system of ringing the telephone to get the central office, will be eliminated in the new set-up. The modern method of merely lifting the telephone receiver will be installed, Mr. Harris stated. These improvements call for an expenditure of approximately $14,000.00 on the part of the telephone company, it was stated. There will be a small increase of a few cents per month for this improved service, which is already meeting with the approval of all telephone subscribers here who have learned of the plans.

To do this work, forty to fifty men will be in Clanton making the changes and improvements, as all present day telephones will be removed, etc. Mayor Jones is to be congratulated on his successful efforts in working with the telephone company to this end.

Subscribers Must Sign

Before this work can be started, the telephone company must secure permission from the Public Service Commission. To get this permission, a sufficient number of telephone subscribers in Clanton MUST sign a petition asking for the permit. These petitions are now in the office of Mayor Jones at the city hall, ready for the subscribers' signatures. All subscribers that is, telephone renters of the city are URGENTLY requested to go to the city hall right away and place their signatures on this petition to the Public Service Commission, if they wish Clanton to receive this modern telephone building, office and improved service.

urging state reforms to take parole powers out of the hands of politicians, and one reaffirming the association's stand against the Roosevelt court reorganization plan.

Board Proposed

The bar convention resolution urging parole reform obviously was directed against Alabama's present parole system, subject of much criticism in recent months, though the resolution itself did not mention even the name of the state.

Introduced by James A. Simpson of Birmingham, leader of anti-Graves forces in the state Senate, the resolution declared that "politics should not control clemency," and urged that parole powers be vested in a "full-time salaried body of duly qualified persons."

The resolution condemning the court reorganization proposal was introduced by C. H. Young of Anniston. It commends Sen. John H. Bankhead for his stand against the President's plan and called upon other members of the Alabama congressional delegation to take a similar position.

trial Alabama Fair to be held at Clanton every fall for the benefit and advancement of our farmers if they want it. If they do not want it, then well and good. Enough has been said.

Another matter that should have the attention of our thinking, progressive men is a National Guard Unit. Selma had an Armory built under the WPA. So did Prattville. Clanton stood still, did nothing but helped pay taxes and let the other towns of no more importance walk off with the "cake" or "bread" of whatever you please.

On the last or WPA set-up we lacked $12,000.00 of using all the funds allotted to the airport. Some two years ago we let a similar amount go back because it was not properly sponsored. There is $24,000.00 that was turned back to Uncle Sam that he would have given us for a swimming pool, community house or other project, that a few of us ran to Montgomery and wrote and wired to Washington, D. C. till we got it tagged for Clanton's airport. The director of WPA in Montgomery wanted us to have it. The Area Engineer almost begged us to take it. The county time keeper busied himself about it. A swimming pool would have filled a crying need of our bathers and kept money at home and paid for itself in the long run. And think of the money that would have been turned loose in our midst, $24,000.00 already ours, thrown away and our folks needing a community house and swimming pool.

Again let me say that my hat is off to the fine people who took part in the program in every way.

New Director Of Boys Choir Held
At Ellis Island

Music that would soothe the average breast doesn't have an iota of effect on U. S. immigration officials.

Last Thursday Emmerich Eber, of Vienna, newly appointed assistant director of the Apollo Boys Choir here, and a graduate of the Vienna Boys Choir, arrived at Ellis Island from Vienna.

In the meantime "here in Birmingham," Coleman Cooper, director of the Apollo Choir, thought he had paved the way for Mr. Eber's entrance into this country.

Yesterday Mr. Cooper received a telegram from Ellis Island authorities to the effect that his assistant is being held because of the technical question of a bond and that every day of his stay at Ellis Island is costing Mr. Cooper $5.

Today, local federal authorities are aiding to get the technicalities straight.

GOOD VEGETABLE SUPPLY INDICATED FOR SUMMER

Present indications are that markets will be well supplied with nearly all kinds of vegetables at moderate prices during the summer months, reports the Bureau of Agricultural Economics in revealing that "market supplies of vegetables for the next few months are expected to be considerably larger than a year ago."

"Beans, cabbage, cucumbers, green potatoes, spinach, tomatoes, and watermelons all promise larger summer crops than last year," says the report. "Moderate marketings of other leading crops are in prospect, but no shortage is indicated for any of the commercial market vegetables."

Phosphate and deficient soils make phosphate deficient crops. Phosphate deficient crops produce poorly nourished animals and costly gains in weight. Humans also suffer from these deficiencies.

Bare lands, steep slopes, washing soil, and meager crops show themselves in heavy mortgages, discouraged farmers, dilapidated houses, and degenerate families.

Charged with breaking into a garage and stealing $33.75, H. Russell Brown, a member of the police force at Barnstable, Mass., has been arrested.

Letters To The Editor

A BRICKBAT

Verbena, Ala., July 8, 1937.

"Mr. Billy Smith,
Clanton, Ala.
My Dear Friend:
I am sorry if I said anything over the phone today to offend you, but I still say that was the poorest write up of the dedication of Gragg Air Field that I ever saw. In fact it just did not amount to anything. I thought you were for your own town, but evidently you do not care what happened at the Clanton Port Saturday and Sunday. Probably they did not pay you enough for advertisements."

"Glenn Messer, my own buddy, was almost the whole show and you did not mention his name.

"The silent prayer for Amelia Earhart during the Sunday morning hour was probably the only gesture of this kind in the world but you did not see fit to even recognize this. Maybe you do not believe in prayer. You should try flying awhile."

"Glenn Messer and I took Petweet up and threw him out in a chute Sunday morning, sponsored by Verbena merchants, just to help Clanton make a success of the dedication performance and it cost us forty dollars. Of course this does not mean anything to you and your big paper. The fact that you did not mention Glenn Messer and this stunt and others sounds very selfish to me and the next time Clanton tries to pull off something I will try to keep Verbena people at home and let you and your delegation carry on without us."

"I know a few things about newspapers and I am sure you overlooked several good bets in the dedication of Clanton's airport."

"If this letter makes you mad you will find me at Verbena."

"It is just a shame that Glenn Messer, no matter what he was paid in money, went to so much trouble to help you make a success of your show and then did not even get a kind mention in your prominent journal."

"I understand small things, so I have nothing else to say."

"Very sincerely,
S. L. GIBSON.
Also I guess Mr. Hollis and his little daughter who worked so faithfully at the dusty airport, appreciate the help. Oh, well, you carry on in your own way."

ABOUT THE COUNTY ROADS

"Editor, Clanton County News,
Clanton, Alabama.

"Dear Sir:
"I noticed an article in the Union-Banner last week from Mr. Charlie Cox, stating that he is well pleased with the results of a Local Act, placing all road work in the county under charge of a road supervisor, and he states that the results on the county roads speak for themselves and that they are in better shape than ever. Mr. Cox further states that the people are well pleased with this supervisor's bill."

"I believe if Mr. Cox would get out on the county roads, he would be convinced that our county roads are not in better shape, but are in worse shape than they have been in many years. Many of the roads have grown up with weeds where they are almost impassable and I hear complaints continually over the county about the condition of the county roads."

"I believe that a great deal of the trouble in our county road system is that too much money is spent in road supervision and not enough money in the actual working of the roads."

"I am one of those who long for the time when the spending of our money and the working of our roads will be put back in the hands of the commissioners elected by the people."

L. G. POSEY.

Running water pumped by electricity is a change being brought to many Alabama farm homes by the installation of electricity, reports Nell Pickens, home management specialist of the Alabama Extension Service.

By raising six to 10 pigs to the litter, farmers of Alabama and other Southern states are beginning to solve one of their biggest problems in hog production.

Alabama turkey growers, breeders, and hatchermen desiring that turkeys be included in the National Poultry Improvement Plan should advise R. B. Jones, Montgomery, or John E. Ivey, Auburn. PICNIC OUTING HELD RECENTLY BY ROAD DEPT

Employees, Friends And Families Gather At Blue Creek Camp

Blue Creek Camp, on the Coosa River, was the scene of a most enjoyable outing and fish fry last Saturday afternoon and night, when the employees of the Road Department entertained, having as their guests, their families and friends.

Approximately four hundred persons gathered around the long tables in the cool, shaded grove at the camp, overlooking Lake Mitchell and found that nothing had been left undone by those who prepared the delicious fried fish with all the trimmings, including lemonade.

With the exception of the annual county-wide picnics, those attending the outing Saturday expressed the opinion that this was one of the largest crowds assembled recently here to enjoy a real get-together.

No speeches were made, and T. J. Arledge, road supervisor, saw that everyone was well cared for. After the dinner was over, the crowd dispersed, some to take boat rides, others enjoying the moonlight, while the younger ones enjoyed dancing at the hall. The hundreds of plates and the fish were all prepared under the supervision of Mrs. Claude Blue Creek Camp, who is in charge of Blue Creek Camp.

The officers, who were on the scene of the accident a few minutes after it happened, stated that Swell undoubtedly had tire trouble and had walked to a nearby filling station for aid. He is supposed to have been returning to his parked automobile at the time.

Swell died in the Central Alabama Hospital here soon after being brought in. He was a building contractor in Birmingham for a number of years.

HONOLULU IS BEAUTIFUL SPOT, MISS SHEPHERD FINDS WHILE ON TOUR

Wonderful Description Of Island Found In Letter Exclusively To The News

While on a world tour, Miss Ruth Shepherd, one of Clanton's most charming young ladies, is writing of her visits and the sights she is seeing. The following is a splendid description of her stay in Honolulu where she is the guest of friends:

My companions (Virginia Ehler and Mandy Allison, both of whom have visited in Clanton often) and I got up very early the morning we arrived in Honolulu in order not to miss even the first glimpse of the Islands. Our first view of Oahu, the island on which Honolulu is situated, certainly gave us no indication of how lovely the place really is, however.

We were all expecting to see long sandy beaches and palms and perhaps a native hut or two. Instead, we saw a series of very bleak looking mountains. Even the famous Diamond Head, so named because of its peculiar diamond shape which effectively catches the glint of the sun, was gray through the rain.

By the time we got into the harbor, however, the weather had cleared up and the day had turned into one that Californians would be proud to brag about. Our spirits began rising immediately and I'm quite sure I have never been as excited as when the little harbor tug came up to our boat and Virginia's fiancée came on board with arms full of leis for us. Mandy and I retired to the other side of the deck to admire our flowers and left the other two working off the emotion of the moment with a quick game of ping pong.

We hadn't expected anyone else to meet us so we were amazed and delighted to find about twenty-five of Virginia's fiancée's friends on the dock. They all had leis for us, too, so that by the time we had gotten down the line we could hardly see over the strands of gorgeous tropical flowers they had put around our necks.

LADY TOURISTS FIND THAT PATROLMEN ARE REAL HELP

A story came out this week that touched on the usefulness of Alabama's highway patrolmen besides making arrests and catching drunken drivers. It seems that three women tourists, passing through this county, met with an accident while on their way to a Dothan hospital where one of the ladies was to have undergone an appendicitis operation. Their automobile left the highway near Clanton and there it was where Highway Patrolmen Earl Henley, with the aid of Deputy Sheriff Thornton came on the scene. The lady awaiting the operation, was placed in the patrol car and immediately rushed to Montgomery where she underwent the emergency operation, within a short time after the accident. This occurred Saturday morning.

PROGRESS BEING MADE BY LOANS UNDER FHA PLAN

Increase Shown In Number Of Applications Over Period Of 1936

That much progress is being made through the plan of the Federal Housing Administration, in Alabama, with offices in Birmingham, is shown by a letter which was recently mailed over the state. Below is quoted a part of the letter:

"The number of applications filed in this office for the first half of the year 1937 showed an increase over that of 1936. The amount of applications paid for the first half of the year 1936 was $2,077,330. Thirty-four per cent of this amount for $724,630 was for new construction, while the amount filed for the same period in 1937 was $2,470,470. Of this amount $1,202,000 or more than 50 per cent was for the construction of new homes."

"More than 1000 new homes have been built in 100 different counties under the state under the Federal Housing Administration Plan. Title II loans have been made in 1149 towns in 115 banks and other financial institutions. This office has accepted for mortgage 2610 mortgages for an amount of $529,219."

"According to information received from the entire State, it is believed that the year 1937 will be a banner one for the past six in building activity."

He also stated that he would be in Fletcher for this purpose on July 29th, from about eight o'clock in the morning until ten-thirty.

Machines Create Employment

When you watch the course of operations in a modern industry it is easy to come to the false conclusion that machines cause unemployment. As you watch a machine do the work of a dozen or more men, and do it quickly and efficiently, you conclude that the problem of unemployment will continue to vex our nation.

But just a moment, are machines the cause of all our trouble? There are two sides to that question, and one cannot discuss it intelligently without some familiarity with all phases.

A motorcar which now costs $600 built according to the old time, machine shop, hand labor methods would cost at least $3,500.00 explains one industrialist who knows what he is talking about. Who then could buy motor cars if they were priced at such a figure? Only the few, only the very wealthy. And as a result there would be few cars and few men employed in their manufacture.

If built by hand labor a typewriter would cost about $1,000. Who then could afford to use typewriters? Most of us would be writing as our grandfathers wrote, and few men would have jobs manufacturing typewriters.

You can continue the list to include almost all of the things of modern civilization. There would be no electric stoves, very few furnace heated homes, and very meagre home furnishings if the use of modern machinery were seriously restricted.

The rapid development of the machine may create social and economic problems, but by and large the machine has brought more benefit than harm to citizens of the world today, and one is considering only one side of the issue when arguing against the machine in industry.

A Practical Tip

When you spend a dollar here at home you secure your money's worth in good merchandise and you still have a chance to get that dollar back. Somebody may return it to you in exchange for goods you sell, work you do, or service you perform.

When you spend a dollar out of town you may get your money's worth of merchandise. But you have no chance to get that dollar back in return for merchandise or service you have for sale.

Think it over friends. We're merely offering you a good, practical suggestion.

It's Really Fun

"Oh, you can expect that from him. He gets a lot of fun out of finding fault and kicking. His greatest pleasure lies in refusing to co-operate with others."

We've heard people make such remarks when referring to some cantankerous individual, who finds that the entire community is out of step but him. But we cannot agree. We do not believe anybody derives pleasure out of kicking and complaining. We have found ourselves on a few occasions playing that part of the kicker, too, and we can never say that we were particularly happy at the time we were finding fault with the honest and sincere efforts of theirs.

We've found it much more fun to work in harmony with others, to co-operate with our fellow citizens for the promotion of community affairs, and to offer a pleasant word of praise for what somebody else is endeavoring to accomplish.

If your disposition makes it just a bit difficult for you to work with others, just change your attitude and give the new point of view a trial. You will soon discover that it is fun to do your part in the upbuilding of our fine community.

A friend observes that the faster you live the slower you get over it.

Worth Protecting

Frequent occasions occur in the life of every alert citizen when the value of good credit standing is fully appreciated. When an opportunity comes your way, and you can avail yourself of it only if you can secure the necessary loan, when an emergency arises and you need credit to tide you over, when good will and confidence that comes from paying bills promptly can be turned to a priceless asset, then you appreciate what it is worth to have people say: "You can depend upon him. He always pays his bills."

Opportunity in life knocks many times for the man in whom others have confidence. It rarely knocks even once for the individual who is careless about credit.

For this reason we urge our readers and subscribers to consider carefully their credit standing here in Chilton County. You never know just when you can convert a good reputation into something of material value.

For A Free Press

The Newspaper Guild, an organization of newspaper writers, has recently gone on record in favor of having the government issue periodicals for the benefit of unemployed writers.

This, we believe, is one of the most un-American suggestions that has come to our attention in many months. A government controlled press is as remote from the theories of American democratic government as the methods employed by dictators in Europe.

A free press implies a press without censorship or control. A government owned press would obviously serve only the interests and aims of the party in power. It would eliminate the free discussion of public issues which justifies the principles of a free press.

We are not yet ready for a press controlled and directed by any political party in power, regardless of its popularity. A free press is the cornerstone of liberty.

"Ghost Towns"

"Ghost Towns" is a term applied to spots on the landscape which were once thriving small communities offering great promise for the future. Throughout the length and breadth of the land there are thousands of such places which we learn about only by digging into dusty old records or listening to the reminiscences of old timers.

"This community was once quite a town when I was a very small boy," they explain. "There was a gristmill along the river, a sawmill and a small chair factory in operation. But the mill went broke, the chair factory couldn't get supplies and then the railroad went through and by-passed the place and everything moved over to blank twelve miles north. Now all you can find is the old mill boiler setting overgrown with weeds and brush, and a few houses, only a few of which are occupied."

Back of every story like this, we believe, is a lesson for the citizens of Clanton. Were the residents of those "ghost towns" of fifty or a hundred years ago really on their toes? Were they community minded? Did they possess the vision to analyze changing conditions?

We don't mean to imply that there is the slightest danger that Clanton can or will become a "ghost town." Our citizens in general are alert and wide awake to changing conditions, and they are above all community minded. But there is a lesson for us all in the history of these communities which once thrived and then disappeared.

A community made up of progressive citizens with vision and understanding—a community in which cooperation is not merely a fine word but a rule of civic conduct never becomes a "ghost town."

Industries may crash, good fortune may apparently pass them by, but where the citizens are of the right spirit a triumph will follow every reverse and steadily the town will advance and become each year a more pleasant place in which to live and a more prosperous center in which to transact business.

A scientist says that the natural food of a mosquito is sap. We wonder if he would dare to tell us that to our face.

One of the advantages of being a country editor is that you'll never be exposed as a big tax dodger.

This is the season when some of us learn to appreciate home. It's the ideal place to go for a rest after the vacation is over.

MORALECHOES

While visiting on a Texas ranch I saw two hound dogs trotting along side by side. Both had a collar around their neck and a short chain linked them together. On making inquiry as to why the dogs were chained together, the owner informed me that this was done on the account of the roving disposition of the young dog. This young hound would leave at night and run rabbits, or to places where young hounds should not go. He would come straggling in the next morning all tuckered out and would be no good in driving cattle during the day. To make him stay at home and to preserve his strength, his master bound him to an old dog and made him stay at home. That gave me an idea on the question of control for some young folks. Many of them stray away from home at night and go places and do things that no young person should do. Why not think as much of our young folks as that ranchman thought of his dog, and link those roving young lads to some person with a strong reliable character, and thus hold them back from the foolishness of youth.

I sat on the bank of a small lake in Texas and observed that I was near what seemed to be an assembly of snakes. The water around the edge where I was sitting began to ripple and snake heads were lifted above the water in all directions. Soon the stubby bodies of many large water Moccasins were wriggling about over the water. They seemed to be pulling a special stunt for my benefit, but the performance was repulsive to me. It matters not where I see a snake there is no attraction in him for me. For some reason I hate snakes. While walking along the side walk in a little city that was infested with State saloons, I found myself in front of a State liquor store. I paused a moment and looked in. There were all kind of whiskey brands in bottles lifting their heads down the shelves of the store. Every bottle looked like the head of a snake to me. The truth of the matter is that every State owned whiskey store is nothing but an assembly of snakes. My advice is that you stay out of such stores.

The Foreman of the ranch came in from his days ride among the cattle and reported that he had located that day four cows showing signs of the "Creeps." That was a new disease to me and so I had to ask a few questions. I learned that a cow taking the "Creeps" would first slow down and keep on slowing down until it would creep and then it would get down on its side and without help it would soon pass away. The strange thing about this cattle disease is that no one knows what causes it and no one knows a remedy to cure it. In my travel to and from in the kingdom of God I have a large herd of church members who must be seriously infected with the disease of "Creeps." To say the least they have slowed down and never go to church any more. I wish I knew what gives church members the "Creeps" and wish I knew how to treat them to get them on their feet again.

On entering the Pullman at New Orleans while on the way to Texas, the porter most graciously invited me into the drawing room and offered to serve me with Beer, wine or whiskey. I read the riot act to that porter and then he most graciously apologized. On that trip to Texas I saw more drunk people in ten days than I saw in ten years during prohibition. One drunk man entered the bus on which we were traveling and sat down by a nice looking young lady and soon he was wallowing all over her. The driver had to stop his bus and drag that reprobate to a seat where he would be alone. And yet, there are folks who are saying that whiskey under government control will produce temperance. It never was so, it is not so now and it will not be so in the future. When the government takes control of whiskey to serve through its State stores, it will not be long before God will be saying, "Ephraim is joined to her idols, let him alone." It is becoming more and more difficult for decent people to travel in decency.

I watched the cowboys as they loaded two young Texas mustangs on a trailer. They knew how to do it and not one of them was hurt from flying heels and pawing feet. When the unruly horses were securely tied with their heads against the front of the trailer, the driver started his car. This was the first ride of the awnings and when the car started they swung back on their lines and set themselves against going. They pulled backward until it seemed that their necks would break, but the trailer moved on. If I am not mistaken there are many human mustangs who paw and kick at almost everything and then when things move on they still pull back. The good part about things in general is that mustangs may paw and kick, they may almost break their necks pulling back, but civilization and progress moves on. We often see folks who must be carried on in spite of their pulling back.

Every Sunday for the last 25 years Daniel Breshnam, legislator of Springfield, Mass has donned a trolleyman's uniform and operated a car over one of the city's lines, as a means of relaxation.

TIFFIN FURNITURE CO. DOES BIG SOAP COUPON BUSINESS

Savers Of Coupons From Well Known Soap Are Flocking To Local Store To Exchange Coupons For Valuable Premiums

A business that is a little unusual, yet most profitable to those customers who avail themselves of the opportunity offered, is being done, right in Clanton by the Tiffin Furniture Company, one of Clanton's largest furniture stores.

This business is done strictly with soap coupons from Octagon Soap, according to Tom Tiffin, who takes a great interest in seeing that these "soap coupon" customers are given prompt and courteous service when they visit the Tiffin Furniture Store.

Back in 1929, when the store started accepting Octagon Soap coupons and giving premiums in exchange, they were rated only as a Class D premium store. But since that time and due to a continued increase in this line, they are now rated as a Class A store and in the top ranks. They now carry two special premium offers in addition to the regular premiums offered by the manufacturers of Octagon soap.

In one month recently, one hundred and ten thousand Octagon soap coupons were brought to the Tiffin Furniture Company in Clanton and exchanged for these valuable premiums. Mr. Tiffin stated that, of course, this particular month was higher than any other month they had experienced in this coupon business. A special premium offer is now being offered by the Tiffin Furniture Company, and is explained in an advertisement in this issue of the News.

SOUTHERN PULPWOOD INDUSTRY

When the leading members of the American Pulpwood Association met in conference at New Orleans in May, a program of conservation of Southern pine forests was launched which should help to solve a problem that has troubled conservationists since the advent of the paper industry to the southern pine regions. This was the opinion expressed by Joseph C. Kircher, Southern Regional Forester of the U. S. Forest Service, Atlanta, Ga., in commenting on the meeting.

The members present at this conference, representing a large section of the pulpwood industry in the South, accepted a conservation policy looking toward the establishment of the pulpwood lands of the South as a permanent source of production. For the purpose of administration, the South was divided into four districts, over each of which a representative of the industry will maintain supervision. The pulp and paper mills in Alabama, Mississippi and West Florida were assigned to Group 3.

At their meeting in Mobile, Ala., Group 3 adopted the first cutting and conservation rules to bring about better forest practices on company-owned and non-company lands. "Although the rules adopted at the Mobile meeting fall far short of what is required to prevent depletion of growing stock, they will prevent devastation in most cases," Regional Forester Kircher said. He also stated that the U. S. Forest Service is cooperating with the industry in its attempt to keep the forest lands of the South in a productive condition.

The rules adopted by this group provide for leaving at least four thirty seedlings are already established. They also provide that stands of timber 7 inches or less in diameter at the stump may be thinned so as to leave an average of 75 trees per acre.

The group also agreed to assist the state and federal agencies in obtaining better fire control and to work with the various state foresters in solving local problems. They agreed further to use for pulpwood, where possible, the waste left behind logging operations and to work with the turpentine industry in the cutting of their worked-out timber.

The rules were admittedly a first step and are subject to revision at the end of 90 days. Regional Forester Kircher believes that better methods will result from these rules and that they will be improved as the companies work out their forest practices. The enforcement of the rules lies entirely in the hands of the industry.

When You Need a Laxative

Thousands of men and women know how wise it is to take Black-Draught at the first sign of constipation. They like the refreshing relief it brings. They know its timely use may save them from feeling badly and possibly losing time at work from sickness brought on by constipation.

BLACK-DRAUGHT
A GOOD LAXATIVE

There Must Be A Reason For This

FOR the 12 months ending May, 1937, residential customers in 75 per cent of the towns and communities served by Alabama Power Company used electricity in amounts substantially greater than the national average.

In March, 1937,* the national average annual electricity consumption per residential customer was 743 kilowatt hours. In June of 1937, the average annual use of electricity per Alabama Power Company residential customer was 1,222.3 kilowatt hours, or almost two-thirds more than the national average!

What Can Be The Reasons For This?

Is it, perhaps, the dependable, reliable service furnished our customers? Or, possibly, the low rate at which they have for years been able to buy electricity? Or is it likely that the company's policy of constantly introducing new electrical appliances to lighten household tasks played some part?

Or is it a combination of all these things that have created among Alabama Power Company customers that degree of satisfaction with electric service and its cost that has made Alabama outstanding in the large amount of electricity used by her residents and the low price they pay for it?

PROGRAM OF EROSION CONTROL SUPPORTED BY FAMERS

Operators of 103 farms, comprising 1078 acres in the Soil Conservation Service area near Clanton, Ala., are working out complete programs of soil and water conservation on their farms at the end of the fiscal year on June 30th. According to the annual report of James H. Wood, 1, amp Superintendent of crop cropping, one of the outstanding vegetative methods of erosion control is being followed on 50,000 acres and cooperating farmers have increased low, proved crop rotation on 25,000 acres, their cultivated land on 10,000 acres, crops have been increased 28,200 acres.

A total of 214 miles of terraces have been constructed, protecting 2100 acres, and contour furrows have been constructed, in pastures to protect 30 acres. Contour cultivation has been practiced on approximately 75 percent of the land in row crops.

On the steeper slopes 360 acres have been retired to new forest through the planting of 1,067,175 trees. Proper woodland management practices are being followed on 2,230 acres of existing woodland on the farms in the area.

The various mechanical, cultural, and vegetative methods of erosion control are coordinated on each farm so as to conserve the soil and water resources of the farm by putting each acre to the use for which it is best adapted, Mr. Wood said.

A SERMON BY THE REV. J. C. HAYES OF FLORIDA

What Shall We Do With Jesus?
Since visiting Chilton County, which is a home, and seeing the conditions that exist in some of the churches, my heart has been stirred upon this thought: "What Shall We Do With Jesus?" and I am just wondering if I must were to pass through our com-

Experts Chart Polio Recovery

At the age of eight months, Baby Troy Lee Jones was stricken with poliomyelitis last fall. For weeks his physician all but despaired of his life. Every muscle, it seemed, was paralyzed, even the muscles of the eyes. When 14 months old, he could crawl and climb into chairs, and was learning to talk. He is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Kermit Jones, of Manchester star route, Jasper, and was visited by a W.F.A. nurse enrolled in the after-care program.

munity if we would talk about Him? That is just what is happening. Jesus is passing by daily, but there are people who have come into the church half born, that have driven Christ away from many a poor hungering soul, they won't let him stop.

What I mean by half born is: they are still carrying the shell, and that shell is Sin. In the first Epistle of John, seventh verse, it says, "But if we walk in the light, we have fellowship one with another, and the blood of Jesus Christ cleanseth us from all sin."

There are many people today who are denying the power of the blood. Oh, they say, "If it were not for the 'Old Adam nature, I could do so and so, and how about the blood, have you had it applied? Are you washed in the blood of the Lamb? Are you walking daily with Him? Have you drank from His fountain?"

"Let's be honest and quit lying on God. He knows just where you are and what you are. What shall we do with Jesus?"

Some say if our laws were enforced we would have greater churches. Now let's be honest. Isn't our trouble right in our churches? Stop! Think for a moment. We have left church discipline, and thieves have come in. Liars, drunkards, tattlers, lovers of pleasure more than lovers of God. Let's quit blaming our law and get Jesus in our hearts.

"Can't you trust Him? Don't you believe His word? He says 'Whatsoever we ask, believing, we shall receive.'"

"Don't you want a clean church? Don't you want your boys and girls saved?"

"What shall we do with Jesus?" "You say religion isn't what it used to be. God says, I never change. The same religion that saved our forefathers will save you, and me. It is through the new birth that you are saved."

"Have you been born again? Are you a living fountain of water springing up into life everlasting? You should be and if you are not, it is your own fault. Don't try to lay the blame on Jesus."

"Get out of the old shell and put on the armour of Christ.

"The modernist says religion should be dressed up. Do away with the altar and the new birth. Instead advertise swimming parties, picture shows, card parties. Get the young people in the church, then convert them. This is the devil's plan of salvation. Can you carry your Bible to the movie? Can you play cards with it in your lap? Can you stand on God's holy day half dressed with his word in your hand and say 'Come Lord Jesus?'"

"Then why don't you come on out of the old shell and give Jesus a chance with your life?"

"Do you believe that he is able to keep that which you have committed unto Him against that day?"

"Oh! But you say, 'the first thing in life should be an education. Listen—My friend the first thing you need to know is Jesus, get Him up in the gable end of your soul, then you will know how to use an education. I know a young preacher who has a good education, also is attending Bible School, who asked a visiting minister of his own faith not to come to his church again as long as he was pastor. What is needed in this case is just what Jesus told Nicodemus, 'Ye must be born again.' And when a man gets Jesus in him, it will take away all hatred, malice and selfishness, and put love instead. That will make your education worth while."

"Most preachers say for a man to be allowed to preach today he should have a college education also attend a seminary."

"Listen! I heard once of a calf that nursed two cows, but that did not make the calf any greater. What it needed to know was its mother."

"What you need to know is Jesus, and when you get Jesus in you, then you will know your Father."

"Won't you stop where you are and say, 'Just as I am, without one plea, but that thou blood was shed for me, and that thou bidst me to come to Thee, Oh! Lamb of God, I come.'"

LASTING RESULTS

(Editorial appearing in "The Decatur Daily" in issue of July 8, 1937.)
Without any possibility of contradiction, THE DAILY looks upon the career of Senator John H. Bankhead as the finest in the history of Alabama's senators.

Faced with problems larger in magnitude, faced with every sort of "ism" known in this nation for half a century, Senator Bankhead has kept to the path of duty, he offered no "crack-pot" legislation and he has offered no support in behalf of such legislation.

His task has been that of giving the farming classes of this nation a chance to live, a chance to realize something of material benefit from their chosen pursuit and now he is offering the tenant farmer the chance of a lifetime—a chance at farm ownership. Senator Bankhead, in the face of physical odds as well as powerful opposition has kept his face to the fore, he has pressed in behalf of the agricultural peoples of the United States. Senator Bankhead has known all the while that the basis for the greater part of the economic stress of this country has been an ill-devised agricultural structure. He has made every effort to correct that structure.

That the people of Alabama think of him in terms of respect and appreciation was evidenced in his recent race to return to the senate. His reelection was overwhelming at a time when other members of the Congress were battling for dear life to hold their seats in Congress. A great many were swept from office on the tide of public dislike and misunderstanding. Senator Bankhead, at the same time, received the greatest ballot ovation in history in Alabama and he received this tribute without returning to the state to tell the voters of his position. He stayed on the job in Washington, even at the cost of his health.

THE DAILY is glad that among the heaviest votes he received were the voting totals of Morgan, Limestone and Lawrence counties.

The nation needs more such men as John H. Bankhead.

His decisions may not always follow the course indicated by the public majority, but whatever his vote his people back home realize that he has voted only after sincere consideration of public questions in every aspect. Reasoning people find no fault in such a stand.

John H. Bankhead has accomplished more for the farmer in every section of the United States in the past eight years than has been accomplished in the past century. That is a record of which Alabama is proud.—The Decatur Daily.

Dr. Mell F. Jackson Died Last Saturday

Had Many Friends Among Farmers In County

Birmingham, Ala., July 20.—Services were held here Monday for Mell F. Jackson, manager of the Products Department of the Tennessee Coal, Iron & Railroad Company, a widely known advocate of crop diversification.

Dr. Jackson died last Saturday at Mentone Springs, Ala., where he was stricken with a serious illness during a brief vacation trip. He was 50 years old.

Born on a farm near Auburn in 1880, Dr. Jackson was educated in Polytechnic Institute, where he graduated in Agriculture, and in the Toronto School of Veterinary Medicine. He came to Birmingham shortly after the turn of the century as a veterinarian. He entered the service of the Tennessee Company in 1904.

In 1924, the late George O. Crawford, then president of the company, recognized the need for an agricultural closer cooperation in Alabama. Mr. Crawford realized that this new operation company would require the services of a man well schooled in farming, and he selected a man who spoke the language of the farmer. He found such a man in Dr. Jackson, already associated with the company.

In the years that followed, Dr. Jackson gained recognition as an authoritative authority who not only produced diversification of farm products, but went directly to the farmers to show them how to diversify, improve their market crops.

Dr. Jackson enthusiastically about his task of assisting the farmer in marketing their crops, instituting methods and teaching the use of the soil new ways to improve products and make them more valuable in the market. There were many who brought him an abundant harvest success. He was enabled to enlarge his department to the extent that its fits were made available to all the southeastern states. Agencies established in Florida, Georgia, Mississippi, North Carolina, South Carolina and Tennessee.

MILLION AND A HALF TREES ANNUAL GOAL OF ALABAMA POWER COMPANY

The above pictures are of the Alabama Power Company Forest Nursery, located on U. S. Highway No. 31 about 1/4 mile south of Verbena. The nursery, started in the Spring of 1937, is the outgrowth of experimental plantings by Alabama Power Company during the past three years. According to Gomer Evans, forester for the Company, the nursery is to supply 1 1/2 million seedlings annually to "reforest company lands adjoining its reservoirs, reduce soil erosion and supply pine for Alabama industries."

Although due to weather conditions, and inability to secure a supply of good seed, the planting was late this year, nearly a half million seedlings are already under way. These will be transplanted during the late fall. Present seed beds contain 80,000 long-leaf pine seedlings, 350,000 slash pine seedlings and 50,000 black locust seedlings. Next year's plantings will include some hardwood trees, to be used as cross sectional plantings in reforested lands, to assist in fire protection and control. Ultimate capacity of the nursery will be 1 1/2 millions seedlings annually.

Picture 1 shows the nursery being seeded with a Hudson garden planter; No. 2 is the sign by which travelers on U. S. Highway No. 31 may identify the nursery; No. 3 shows the sprinkler system used in dry weather (water supply is from a nearby branch); No. 4 shows the mulching operation to help retain moisture until the seeds sprout (this is later removed); No. 5 should be a familiar scene to all truck and flower gardeners—the inevitable hand weeding of the seed beds.

Brief Farm News

Edward A. O'Neal, president, American Farm Bureau Federation, is urging farmers of Alabama and the Nation to urge their senators and congressmen for prompt passage of the 1937 Agricultural Adjustment Act.

The 1937 spring pig crop was above the average though slightly smaller than the 1936 crop. The number this year is estimated at 62,000 head compared with 638,000 head in 1936.

Construction is starting on the huge regional livestock laboratory at Auburn. The laboratory will work on livestock and poultry diseases and pests. It will serve 13 southern states.

David A. Wallace, newly appointed president of the Chrysler Division of the Chrysler Corporation, started his working career in much the same manner as Walter P. Chrysler, chairman of the board of the Chrysler Corporation. Both were small-town Kansas boys who first went to work in railroad shops, Mr. Chrysler on the Union Pacific and Mr. Wallace on the Santa Fe. Mr. Wallace has had a fine variety of experience in various branches of manufacturing both as operative and executive.

On a recent economy run from Birmingham, Wash. to Harrison Hot Springs, Vancouver and return, a Chrysler Royal averaged 20.3 miles to the gallon of gasoline. The route covered 208.8 miles and much of the way was over rough roads and up steep inclines. Speeds up to 50 miles an hour were frequent. Nate Johnson of the Johnson Motor Co., Birmingham, drove the car and an observer was furnished by the Birmingham Herald.

Extra Safe

BECAUSE in Firestone Standard Tires—

YOU GET EXTRA PROTECTION AGAINST BLOWOUTS—eight extra pounds of rubber are added to every 100 pounds of cord by the Firestone patented Gum-Dipping process. By this process every fiber in every cord is saturated with liquid rubber. This counteracts dangerous internal friction and heat that ordinarily cause blowouts.

YOU GET EXTRA PROTECTION AGAINST PUNCTURES—because under the tread are two extra layers of Gum-Dipped cords.

YOU GET EXTRA PROTECTION AGAINST SKIDDING—because the tread is scientifically designed.

YOU GET LONGER NON-SKID MILEAGE because of the extra tough, long-wearing tread.

Thirteen Millionth
Chevrolet Rolls
Off At Flint

Another milestone in industry was reached Wednesday, when the 13-millionth Chevrolet rolled off the assembly line in the Flint plant of the Chevrolet division, General Motors Corporation.

In spite of interrupted production, Chevrolet's 13th millionth car was produced in a period of just two days more than 11 months, the second-shortest million-unit period in the company's history. Officials stated

A STURDY CAMPAIGNER
THERE is a physical side to this business of campaigning for the presidency.

In the earlier days, candidates went personally into the hinterlands, making, not one-night stands but brief pauses interrupted to move on to a newer and perhaps more fertile field. It was a tremendous strain on them physically.

Today, with improved travel accommodations and the help of radio, campaigning is not the arduous task of former years, but it has its moments.

William Jennings Bryan, torch bearer of extraordinary record in politics, doubtless is the man who proved the sturdiest campaigner of them all. And even he almost broke down.

Bryan was physically fit and energetic when he first stumbled the country in 1896, bearing his cross of gold. He insisted on patronizing the local trains, riding in the day coaches at the outset of his tour.

In that campaign, Bryan delivered as many as 20 speeches a day, a great part of them from the rear of his slow-moving train. In Tennessee, his throat began to balk. When this was known, many curatives were pressed upon him. One bottle of a remedy for hoarseness was tested by Benton McMillen of Tennessee and found to contain a caustic fluid which might have injured Bryan permanently.

It was toward the end of that campaign that Bryan began to approach exhaustion. He had completed a three-days' series of speeches in Chicago. Despite his splendid physique, the strain began to tell. He was scheduled to travel north of Chicago when his "loop" engagements were ended. But so trying had been the requirements of his tour that it was necessary to delay the start of the party for more than two hours.

Randolph News

Judge J. F. Thompson has graciously accepted our invitation to be present and take part on our program at our barbecue which will be July 31st, at Randolph.

Judge Thompson will speak in the morning and I'm sure his friends of Bibb and the surrounding counties will want to hear him. Supt. L. R. Stone said that he would be glad to come and spend the day with us. He has promised to bring with him a PWA representative who has been instrumental in getting some money to be spent on our school building. The program for our barbecue has not been completed but I assure you of a day of action and entertainment if you will come and spend the day with us.

Watch the News next week for further announcements.

The music school begins next Monday, July 26. A charge of $2.00 per pupil will be the only expense. Mr. Davis Smithman and Mr. Edgar Lawley will run their trucks the first morning. The parents should come along with their children. Visiting dates are as follows: July 26th and 30th, and August 6th and 13th.

The insurance of $39.26 on our building was due June 26th, but Edw. Brown who takes care of this for us was given a month—to the 26th of July—to pay this. This does not mean that we will not have to pay for this month, but we hoped to deed the building to the state during this time and be relieved of this burden. Mr. Brown, I'm glad to say, is able to do the school this favor of paying the insurance when due and as collections come in he is repaid. I'm afraid people of Randolph school community do not appreciate what Mr. Brown has been to and done for our school.

Anyone having a yearling, hog or goats for sale please see Dalton Brown or me. This is for our barbecue.—J. Hudson Williams.

that the demand for the 1937 models has exceeded anything heretofore known, and that, but for the frequent interruptions of output since January 1, production and workers' wages would have shattered all previous records, and the present milestone would have been reached from 60 to 90 days earlier.

Production of No. 13th million was marked by no ceremonies at the factory, but F. E. Coyle, general manager of the division, issued a brief statement from his Detroit office officially announcing the event, which was also the occasion for an informal luncheon, attended by Mr. Coyle, Mr. Holler, and other executives of the company.

When the present management, headed by Mr. Coyle, took over the reins in October, 1933, the company had built 9,000,000 cars and trucks. The 10-millionth was produced November 20, 1934, the 11-millionth Dec. 4, 1935, and the 12-millionth August 5, 1936. Records show that it took 12 years for the company to build its first million units, while the remaining 12 million have been produced in a period of only 14 years. Mr. Coyle has been a member of the Chevrolet organization throughout the production of all but 120,000 of the 13,000,000 units built to date.

HYPOID REAR AXLES ARE KNOWN FOR DEPENDABLE

Hypoid rear axles are generally today in all fine cars. The rear of any car is important, because usually through this particular part of the car that power is delivered to the wheels from the propeller. It is a part of the car that is made that usually the owner has concern about it, so long as he has his service man provide the proper lubrication at proper times, and allowances for seasons depending on the climate in which the car is used.

"Quiet operation and long life are the two advantages of the Plymouth hypoid rear axle," said C. R. Cogswell, service manager of the Polk Bros. Motor Co., local Chrysler-Plymouth dealer.

"It has lowered the propeller so that there is no ugly tunnel in the floor running the length of the car. The gears, due to the hypoid design, have longer and stronger teeth. This increased gear tooth contact, gives a need for special lubrication.

Finest service results will be obtained from the hypoid rear axle by cleaning and flushing out the gears, refilling with proper grade of oil at least once every 6,000 miles.

The lubricant of any car is the most important feature of keeping it in smooth operating condition, and giving maximum satisfaction. The right way to lubricate each vital part of an automobile. Service men trained to give this highly necessary service at no extra cost to the owner.

PREPARE NOW FOR EGG PRODUCTION THIS FALL

Eggs are made before they are laid, and egg production during the coming fall and winter will depend largely on the feed and care that pullets receive during the summer months.

Pullets should have all of the feed that they will eat, says John E. Ivey, extension poultry specialist. Limiting the feed for pullets during the summer usually results in stunted growth and low egg production. A good way to feed pullets is to give them free access to mash in self-feeders and a heavy feed of grain at night. Milk is one of the best feeds for chickens at all times for all ages, he says, and the feeding of a balanced ration promotes normal growth and increases the pullet's resistance to disease.

Keeping the pullets healthy is also important. Pullets should have access to roomy, comfortable, well-ventilated houses, free from drafts and dampness. Crowding at night in poorly ventilated houses or brood coops is the starting of many poultry troubles.

Clean range is essential in profitable poultry production, he points out. Alfalfa, clover, lespedeza, or blue grass sod make suitable range for growing pullets. Succulent green feed will lower the mortality and feed costs and increase the rate of growth. They should have access to clean fresh water at all times and shade in hot weather. Lice and mites do most damage in hot weather. Poultry raisers should not wait until pullets are badly infested with these parasites before taking steps to control them.

The laying flock should be given good feed and care during the summer. The best hens if properly fed will continue to lay thru the summer and until late in the fall. Hens that stop laying in July and August are usually low producers and should be sold, Mr. Ivey advises.

Less Monthly Discomfort

Many women, who formerly suffered from a weak, run-down condition as a result of poor assimilation of food, say they benefited by taking CARDUI, a special medicine for women. They found it helped to increase the appetite and improve digestion, thereby bringing them more strength from their food.

Naturally there is less discomfort at monthly periods when the system has been strengthened and the various functions restored and regulated.

Cardui, praised by thousands of women, is well worth trying. Of course, if not benefited, consult a physician.

That's What I Think

Saul M. Goldstein

The idea of procuring for Chilton County an up-to-date public swimming pool and recreation center, long harbored by public-minded citizens, seems to be making some forward steps toward actual accomplishments. Meetings have been held between members of several local organizations to lay plans. The easiest method, of course, is to secure government support, as was obtained in securing the airport. I understand that when the latter project was assured, a plan for a swimming pool was also approved by the WPA of Clanton, but at the time the necessary local support could not be obtained. That government funds could again be obtained at the present time is a question open to doubt. The federal government has strongly curtailed its spending on public projects. However, should the funds become available, it is hardly seemly that we should again be found wanting.

I think it can safely assume that you who read this column, though perhaps not many in number, are ones who have been reading it for several issues; and since the majority of topics I have undertaken to discuss are subjects for the general public welfare, I believe I can safely assume that you who read this column are deeply interested in the social and public welfare of the county.

It is upon such as you that Chilton County must depend if it is to accomplish such a project; upon your moral and financial support will depend the outcome of this undertaking. You, the individual reader of this column—not your neighbor, or the subscriber from whom you may have borrowed this issue of the paper, nor the mayor, nor the county commissioners—but YOU must play your individual part.

There is work to be done and money to be raised. One man or a few men cannot do it all. A dollar here, five dollars there, twenty-five from another, all these must be gathered together, tabulated, and held ready for the approval of the project by the WPA. It takes people, public-spirited people, to do it. I am appealing to YOU who read this column, as public-spirited citizens of Chilton County to come forward NOW.

Without delay, get in touch with either Dr. V. J. Gragg, at his office, or with me at my place of business, and let one of us know exactly what you can and will do to aid in this undertaking.

Chilton County and Clanton have not failed in other undertakings to improve the general welfare of their people; let us not fail in this project which means so much to the social and physical health of the community.

At least, that's what I think.

FIRST SIX WEEKS IN EIGHT ACTS

For the first two days after chickens hatched the temperature should be kept at 90 to 92 degrees, and gradually reduced to 80 or 85 degrees by the end of the second week. The tendency usually due to a too-high or too-low temperature or a variation in temperature.

The brooder house should be thoroughly cleaned and disinfected with a solution of creosote before chicks are put into it. Pests, mites, shavings, or good straw with the chaff removed are excellent for litter. When the chicks are first put down the litter should be covered with burlap or several thicknesses of rough paper.

A circle of wire covered with burlap or cotton sacks should be set up around the brooder house until chicks learn where the heat is.

The ordinary brooder house will handle from 250 to 300 chicks. A costly mistake is that of trying to raise more chicks than can be properly cared for. If a portable house is used it should be moved to fresh ground and cleaned and aired before chicks are put into it.

Water is essential. The chick should be removed, and to aid in the prevention of disease, and spread of infection, one-quarter level teaspoon of chlorine powder should be added to each gallon (use one measuring spoon to every 10 gallons of water). Drinking troughs should be kept clean. Washing them in a solution of Purina disinfectant is a safe method of preventing spread of disease through the fountains.

As chicks grow older they need more and more drafts should never be allowed to blow on them. Chicks chill easily and need plenty of warmth the first few weeks.

One of the best ways to prevent crowding and mites is to provide low slatted roosts in the brooder house early and have chicks begin using them at three weeks. A roosting frame made of 1" by 2" material cut to the full length or width of the brooder house can be hinged to the wall at a height of 8 to 10 inches. It can be pulled back against the wall when not in use.

During the first six weeks chicks need the best starting food obtainable. By all means it should be fortified with purtine, and rich protein vitamin A concentrate that gives extra vigor and vitality to chicks. The starting feed should also contain a lot of ver to proven quality. The soundest method of determining quality in cod liver oil is by feeding it to rats and chicks in actual laboratory tests. Inclusion of high quality oil in the starting feed protects chicks against rickets.

The starting feed should also be made up of ingredients that have been blended scientifically. Almost anyone can put two or more ingredients together to form a mash—but it requires years of scientific study to determine which ingredients should be included and in what amounts to get maximum growth, strong and sturdy legs, and deep yellow pigmentation in chicks.

Many people are discouraged because their dogs are not getting all of their food. But the proper feeding of dogs is no longer a mysterious complex business. Manufacturers of modern dog foods include in their products meat, protein, vitamins, cod liver oil, salt, minerals, purtine, and dried milk. Purina dog chow comes in a compressed checker form which makes for a greater convenience in feeding. It is also a complete feed, which means that the dog needs only chew and water for a complete feeding. It is easy to feed and leaves no greasy dishes, a desirable feature in the eyes of the housewife.

Two families of skunks staged a feud in the district school near Owosso, Mich., and as a result the school board had a special meeting and solemnly declared the building "unfit for occupancy."

MAPLE SPRINGS

Sunday school was very well attended Sunday though at lot of our members have not been attending much lately, and we want to urge all the Sunday school members to come next Sunday as there is some very important business to attend to. Let's not let our Sunday school go down just as our revival comes on, so let's urge and beg of you to come back next Sunday and bring somebody with you.

Our revival meeting comes off the second week in August and there must be some cleaning up done on the house and yards so the Sunday school decided on a day to meet and do this work, which is the first Friday in August. HONOLULU

ly for Hawaiian music before, but I was thoroughly convinced of its effectiveness in that one afternoon.

During the next week Mandy and I had our introduction to Royal Hawaiian, the Moana, and Young Roof. These are the three largest hotels in Honolulu and are the most popular places in town to dine and dance. The Young is in the center of town, but the Royal and the Moana are on famous Waikiki beach.

The Royal is an attractive pink stone building while the Moana is a story-book version of a old Southern Colonial home with its enormous white columns. In both the dancing is out in the open under the stars. The tables are on the terrace covered with an enormous awning. Trees are growing all around among the tables—holes are cut in the awning to allow them to go out through the top. One of the most famous trees in Honolulu is the enormous banyan tree in the center of the dance floor at the Moana. I had never seen a banyan tree before. It is particularly interesting for the fact that small limbs growing down to the ground from the larger limbs and take root, making what looks like a network of different trunks to the same tree. We spent many, many pleasant nights dancing at these three places during the six weeks we were in Honolulu.

We also went to a number of nice affairs at Waialeale and the Pearl Harbor Yacht club. Neither of these, however, are very different from what you find in the States. An interesting little place, though, is the Helani Boat and Yacht club, popularly known as the Rathskellar. There is nothing beautiful about the place, certainly, but it is one of the oldest clubs of its sort in Honolulu. The members are both Hawaiians and "houles" (pronounced "how-lee," the Hawaiian word for white people). The walls are filled with pictures from years and years back of the old rowing crews, gentlemen in long bathing suits and even longer "mustachios." Another odd feature is that instead of having a regular floor show, each evening the master of ceremonies calls on prominent patrons to put one on. The native hula comes in for its share, of course. And I might mention here that as the Hawaiians do it, the hula is an exceptionally graceful dance. The hands, of course, follow the words of the song and tell the story in continuous motion. The rest of the entertainment is for the most part singing and some of it is really very lovely.

During the second and third weeks we were in Honolulu, the Navy was there for maneuvers. This seems to be one of the high spots of the year for the townspeople. The old saying about the town's "turning out" is no exaggeration here. There were all sorts of parties for the officers every afternoon and evening. We went to any number of tea-dances at the Young and Royal and then more formal evening dances at Waialeale, the Moana, and the Royal again. We also went to dinner parties almost every night, small private ones and then the very large Admirals' dinners.

One of the loveliest sights I've ever seen took place while the Fleet was there. Two nights before they left Honolulu, there was an enormous searchlight display from nine to nine-thirty in the evening. The ships were anchored all the way from Pearl Harbor to Waikiki, a distance of several miles, and each ship sent out several enormous beams of light. The night was one of those typically beautiful Hawaiian nights with no moon but hundreds of very bright stars. With the admission of hundreds of long, steady beams of blue light across the water and making networks across the sky, the scene was simply too impressive to describe. We were fortunate enough to be out right in the middle of it, and I've never seen a sight that thrilled me quite as much.

We spent a great deal of our time in Honolulu, of course, out on the water and on the beach. Most of the time on the beach was spent at Waikiki at the Outrigger Canoe Club (Virginia was excited to death when her signature on the members roster turned out to be immediately below one of the Vanderbilts.) While I hate to say it, I must admit that I was terribly disappointed in Waikiki. It is the only beach in the world with all the elements in the world for surfing, but for swimming it is practically no good. The beach itself is very narrow and just a few yards out in the water the coral reefs begin. If you are unfortunate enough to step down on one of these, you get cut up rather badly.

We went on a number of picnics on the other side of the island, however, where there are some of the most beautiful beaches I have ever seen. It is only one hundred and fifty miles around the whole island so nothing is very hard to get to.

That is one fascinating feature about Oahu—you can get almost any scene and a variety of different climates by taking only a few minute drive. You can be on the beach or down in one of the valleys or up in the mountains all within a very short time. A great many people have summer homes on one of the mountains and, twenty minutes away in the valley, a winter home. Although they say there is no winter as we know it in Honolulu, leaves even stay on most of the trees the year around.

The climate while we were there was perfect. It was right in the day for cotton dresses and just cool enough at night for a very light coat. When I first got to Honolulu and was told that it rained somewhere every day, mostly in the valleys, I was worried about the prospects of getting drenched everytime I went out. I only saw two hard rains, however, but the whole time that I was there. It did rain some every day, but it was just a very light mist and no one was bothered by it in the least. As a matter of fact, the sun kept right on shining through it most of the time.

As for the best known sights around the island, I suppose the Pali heads the list. You approach it from Honolulu by going gradually up the side of a mountain. When the peak is reached, it drops off hundreds of feet in sheer bluffs on the other side. The rim at the top is known as the Pali. The historical significance of the place is very well explained by the first verse of the popular Hawaiian song, "King Kamehamehah" (pronounced Kamay-hamay-hah).

"King Kamehamehah
Conqueror of the Islands
Became a famous hero one day.
He followed a native army
And pushed them over the Pali
And crowned himself King of Hawaii."

Another famous spot is Koko Head and the Blow Hole. Koko Head is nothing but a large rock jutting out into the ocean but the Blow Hole at its base is very interesting. Through the years the strong incoming surf has washed in under the edge of the rock. Having no place to escape, it finally washed a hole up through the rock. Now every few minutes a great column of water shoots up through this hole high into the air like a geyser.

The "Upside-down" Falls are something I've never heard of in any other part of the world. Coming down the side of one of the mountains there are three little falls. When they reach a certain ledge, the wind is so terrifically strong that it blows the water back up the side of the mountain in a great spray instead of letting it continue its way on down to the valley. It's very strange to see those falls coming down the side of the mountain and suddenly stopping right in the middle.

"Please be good enough to send me a dozen copies of your good paper under date of July 8th.
"I was extremely impressed with your editorial and sent it to Col. Pritchard, who wrote you a letter of commendation under date of July 14th. This is a splendid statement of facts and should be given wide publicity.

FOR COUNTY FAIR

Chelsea, Alabama, July 19, 1937
"Dear Editor:
"I read the piece Dr. Gragg wrote in the Chilton County News last week. I don't see why Chilton County can't have a fair every year. They used to have them.
"I was born and raised in Chilton County, although I am a citizen of Shelby now. I like to see Chilton improve. It sure has improved lots in the last 15 years.
"We have a community fair at Chelsea every fall. It is surprising to see all the farm products, stock, canned stuff and fancy work. I know if a small place like Chelsea can have a fair Clanton ought to.
"It gives the farmers something to work for; also the women. It seems that Dr. Gragg is doing all he can to help the County improve. Why don't you farmers come on and help him put over one more big fair this fall? You can if you will.
"MRS. J. T. RUTHERFORD,
"Chelsea, Ala."

TAX EVASION

"Birmingham, Ala., July 14, 1937.
"Mr. Billy Smith, Publisher,
"Chilton County News,
"Clanton, Alabama.
"Dear Mr. Smith:
"The editorial appearing in the issue of the News of July 8th, 1937, reference tax evasion, has been noted and brought to my attention by a number of people in this county.
"It is timely. It is the type of editorial that really contains merit, and is designed to protect the interest of the masses of the American people. Educational items of this type giving the rank and file of our citizenship the true facts in reference to their government and its function is of inestimable value to the continued existence of our Democratic system of government.
"I am,
"Very truly yours,
"W. S. PRITCHARD,
"Attorney at Law."

ABOUT ROAD FUNDS

EDITOR'S NOTE: Below is published a letter mailed to the News with a request that it be published this week:
"Maplesville, Ala., July 16, 1937.
"Hon. J. Lee Smith,
"Judge of Probate,
"Chilton County,
"Clanton, Alabama.
"Dear Judge:
"I have received a copy of your letter of July 15th to T. J. Arledge, Road Supervisor, in regard to placing bituminous surface treatment from State Highway to Manlesville High School, and note that Mr. Arledge is requesting an extra appropriation in order to do this work. I was very much surprised to know that there were not sufficient funds in the Road and Bridge and a Gasoline Funds to take care of the outstanding obligations against the Road Department on July 1st, 1937, in as much as I had noticed a statement in the Union-Banner from our Representative, Charlie Cox, stating that he was well pleased with the local act placing the road work of the County in charge of a Road Supervisor; that the people are well pleased; and that much good had been accomplished in spite of the fact that the supervisor had to operate on a small budget provided by the Commissioners Court.
"If your statement relative to funds and obligations against Road Department is correct, it appears the Commissioners Court has been very liberal in making their appropriation to the Road Department. Mr. Cox may be well pleased with the results as per his statement, but I am sure he has been misinformed as to the people being pleased and as to the condition of our roads.
"I believe that if Mr. Cox would travel over our roads in Chilton County that he, too, would be opposed to his local act, as the people were opposed before and since the passing of same. There is one provision of the act which meets with my approval, and this relates to relative of officials being employed in the Road Department, however, I feel that this should apply to relatives of all officials.
"Local governments, in my opinion, should be run by the local people, and not from the capital, and I look forward to the day when the Commissioners Court of Chilton County can again supervise the roads of our county.
"Yours very truly,
"HILL J. FOSHEE"

Of The Times

— Billy Smith

Indianapolis
When the roll is called at the national convention of Young Democrats in Indianapolis, Chilton County expects to be heard in a large way, judging from statements from Mrs. Gladys Deane of Verbena, who is national committeewoman from Alabama. And, when the roll call for votes is made, Chilton County will be there with "Alabama's forty-four votes for Maner" for national president of the League of Young Democrats. Mr. Maner is one of our outstanding Democrats in state and is private secretary to Governor Graves.

The word "murder" is a horrible one. The act of murdering is still more horrible. Large cities endeavor to keep down murder records, and many cities pride themselves on their murder rate being exceedingly low. Yet, few cities have realized that Chilton County has had five murders within the last six months, and that these five murders were committed within a distance of approximately five miles or less. That is certainly not to be proud of.

Controversies
hear, and read, quite a lot about murder, (if it may be called a murder), of the roads in this county about the circumstances surrounding the condition. For a long time, we have gone the limit in attempting to remedy the condition through which this condition could be remedied. We have had interested citizens who are same heart—at a loss to thoroughly understand the matter. Yet, some time soon, we believe that this matter will pop up most unexpectedly and the matter will dissolve itself in that which will be satisfactory to all. The county whose money is being used for the maintenance of buildings of roads.

Samuel Roberts
We are proud of our new friend, Samuel Johnson Roberts. Although we haven't yet had the pleasure of making his acquaintance, we already have a friend in him. He is a fine boy, too. We know, because his mother and father said so. We believe them. Sam hasn't been in yet, either, but we expect to see him in the near future. In viewing the sights of his new home, Sam will be glad enough to bring word. Sam arrived in Clanton one week ago, tipping the scales at 175 pounds, as his father states. Sam is the new Mr. and Mrs. Norman (Buck) Roberts, and we imagine we will hear from him when he rounds out about 200 pounds more of life.

Black—Stateman
Alabama newspaperman who has been to openly say that Senator Black should be replaced, no longer an unpleasant dream the future, or after. It would be difficult to say which, if neither, then we can say that the man for having such inclinations. The newspaper in that is becoming so restless, and the monotony of an annual year would do well to find a new angle to antagonize instead of defeat even before he can "whites of their eyes" when he goes to Senator Black and any other Alabama man who is not a white when the time comes.

Orchestra
A group of ambitious young men of the Clanton Synagogue are desiring to have an orchestra of every person in the city, that person cares for music. We have had the pleasure of hearing this orchestra and withal, it can be great possibility for Clanton to have the one that has needed a long time. The "savage beast" so said once, and Clanton now is a different animal. At least, the music helps almost any one to be a good orchestra. A brass band such as Homer Gaddy is in the making at the Alabama.

Least Week
The week, we have not done as well as we were in the category of being indisposed and not so. The work last week, when this work last week was written. So, we have had a great possibility for Clanton to have the one that has needed a long time. The "savage beast" so said once, and Clanton now is a different animal. At least, the music helps almost any one to be a good orchestra. A brass band such as Homer Gaddy is in the making at the Alabama.

County-Wide Camp Of 4-H Club Boys Thoroughly Enjoyed At Blue Creek Camp

The county-wide camp of the Chilton County 4-H Club Boys was held July 21 through July 23 at Blue Creek Camp on the Coosa River. The boys arrived and registered during the morning in time to have a swim before lunch was served. A menu was worked out on individual basis and each boy brought his food unprepared. It was turned over to the manager of Blue Creek Camp, Mrs. Claude Billingsley, who saw to it that each and every one had three hearty meals every day, well prepared. At the beginning of camp it was announced that there would be three prizes given to the champions of the Horseshoe Tournament, Best Stunt on Stunt Night and the Best Campers. A list of the room winners and champion winners are listed below:
Horseshoe winners by rooms:
Room 1—Percy Crew, Billy Eiland.
Room 2—James Rutland, Roy Smith.
Room 4—Frank Collins, Jr., Carl Parker.
Room 5—Osmond Cleckler, Allston Klinger.

Stunt Night
Each room got up a stunt of their own ability and presented it Thursday night. These stunts were varied and some of them were quite amusing. At more often receive letters when things go wrong. Still, we realize that if it was not for the "downs," the "ups" would not be so sweet.

County-Wide Camp Of 4-H Club Boys Thoroughly Enjoyed At Blue Creek Camp

This particular time the boys had an audience composed of the Methodist Sunday School Class and they seemed to enjoy the stunts as much or more than the boys. Mrs. Billingsley, who was the judge, gave Room 4 first place, which was a watermelon eating contest with the boys' hands tied behind them. The winner had to eat all the watermelon clear down to the white with no pink spots left with no aid other than his mouth. Carl Parker and Will Porter rushed tied in this. Their entire room was awarded.

This program will be given in conjunction with the large nursery program now underway in this county.

1937, and since that time they have not been able to draw any pay from the County for their work. The Supervisor, in his letter to the Attorney General and which was reprinted in the Chilton County News July 1, 1937, stated that he was guaranteeing the wages of these men pending a ruling from the Attorney General. The Supervisor has been able to partly compensate these men with sufficient funds for the past two months to enable them to have the actual necessities of life and continue their work for the County.
The ruling from the Attorney General was published verbatim in this paper July 1, 1937, and all are well aware of the fact that this ruling fully established the fact that the Commissioner's Court had no authority to discharge or cause the removal of any employee of the road department. Therefore, if the Supervisor has the right to employ these men under the law then it most certainly stands to common reason that they should be paid for the services rendered to Chilton County and all those people who live along the roads throughout the County.

Friday Is Last Day For Rabies Treatment

Tomorrow, Friday, is the last day owners of dogs in Chilton County may have the animals given the anti-rabies serum, according to an announcement this week from Dr. W. L. Parrish, inspector for this county.

Dr. Parrish stated that he would be at the McCain Stables in Clanton tomorrow beginning at eight o'clock in the morning until three-thirty P.M. Approximately 2,500 to 3,000 dogs have been given this inoculation during the recent campaign. Dog owners are warned that the law provides for a penalty if this treatment is not given.

MUSICAL CONCERT AT COURT- HOUSE FRIDAY NIGHT, JULY 30

Prof. W. M. Devaughn and his two singing classes from Concord and Enterprise will put on a concert at the courthouse Friday night, July 30, beginning at 7:45 o'clock. This will be the closing exercises of the two schools, which have been in progress for the past month.

The program will last about one and one-half hours, and will consist of class singing, quartets, songs, solos, etc. Prof. Devaughn says that he believes this will be one of the best programs of the kind ever put on in this county. The class singing especially promises to be really good.

The admission charge will be fifteen cents to everybody—grown ups as well as children. This price is within range of all, and should not deprive anyone of hearing the program. Everybody is invited to attend.
A special feature on the program will be singing by Minzo C. Jones and his trio, from Bessemer. This is said to be exceptionally good.

ROAD WORK SUSPENDED 'TIL AUGUST 1

Shortage Of Funds For Work Is Blamed For Recent Shut-Down

Chilton County's road department is at a standstill and will be until the first of August, or until the Commissioners Court makes another appropriation of funds, according to T. J. Arledge, road supervisor. Work was suspended Monday, Mr. Arledge stated that due to the last appropriation made by the Court being exhausted this action was necessary.

In commenting on this, Judge Lee Smith, chairman of the Commissioners Court stated that "the court had appropriated all available funds to the road department and that 'at present there is not enough monies in the road bridge and gasoline funds to pay the outstanding obligations against the road department'."
Judge Smith also cited the News to a statement given him from the County Treasurer, showing that during the first six months of 1937, there had been charged against the Road Department the sum of $41,329.67, as appropriate.

Fishing Party Back From Deep Sea Trip

Arriving back in Clanton Tuesday night, a party of local men reported a splendid fishing trip of several days on the gulf, near old Fort Morgan, below Mobile. Approximately 500 pounds of fish were caught by the party and this amount included one large shark, caught by Loren Smith. They also visited Fort Morgan, erected in 1833.

The party was composed of J. E. Easterling, W. M. Folk, Sr., Loren Smith, Luther Foster, M. R. Lancaster, Samuel Martin, R. E. Bryan, Floyd Smith and Dr. J. M. Kimmey.

Approximately 130 Acres Purchased In County
By Government

LOCATED ONLY SHORT DISTANCE OF THORSBY

Another large nursery for reforestation purposes is being established in Chilton County by the government, according to an announcement this week from J. Mell Martin, secretary of the Clanton Kiwanis Club, the group instrumental in bringing this industry to the county.

Considerable development has already been made in this matter. It was stated. The nursery will be located about one mile southwest of Thorsby, and will include approximately 130 acres of land. The Alabama Power Company has already started work on a high-voltage line to the grounds, and the commissioners Court will widen roads leading to the nursery to take care of all heavy traffic, it is understood.

The work is now employing fifty men of this county, in addition to a large number of members of the local CC Camp. Mr. Martin stated that work of establishing the nursery, which was completed, however, until the maps on the land have been gathered.
The Kiwanis Club is to be highly congratulated on securing this for Chilton County. They have cooperated throughout with government officials.

War Is The Killer

Posters have appeared frequently to emphasize the seriousness of deaths by traffic accidents in America. One of these we saw not long ago was headed "Worse Than War."

That came to mind when we recently read some figures on deaths in the Spanish civil war, which has now been in progress for exactly one year. Lowest estimates place the death list at 500,000; other figures place the list at 1,000,000.

In a nation of less than twenty million people the deaths by machine gun bullets, by executions, and by artillery and air bombardments are greater than the total number of highway deaths in fourteen years in the United States. Figure it on the basis of population and war as a killer becomes 100 times more deadly than the automobile. Then consider the vast numbers that ride in cars and the comparatively small number engaged in military movements, and the figures spread too far apart even to bother with comparisons.

We don't object to circulars which endeavor to impress people with the dangers of modern motor traffic, but when someone tries to make us believe that we run a greater risk in our automobiles than we do on the field of battle, the argument becomes a bit extreme and unconvincing.

Economic Balance

Farm prices are higher than they were a year ago. But the purchasing power of the farmer has declined. Higher prices of the things the farmer buys is the explanation offered by the Crop Reporting Service of the United States Department of Agriculture.

Maybe this statement would bear some careful analysis. Some farmers, without doubt, are better off today than they were last year at this time. But that higher prices of everything the farmer buys do tend to offset the advantage of higher farm produce prices, is a significant fact.

This leads to the contention we have advanced on several occasions. The way to a higher American standard of living doesn't lead only along route of higher wages for a comparatively small group of organized workers. Higher wages for industrial workers that are not balanced by better earnings for other classes tend to throw the economic order out of balance, and the disparity in earnings and buying power of different groups is conceded to be a cause of our recent difficulty.

We are not opposed to high wages. We desire to see the worker receive a full return for his labor. But we are also interested in seeing farmers receive their share of the benefits of modern civilization. And we are equally interested in the small storekeeper, the white collar workers, the small investors and the unorganized workers. Earnings and buying power of all these classes must keep pace. If one gets too far ahead of the others, the result is maladjustment.

Any group of workers whose wages advance too rapidly do not benefit in the end. If the result merely leads to higher prices which restrict buying power and consumption, jobs become scarce. And then while a man may be able to establish high wages he may not be able to get a job. It should be small satisfaction to a worker to get a high hourly rate of pay but few hours of employment because his employer cannot sell the output of the business.

We hold to the belief that the welfare of the nation as a whole is more important than the welfare of any group or class, and experience shows that no class can benefit at the disadvantage of others. The report that the buying power of the farmer has declined, therefore, is a bit disconcerting.

And He Profited

We can number among our acquaintances a gentleman who has retired from active business in a small community like Clanton and at an age when he is still youthful enough to enjoy life also has the rare advantage of a comfortable and almost assured steady income.

Strangely, this gentleman was never classified among shrewd or canny investors; and during all the years he operated his small business he never had an income that climbed into the highest brackets.

But though his business was comparatively small, he was always a loyal and enthusiastic community booster. He was ever ready with his time and support for every enterprise which he thought would prove beneficial to the small city in which he lived. Though his business needed his time and energy, he also felt that he owed some thing to the community and he readily paid that obligation many times over.

Strange as it may seem to the skeptical it was this spirit of civic loyalty which directly led to his present comfortable financial position. During the course of his long career in the community several small businesses and industries were attracted by stock subscriptions. Our friend was always among those who helped bring these institutions to the community.

One of these small industries prospered amazingly. As the years rolled by it grew into a large and prosperous industry. As it grew out of earnings, the original stockholders received stock dividends. The modest investment our friend had made multiplied several times.

All of this, of course, proves nothing perhaps; but we feel that there is a sort of poetic justice in profits which grew out of such a motive. We are always glad to see men who have faith in their community profit as a result.

Most of us, of course, must satisfy ourselves with indirect benefits in return for the effort and investment we make in our community. But benefits there most surely are for those who believe in the hometown and will back that faith with tangible contributions.

Most of us here in Clanton will profit as the years advance in proportion to the growth and development of our community.

The Trailer City

The citizens who hitches his trailer to the family car and sallies forth once or twice a year on a fishing trip or some outdoor vacation excursion presents no problem. But the trailer, nevertheless, presents today one of the most perplexing of social questions.

For Government estimates discloses that more than 2,000,000 citizens now make their homes in trailers, following the seasons across the continent. The slow movement of some of these trailers on congested highways brings no joy to the motorist, and contributes nothing to the cause of highway safety. The existence of large trailer camps with their migratory populations present a myriad of questions.

Modern gypsies, we might well term these trailer dwellers. And no nation and no civilization ever became great when founded on a gypsy population.

Are people who move from place to place with no community ties and no property holdings likely to become good citizens of the localities in which they pause? We seriously doubt it. Our observation has always been that the best citizens are those who own property and have some definite, close tie to the community in which they are located. It is to these families who become a part of the community in which they live that we look for in cultural and spiritual matters.

belief that the existence of trailer camps that they are right.

We don't practice everything we preach. We haven't got time enough.

Japan and China can be counted upon to fill up any gap in war news from abroad.

It seems strange that after five years so many people can still tell you exactly what is wrong with the country and so few of them seem to agree.

The people vote themselves into debt and then try to growl themselves out.

History doesn't only repeat but is sometimes seems to improve with age.

Saving the country from its saviors is a little matter that comes before the public every two and four years.

MORAL ECHOES

I shall never forget the longing look that went over to face of one of those "Never-Do Well" who live in almost every community, as he stood just outside of our garden fence. The garden was clean and the vegetables were fresh and abundant. This lazy lounge stood there admiring what we had produced and then finally said to his father, "Mr. John, I sure wish that I had a garden of vegetables like that but there is no use to wish for we never have anything." My father never used slang but this is one time when his patient seemed to go to pieces on him and he said to this fellow, "No, you never have a good garden because you are too blooming lazy to work it." Many a fellow will whine around while the other fellow produces and try to create sympathy and secure a "Hand-Out" when he could have such abundance for himself and family if he were just smart enough to produce. If you are too lazy to hold a pole, be man enough not to whine around the other fellow's pile of fish.

While in a conversation with Captain Barrow, who has been sailing the "Tarpon" between Pensacola and Panama City, Florida, I remarked to him, "Captain, I guess you know every sand bar and every danger place on your route." I was a little surprised at his answer, "No," said he, "I do not know where the danger points are to be found, but I do know where the deep water is." This old Salt of Sea traveled for many years without an accident of any kind, not because he knew where the danger points were, but because he knew where his boat would be safe. He followed the markings of safety and took no risks. Do you know how to live safely? I can tell you. Do as Captain Barrow, do those things that you know to be right. When you discover the safe way of conduct, take no chances. A young man told me that he knew nothing about the dangers of the dance-hall for he never sailed his boat there. Be sensible, when you know there is danger in the bottle, let it alone. Sail your sea where the water is deep.

A poor wife was dying from the effects of the cruelty of a debauched husband. Before breathing her last she called him to her bedside and begged him to give up drink for the sake of her children and for himself as well. In tears he promised her that he would never touch another drop of liquor until he drank it from a glass held in her hand. The wife and mother died at twilight. That night as she lay a corpse in her basket this wretch of a fellow slipped into the room with a flask of whiskey in his hand and taking her child, lifeless fingers he pressed the glass into them and then drank down the stuff that had been the cause of her death. There is just no telling what the habit of drink will lead a man to do. A drunken father was seen to sell the shoes of his dead baby for drink. A man with the habit slipped the silver coins from the eyelids of his dead boy and bought more whiskey. And yet, our State is in the sale of this stuff. My Lord, what may we expect.

A thoughtless girl of sixteen was standing at the hotel window and was carelessly pressing her diamond ring against the glass and writing letters. Her father, seeing this called her with this command, "Daughter, stop writing on that window!" The girl turned to him in astonishment and asked why she could not write on the glass if she wanted to. "Because," replied the father, "You can never rub it out." When you take a bad habit and write on your character, it is like writing on a glass with a diamond, you can never rub it out. Glass cutters use a diamond to make a line where the glass is to be broken. Habit is the thing that cuts deep into your character and you will break easily along the lines of habit.

Many a time have I looked out over the water and watched a ship that was swinging with the tide. The sails were all set, the wind was blowing and the waves rolled to carry it on but the ship did not travel. If I had not known why, I would have wondered why the ship did not move. Sails were pulling, the wind was blowing and the waves rolling, but the ship swung to and from but made no journey. She could not for deep beneath the water an anchor was digging itself into the bottom of the sea and the ship could not move. So we often see a young person well equipped, well educated, well groomed as he lives in this age. Everything seems favorable for him to move out to success, but he fails to do so. There is something wrong, something is holding him back. Alas! my friend we find that he is securely anchored to some bad habit. A secret vice is had out in life and he can never advance as long as that is holding him. If you wish to move out to success you had better cut loose from all bad habits. They never fail to hold you back.

TIMELY SUGGESTIONS AND ANNOUNCEMENTS

FARMER'S WEEK at Auburn August 6. Farmers interested in attending this meeting should be making plans for this trip now. The first meeting will be at 8:00 P.M., August 2. Get a group together in the community and attend this meeting for one or more days.

BEWARE—At this time of year there are always agents of all kinds attempting to sell the farmers something. Be careful to purchase from only reliable companies, and check prices before buying. Farmers have called to my attention the fact that fruit tree agents are very active in the county and that they are selling trees of unknown varieties at very high prices. It is reported that some of these agents claim their trees will need no spray. That the insects and diseases will not attack their particular varieties. I know of no variety of peaches or apples that are free from the damages of insects and diseases.

POULTRY—All pullets should be vaccinated for chicken pox and tested for worms just before they start laying.

ing. Use vaccine for chicken pox and iodine vermicide for worms. Houses should be cleaned and disinfected before the pullets are placed in laying houses. If an application of a mixture of one part kerosene and one part used motor crank case oil is applied to inside of houses, dropping boards, roost poles and up four feet on walls it will control mites.

If lice are found on hens or pullets use Sodium Fluoride dust or paint the roost poles with Tobacco Sulphate about an hour before the chickens go to roost.

Those interested in vaccinating and worming pullets should contact our office and arrange for demonstrations.

GARDENS—Those who have not prepared and planted a summer and fall garden should do it as soon as possible. Low moist land is best for fall gardens, but we have seen good fall gardens on upland.

TRIP TO MUSCLE SHOALS—We are planning a trip to Muscle Shoals on August 23 for farmers and 4-H Club boys who are interested. We planned this trip last summer but failed to make it due to an epidemic of Infantile Paralysis. Those interested in making this trip should contact the County Agent's office for full information at an early date. Due to housing facilities this trip is for men and boys only.

It is our purpose to serve the farmers. Any time we can help you, feel free to call on us.

On Tuesday, July 20th, a large crowd gathered at Pilgrim Rest church near Pletcher, for the Keen and White Reunion. It was a real success from all points of view, because the weather was favorable and everyone seemed to be in high spirit and feeling fine, although some of them had to come a long way to be there. At the noon hour a beautiful dinner was spread on the church grounds under the trees. Everyone had plenty to eat and sure did enjoy it.

LINE FROM MITCHELL DAM WILL BE 187 MILES LONG TO MOBILE

The above map shows the route of the new $1,700,000 high voltage line of the Alabama Power Company to be erected from Mitchell Dam in Chilton County, through Southwest Alabama to Mobile.

LIVESTOCK REMINDERS

Cows should be bred to produce lambs in August for early spring lambs. Early lambs can be gotten to market before the northern lamb moves and will usually sell at a higher price.

Spring pigs should be pushed for the early fall market. Green soybeans should be used, if available, to reduce the amount of grain for each 100 pounds of pork produced.

Where pastures are becoming short or drying up it will pay to increase grain feeding for dairy cows. A grain mixture of 2 parts of corn and cob meal, 1 part of ground oats, and 1 part of cottonseed meal will be satisfactory to use at this time.

the church and grounds and for bringing their lunch and spending the day with us.

About 3:30 the people began to leave saying they were glad they came and felt like the day had been well spent. It brought together many brothers and sisters, cousins and friends who hadn't seen each other in over thirty years.

High Voltage Line To Cost Alabama Power Company Over Million Dollars

Thomas W. Martin, President of Alabama Power Company, today authorized the following statement:

"Construction of an additional high-voltage electric transmission line 187 miles long from Mitchell Dam to Mobile, to cost with all equipment over a million, seven hundred thousand dollars, will start as soon as a certificate of convenience and necessity is issued by the Alabama Public Service Commission. The certificate was applied for July 21.

"The new line which will interconnect with the Company's six hydro electric plants on the Coosa and Tallapoosa Rivers, and with its Gorgas steam plant, will connect with the Alabama Power Company's line to Mobile.

"The new line will serve the area between the Company's line to Mobile and the Alabama Power Company's line to Mobile.

"The new line will serve the area between the Company's line to Mobile and the Alabama Power Company's line to Mobile.

"While the new line will operate initially at 110,000 volts, it will be so erected that later it can be changed over to 154,000 volts with a capacity of 60,000 kilowatts at this voltage, which will more than double the present available power in southwest Alabama. The accompanying map indicates the approximate route of the new line, which will be completed about July 1, 1938. The map also shows the present network of Alabama Power Company high voltage lines.

"More than a million dollars will be spent in the construction of the line, and an additional $700,000 for terminal facilities. The Company will follow its policy of using Alabama labor and purchasing from Alabama concerns all materials which can be supplied from local sources, such as poles, timber, steel, cement, etc. These items for the new line will amount to about $500,000 and the payroll will be about $400,000 additional."

In announcing the construction of this new line President Martin said that it was a continuation of the fixed policy of the Company to be ready to meet any call for power that the industrial development of the State might demand and that the Company would have a substantial surplus of power. He also called attention to the fact that the entire program of the Company to develop its resources in Alabama and to provide adequate and low-cost power to the State is being carried out. The Company hopes to continue its efforts to locate new power plants in Alabama, and will, to the extent possible, finance the necessary construction of lines to serve them.

"On account of the threatened competition of the Government through its project, TVA, the Company has for several years been unable to raise the capital it has therefore financed its extensions out of available cash resources, but the larger program is ahead will before long make new financing necessary through the sale of securities. Unless this unfair competitive condition is soon changed the Company will be unable to finance the extension of its system to supply power requirements which will be demanded by new industries in many parts of the State.

"Because of its political nature, the TVA cannot readily solicit industries from other states to locate in Alabama. Therefore, it seems that for the good of Alabama, nothing should be done which will hamper Alabama Power Company in its efforts toward the further upbuilding of the State.

"There are prospects," Mr. Martin said, "of tremendous industrial developments in Southwest Alabama as well as many other parts of the State, and we will do everything in our power to provide them with ample power facilities; but these are problems of which the public should take note—if Alabama is to get her share of the industrial migration now in progress."

ICE CREAM SUPPER AT MT. PISGAH CHURCH SAT.

There will be an ice cream supper at Mt. Pisgah Church, Saturday night, July 31. Also there will be a pretty girl's cake. The proceeds will go to help pay for the new church house. Everybody come and bring someone with you.

Mrs. M. Connatser entertained a luncheon, July twenty-first, at her home, Thorsby, for Miss Clara Vines of Thorsby, whose marriage to Mr. Z. L. Massey of Wetumpka, N. C., will take place some time in August.

The honoree's chair was beautifully draped in white under an arch of English ivy intermingled with dainty white flowers. She was beautiful in a gown of yellow mousseline de soie embroidered in tiny brown dots. Her flowers were yellow snaps, and maiden hair fern.

Guests were served from a beautifully appointed table centered by a large cut glass punch bowl over which Misses Mary Louise Rhinehardt and Willie Connatser presided. The house was beautifully decorated throughout with cut flowers, the living room being decorated in green and white.

That's What I Think

Saul M. Goldstein

In last week's issue, in this very same column, I issued an appeal to the public-spirited citizens of Chilton County to come forth and declare to what extent, morally and financially, they would and could support the establishment of a public swimming pool and recreation center.
The response was overwhelming. It was indeed gratifying to learn that so many members of this community knew and felt the need of such a project and were willing to lend their hands, minds and pocketbooks to the task of fulfilling a great undertaking.
At the risk of some censure for the public display of private names, I am quoting herewith some of the responses:
"Ed. Bixby-Yesserman, prominent agriculturist of the county, was the first to respond. 'There is no project I would more willingly support. I have always favored good, clean and wholesome outdoor sports for young and old, and there is nothing like getting back to nature. Here is my check for five hundred dollars, and I intend to get my associates to do likewise. More power to Chilton County Recreation Center.'"
"N.R. Vated, retired business man: 'Haven't time to drop in and see you so am enclosing check in this note. If you need more, call on me. It is certainly high time hat someone woke up to the fact that Chilton County people, like all other human beings, need recreation.'"
"Dr. I.J. Haakanson, general practitioner: 'Nothing better could have been suggested to promote the general public health and welfare. Count me in for my share.'"
"W.E. Cheatham & Company, general store: 'We were greatly surprised to learn in your column that scores of people are going to other towns to swim, and spend money elsewhere that should be spent in Chilton County. It's bad enough that the liquor stores in Birmingham and Montgomery take our customers away, without the swimming pools coming in for a share. We will support with a reasonable share any project of this type that will keep Chilton County money in Chilton County.'"
"Ed U. Cate, high school teacher: 'We teachers are behind you solidly in this movement for a public recreation center. 'A sound mind in a sound body' may be an old law, but it is still good, and there is nothing better than a publicly supervised recreation center to develop good healthy bodies and clear-thinking minds.'"
"Honestly, folks, I wish I hadn't had to make up all the foregoing paragraphs, with fictitious characters saying things that real, live Chilton County folks ought to be saying. I wish there had been some sort of response to our appeal, in order that we might push forward our project with the knowledge that the people are behind us one hundred per cent."
"No one has responded. No one has even opposed the idea. Chilton County people are still going to Birmingham, Montgomery and Prattville for swimming and other recreation, and Chilton County evidently doesn't care whether its children have the advantages to which they are entitled or not."
"For the sake of those children, and their children yet to come, I wish there had been a great, overwhelming response. There wasn't, but it isn't over yet. There are still enough public-spirited citizens in this county to put the thing over, and there is still opportunity to go ahead and do it."
"At least, that's what I think."

INDEPENDENCE BEATEN BY ALABAMA MILLS BY SCORE 9-1
This game proved to be a hard-fought victory for Alabama Mills, with Ellison hurling a one-hit game. Tom Reynolds got five hits for five times up. Running a close race was Jim Burnette, who got two for two.
The most thrilling game was played Sunday on the Alabama Mills park. Burnette lead the hitting against Walsborough four for four. McGuire proved to be another valuable man for Alabama Mills when he hurled for a ten-nine victory.
Walsborough was winning by 8-2 last of the fourth but their merry-go-round broke down when Burnette steps out for a hit and was followed by eight others which gave Alabama Mills the lead of 9-9; there the fun of fun began. Alabama Mills has proven to be the promising team of the county. They now have the game victory of eight out of nine.
This team is backed by Mr. Roberts, superintendent of Alabama Mills. They reorganized some time back and since they step out and mean business.

Pyroil Treats Cars Like a Song," says Frank Brisko, Veteran Indianapolis Race Driver
Frank Brisko, "headiest" of auto racers. He has competed in the Indianapolis 500-Mile Race eight different times—1927 to 1936.
As a daring cool-headed auto racer, as a builder of engines and as a practical engineer, Frank Brisko ranks among the highest in the field today.
"Here is a picture of myself and my new Pontiac which I have driven 24,862 miles. This car has been treated with Pyroil in gas, oil and grease since the beginning just as I treat my racing cars. I have given it plenty of punishment yet it runs like a race and I know that the protection and efficiency afforded by Improved Pyroil has been a factor in keeping it in excellent condition."
"Have you ever seen a corroded bearing—holes sales into it? Or a shuddering crankcase chugging old lines with burned-out bearings as a result? A run-down tag creating loss of compression? Pyroil protects your car against these and many other dangers.
Using Pyroil, you can measure the difference: a remarkable improvement in operation; more power; less heating; less repair and replacement expense. Try Improved Pyroil But use it regularly. Manufactured and Guaranteed by Pyroil Company, W. V. Kiddet, Founder, LeCrosse, Wisconsin, U.S.A.

LOCAL SERVICE STATION POINTS OUT BENEFITS OF NEW PYROIL

Well Known Product For Auto Motors Highly Recommended

The Billingsley Service Station, of Clanton, recently appointed distributors in this section for the well known and popular "Pyroil" is placing emphasis on the benefits to be had from using this product in automobile motors and other motors having movable metal parts. "Pyroil" acts as a heat-resisting lubricant.

In commenting on this widely used product, the Billingsley Service Station explained it as follows:

"Pyroil embodies the unusual ability to inhibit corrosion—chemical attack—on bearings, shafts, gears and other metal parts. It thereby safeguards against destructive wear and elongates the life of these parts. It reduces friction and temperatures, thus increasing available power output.

"Pyroil contains oiliness compounds which improve the oiliness of the lubricants to which it is added. It is phosphoric acid.

tirely free from halogens, sulphur, phosphoric acid esters, metallic soaps and other materials of non-hydrocarbon origin. Pyroil is guaranteed to meet the specifications required by manufacturers of bearings, machinery, engines, automobiles and aircraft.

"Pyroil has the property of powerful ly orienting on bearing and other metal surfaces and thus protecting these surfaces against shock, friction and pressure conditions, in order to guard against the initiation of wear under these severe circumstances.

"Only a small quantity of Pyroil is needed to accomplish the decidedly beneficial and effective results which its character exhibits. One ounce of Pyroil "B" is added to each pint of oil used."

NAPOLEON J. JONES WRITES

In Acts 2:4-7 we notice it says: And the Lord added to the Church daily such as should be saved.

It was about four hundred years from the last prophet until Christ came into the world. He came to save his people from their sins (Matt. 1:21). The people had been living in a dark age, growing worse and worse, deceiving and being deceived, worshipping idols of all kinds, thinking these idol gods made with hands would save them. God had warned the people through the prophets again and again. But they did not heed them, but God still loved them and would spare them. God was not pleased with the offerings that would never take away sins, (Hebrew 10:8). So He sent His only begotten son into the world that whoever believeth in Him should not perish but have everlasting life.

Believe that He is a rewarder of them that seek Him; that he will save them to the utmost who come to God by Him. But are the shepherds of today telling the people to believe on Him and be saved?

I say they are not. They are telling the people to come join the church. They claim they open the church doors, but our Bible plainly says that Christ is the door of His church. No man can open it or shut it. His church is not made with hands, but He Himself built it without the sound of a hammer and God adds to this church all such as should be saved. In this church are no unbelievers, no murderers, no drunkards, no adulterers, no sinners, but all are truly saved.

God's word says that we should not be unequally yoked together with all these. (2 Cor., 6:13-18). The churches that you have been in bondage in that come the habitation of devils and the hold of every foul spirit and a cage of every unclean and hateful bird. (Rev. 18:2).

But God is calling His people out of them into His marvelous way (Rev. 18:4). I say to every child of God, that you have been in bondage in that city which spiritually is called Sodom and Egypt, where also our Lord was crucified, long enough. (Rev. 11:8).

It is time you are expecting the call of God, and come out singing the song of Moses which was a song of deliverance. (Rev. 15:3). And to all the unsaved repent, confess your sins, and believe Jesus Christ and you will be saved, for the end of time is near, and you will then be in His Church. (Acts 2:38, also Acts 16:31.)

Yours truly,

NAPOLEON J. JONES.

HONOLULU IS BEAUTIFUL SPOT, MISS SHEPHERD FINDS WHILE ON TOUR

Wonderful Description Of Island Found In Letter Exclusively To The News

PART TWO BY MISS RUTH SHEPHERD

Two of the other most interesting things in Honolulu are the old Hawaiian palace and Robert Louis Stevenson's tree. The former is an enormous gray stone building that was built at great expense by one of the Hawaiian Kings. It is an old place with graceful stone arches across the roof and dungeons in the cellar. It is now by the American government now. The tree should be famous for its beauty alone even if it had no connection with a famous person. It is great and spreading and low. It was in this tree's shade that Robert Louis Stevenson died a great deal of his writing.

The plantations, of course, are about the most important things on the island. There are five large ones on Oahu, each with its little settlement named after the plantation. They even have their own time; some of them run on daylight-saving time (Honolulu does not) while others may be only thirty or forty-five minutes ahead of the time in town.

Sugar is most important and pineapples come second. While I was in Honolulu people on the islands were greatly disturbed because of a strike among the Filipino sugar workers on one of the other islands.

One thing that no Malihini (new-comer) in the islands should miss is a native luau (loo-ow—meaning feast). You'll have a stronger constitution than I have if you are able to eat the food, but the experience is worth having. We went to a Samoan instead of an Hawaiian luau, but I understand that they are almost alike except for the songs and dances.

We saw some of the few grass shacks we saw on the whole island in this tiny Samoan village. We went in and sat down to a table on the ground for the feast. There are no implements to eat with, of course; everything is taken with the fingers. The main dish is roast pork (and incidentally, the men cook it instead of the women). The rest of the food consists mostly of crab meat, octopus, sweet potatoes, and an odd sort of greens wrapped up in a large flat ti leaf. I purposely left poi to mention separately because it is in a class all its own. It resembles nothing so much as a bowl of rather liquid paste. The taste is even worse. I took three large fingers full just to be sure and then gave up, in spite of the fact that it is the favorite dish of the natives.

After the first round of eating was over, there were native songs and dances. The songs had very little melody to them; they were mostly chants. The favorite Samoan dance is the knife dance. The participants dance around with large, evil-looking knives, twirling them and throwing them up in the air much as a hand major does. I was told that the knives were really very sharp, so the dancers have to be good.

I can't resist mentioning one of the funniest incidents that I have ever seen. Here we were in a Samoan village getting "atmosphere." Suddenly we looked around and one of the natives was taking snapshots of the tourists.

We were very fortunate in being in Honolulu for Kamehameha Day, the big Hawaiian celebration of the year. On this one day, June 10th, the Americans step back and the Hawaiians rule the town. It preceded the night before by the Holohe Ball at the Royal. All the prominent Hawaiians are there, many in native dress. In fact, that is where the Ball gets its name. The holohe is one of the native dresses, a long robe-like affair that falls straight from the neck to the floor. Even when the Navy was in Honolulu, the Royal was not as packed as it was on this one night.

Early the next morning is the long and elaborate parade, led by descendants of the last Kamehameha. To me, the most interesting thing in the people were. Some of them were long and some were short, but all of them were made of thousands of tiny, tiny, whole parade were the capes, these bird feathers. Of course, they took years to make and are priceless.

In the afternoon, there were boat racers put on by Duke Kahanamaka, the world famous Hawaiian swimmer. After that, to a reception at the governor's mansion. Here, too, the Hawaiians held sway with dances and songs and many old chants. People of all ages took part, from a little girl of about ten who did a hula to a very old woman who led the chants.

Our last few days in Honolulu sped by like lightning. Although we had more and bigger "worlds to conquer" we really shared the thought of leaving Honolulu, the "Paradise of the Pacific." And that last little phrase is no exaggeration. If anything, it is an understatement. Without having seen a great part of the rest of the world, I would still venture to say that there isn't a lovelier spot on earth.

We were really sad as the band on the docks began playing Aloha-oe and we sailed away. The old Hawaiian custom is that if you throw your leis overboard just as the ship gets even with Diamond Head, the waves will wash the flowers back to shore and insure you a safe return to Honolulu. So Mandy and I took no chances: we threw every single lei out into the water.

about it? This is your County! These are your roads! And if I see aright, all the money in the County is your money! It was your vote that placed these men in the Commissioner's Court! Are we in Russia where the people have no voice in the affairs of their government? Are these men to give their service and spend almost half their earned wages in upkeep of their personally owned cars which are used in carrying on their work for the County, to be denied their wages when they are due?

There are some people who say "there is no need of the district foremen or supervisors"; that "none of such supervisors were needed before the Road Supervisor took charge." Just look back a little. How many supervisors or as they were called then, "overseers," were on the job when the Road Supervisor took charge? There were just the small number of thirty-two (32) "overseers," all of whom were under the personal direction of just four (4) Commissioners. Think of that. Now look at the present number in the road organization, that awful number of eleven men including the district foremen or supervisors. Now, what? Why so much favor and acceptance of the thirty-six (36) foremen, "overseers" and supervisors under the old set-up and the right-about-face and fight against the smaller number of men employed under the Road Supervisor—in fact, a number just one-third as great as was formerly employed by the Commissioners? Do you know why? Think that over. It is not your own reasoning that causes so much hullabaloo! It is the false rumors and erroneous statements of those persons who are attempting to continue the old deception by trying to spoil a progressive movement. It is fear that is driving such efforts! Fear that something good might come from a progressive move.

The Supervisor, working under the greatest handicap any man ever had to operate under, has carried on; he has shown that he can get the same result with half as many machines half as much money, less than half as many "overseers" as were formerly used! He has shown you that a man can still be honest and stick to principle regardless of all the difficulties that have been thrust upon him and his organization. Three separate attempts have been made to seek an indictment and impeachment of him and thereby force his removal from office. Yet, he sticks to the job and carries on. He employs counsel at his own personal expense to assist in the defense of his office, while those who are fighting him and his every effort to proceed with his work for which the County is paying him, are using County fund and County paid attorneys in their efforts to defeat him and the principles for which he stands.

Now it has come to this point: The supervisory employees must draw their pay for services rendered the County during the months of May, June and July, and some definite assurance must be had that no further withholding of such wages will again be attempted by the Commissioner's Court or the service of these men cannot be expected further under doubtful circumstances. If it comes to the latter issue, then the Supervisor will be forced to suspend all operations on the roads over which he cannot personally supervise and direct. And this means that the Supervisor can only operate one road unit at the time, and that would mean he would devote activities to one Commission District each week, and thereby give only one week's work to each district each month. That would be a very poor situation at this time of the year. But it is very evident that the Supervisor cannot be in four places at any one time. Therefore, I am putting it up to you. The Commissioners say they will not pay these men until the courts say they will have to do so. When we go into court that means a tie-up of these men's wages for several months to come. And if this happens the people will have to bear both the cost of the court fight carried on by their Commissioners and also suffer from the neglect of their roads due to lack of or inadequate supervision and direction of work in the field. The Road Supervisor is not a super-human—he is just an ordinary person who can do only so much. And all know that he cannot supervise and direct road activities in remote parts of the County with all equipment and employees going under normal conditions.

tions. Judge Smith stated this money was spent for equipment, material and labor, and does not include any monies expended on the three-way project of the Selma Highway.

Expenditures Explained

When asked for an explanation of how this money was spent and for what purposes, Mr. Arledge gave figures as follows:

"Funds appropriated to the road department for the months of January, February, March, April, May and June, 1937, amounted to $28,000.00, with an additional amount of $1,235 extra for the purchase of bridge steel. This makes a total of $29,235.00, actually appropriated to the road department during the above period.

"The above total appropriation of funds was used as follows: Labor and supervision, $9,516.71; machine and equipment operators paid $7,684.62; and $12,158.29 was spent for materials, supplies and repairs," Mr. Arledge stated. This makes a total of $29,359.62 and includes the salary of the supervisor, and transportation expense, which is not chargeable to the appropriation from the Court.

"Funds expended by the Commissioners Court for new equipment, which included 2 new tractors, 2 new graders and four trucks, amounted to $16,172.00, which, if added to the appropriation made by the Court, would make it appear that a total of $45,497.20 had been spent by the road department during the first six months of this year. But, it will be remembered, as shown above that several thousands of dollars of this total went to pay for needed machinery, etc."

Last Saturday, two representatives of The Pyroil Company put on a most interesting demonstration of this product at the Billingsley Service Station, showing the many advantages and benefits derived by treating a motor with Pyroil. Mr. Billingsley urges automobile owners to come by the station and find out about this lubricant. It is especially recommended as a heat-resistant in summer weather.

Mrs. Jimmie Head and daughter, Margaret Ann, returned to her home at Palmer Station Monday following a visit here with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Paul Smith. Paul Smith, Jr., and Miss Peggy Smith returned with Mrs. Head for a short visit.

Section 3. This article shall be inoperative unless it shall have been ratified as an amendment to the Constitution by conventions in the several States, as provided in the Constitution, within seven years from the date of the submission hereof to the States by the Congress.

Amendments.—In the Constitution as originally adopted, slight provision was made for the amendment to the individual of a number of liberties not to be encroached upon by the Federal Government. To remedy this defect, the first Congress after the adoption of the Constitution passed and submitted to the States for ratification a series of ten Amendments, which were duly ratified and declared in force on Dec. 15, 1791.

The Eleventh Amendment was passed in 1793, and declared in force Jan. 8, 1798.

The Twelfth Amendment was added in 1803, and from then until the time of the Civil War no others were adopted.

The Thirteenth, Fourteenth and Fifteenth Amendments were embodied in 1865, 1868 and 1870, respectively, as part of the Government's Reconstruction policy, securing to the liberated slaves the benefits of citizenship.

The Sixteenth (Income Tax) and Seventeenth (Election of Senators) Amendments were adopted on Feb. 25 and May 31, 1913, respectively.

The Eighteenth (Prohibition) Amendment came into force on Jan. 16, 1920.

The Nineteenth (Woman Suffrage) Amendment was adopted on Aug. 28, 1920.

The Twentieth ("Lame Duck") Amendment: Ratification formally announced Feb. 6, 1933.

The Twenty-first (Prohibition Repeal) Amendment was adopted Dec. 5, 1933.

A proposed Child Labor Amendment, passed by both Houses of Congress in 1924, had (by July, 1933) been rejected by 24 States and ratified by 15.

History.—The first official draft of a plan for the formation of the Federal Government was submitted to the States for ratification in 1777, under the title "Articles of Confederation." The ratification of every State was required to put the government into effect, and in 1781 this had been secured. The government thus established consisted of a legislative department only. Practically the sole powers of the government were the carrying on of foreign relations and the determination of peace and war. The government proved to have insufficient power even to enforce upon the States treaty obligations with foreign governments.

The Constitution, as finally drafted, represented three great compromises: (1) between a national party and a State sovereignty party, by providing for a much stronger Congress than the one under the Articles of Confederation which the Constitution replaced, and for a Federal executive and judiciary which had not existed before—but reserving to the States or to the people "powers not delegated to the United States"; (2) between a large State party, which wished legislative representation based on population, and a small State party, which repeatedly threatened to break it up, and which wished all States to have equal representation—by a bicameral legislature, with a lower house in which representation was based on population, and an upper house representing the States as States; and (3) between the slave States and the free, that for direct taxation and for representation, only three-fifths of the negroes should be counted, but that fugitive slaves should be returned by one state to another, and that the importation of slaves should not be prohibited before 1808.

ARTICLE XXII.

Section 1. No person shall be elected to the office of the President of the United States who has been previously elected to that office.

Section 2. No person shall be elected to the office of the President who, when elected, is under the age of thirty-five years.

Section 3. No person shall be elected to the office of the President who has been previously elected to that office.

IN MEMORY OF BETTY SUE PETERS

God called our Betty Sue from us July 22, only eleven months and one day old. She was sick three weeks, but all was done that loving hands could do, but God had a mansion for her and took her away. She has gone to live with Jesus in that heavenly home above, where there are no tears of sorrow, no trouble over there.

God said in his precious word to suffer little children to come unto Me, for of such is the Kingdom of Heaven.

We thank all for their kindness and words of comfort. They will always live in our memory. I thank God for men and women, for boys and girls who will lend a helping hand in time of need or trouble. May God's richest blessings abide with each and every one—Lawrence Peters and wife, Sophie Peters.

COWS NEED FRESH AIR, WATER AND SUNSHINE

Auburn, Ala.—One of the best ways to cause cows to give more milk is to give them plenty of fresh water to drink, fresh air to breathe, and sufficient sunlight to shade to enjoy.

"Milk is about 87 per cent water and large amounts are needed for feeds and liquid form for heavy production of milk," says F.W. livestock specialist of the Alabama Extension Service, in pointing out a cow will not drink all the water needs unless she can get it frequently.

It cost the State $252,487.71 for the prisoners confined in the jails during the past fiscal year.

We'll Have Neither

"Communists" was the term hurled at CIO leaders and strikers in many of the recent labor disturbances. "Fascists" was the counter charge thrown back by the strikers at the various "Law and Order" and "Vigilante" units which sprang into existence.

But now that the smoke of battle has begun to subside, it appears that America was in no serious danger of either a Communist or Fascist uprising. The appearance of strike disorders is nothing new, though it is probable that few with equal vigor and with such widespread disorder have appeared in the past. The rise of vigilante organizations dates back to the earliest days of our national history, and periods of unrest have been times when they flourished with greatest vigor.

But factories are again in production. Workers are getting their regular pay checks, and are spending their money on motor cars, at amusement places, and in maintaining homes where the standard of living is far above that of workers anywhere else in the world. There is no great well organized group that desires either communism or fascism in this country of ours, and the disturbance of the past year will soon fade into history with other like events of the days that are quickly and happily forgotten.

For it may be said that Americans are a fickle people. They adopt new panaceas and fads quickly, but they abandon them as soon as they appear impracticable. We are also a people of great diversity of views and interests. Therein may lie our weakness but also our strength. It is difficult for a demagogue to capture the fancies and whims of all of the people of this great nation at any one time. It is difficult for him to hold the allegiance of any single group for any prolonged period, particularly after he makes a few mistakes.

Our great diversity of beliefs, prejudices and traditions also makes the path irregular for the man who plans to ride to power upon the support of an army of hysterical followers. Among the factory workers of Detroit, the share croppers of the South, the dairy, corn and hog raisers of the Mid-west, the fruit producers of the Far West, and the clothing workers of the East there are few ideas in common. This lack of unity makes America a nation which cannot be easily controlled or directed.

All this plus the fact that almost every American believes that every other citizen has a right to express his honest views, regardless of how greatly he may err, makes ours the difficult land for any dictator to master.

Communism and Fascism, which are not so different from each other as the followers of each doctrine seem to believe, rise to supremacy upon the backing of a hysteric, oppressed, and discontented people, where the same set of ideas, traditions, and standards prevail, and where everyone has suffered from dire poverty and distress. Such a nation may go either Fascist or Communist depending upon the character of its leadership at a time of crisis.

But our country, well it simply doesn't fit into the European pattern. We may encounter serious trouble and disorder, but we are in no great danger of going the way of the many unfortunate nations abroad.

Of all the tough jobs we know about the task of balancing a farmer's books after a bad season beats them all.

It seems that many of these radicals who have returned from Russia like everything about the country except living there.

Of all the tough jobs we know about the task of balancing a farmer's books after a bad season beats them all.

The Man Who Changed The World

Any man in the world, high in public life today with an ambition to create a fame that will extend far into the future, must have known his moment of humility, or possibly envy, when Guglielmo Marconi was laid to his long rest at the comparatively early age of 63.

For these Dictators, and Prime Ministers, and Presidents must have realized that this quiet, retiring scientist and inventor has wrought greater changes in the world than they can ever hope to accomplish. He opened a new world of sound and communication, and it is difficult now to imagine how our present order could function well without the benefits of his invention, the radio.

Many of us think of radio only in terms of entertainment. That alone is something very important, of course. To sit in your home in the evening and hear the voices of great artists coming to you across mountain chains, over bounding oceans, and through the simmering heat of vast deserts is something to make us marvel. It is also something which brings us benefits in a cultural way.

But consider also what radio means in the daily work of the world. An air navigator in some region remote from civilization maintains contact with the world through his radio. Transcontinental and transoceanic air clippers travel only by benefit of radio direction finders, flying beams, and radio communication with stations along the way. Steamships on this high seas strike their courses, receive storm warnings, and maintain contact with the shore by means of the radio.

Before the days of commercial radio, just 37 years ago to be exact, a ship left port and was heard from no more until it was sighted at the harbor of destination. If it foundered in a storm or encountered some treacherous reef, the world never knew just what had happened.

We might could continue indefinitely on this intersting subject. But need merely call to mind a few of the things which modern radio communication means to realize that the invention of the Italian scientist did more to change the world than the edicts of any ruler or the plans and experiments of any great social theorist.

It seems fitting and proper, therefore, that the world pay honor to Marconi and men like him. They are the great figures of our time, and their names will be known when people must look back into musty old records to learn about the personalities whose names are now constantly in the headlines.

The Peddler As A Nuisance

Our attention was recently called to a news item in a newspaper dealing with difficulties encountered in enforcing an ordinance to control and restrict house-to-house peddling. The company which the peddler represented exhibited a determination to fight the enforcement of the local ordinance.

What the outcome of the action was we have not learned. We do hope, however, that the time is not far off when the nuisance created by the house-to-house peddler can be abated. When the ordinance which will effectively deal with the evil is found, we also hope that it may become the pattern for similar legislation here in our own community.

For house-to-house peddling is an evil, from the standpoint of local business and of the community as a whole. A substantial share of the taxes which maintain our community and its many services and institutions comes from the tills of local merchants. The peddler assumes none of this obligation toward the community. A substantial cost of doing business in Clanton grows out of the necessity of maintaining constant service and providing a guarantee back of every article sold. Here again the peddler assumes no part of the burden of maintaining the continuity of business in the community.

Why then should he be permitted to continue his business without paying in some small measure compensate for the fact that he pays no taxes?

These are just a few of the arguments on which we base our position that some legislation should be adopted here to control the evil and nuisance. It must be agreed that the peddler is both a parasite and a nuisance. A parasite because he pays no part of the cost of maintaining the community. A nuisance because he forces attention to his wares at inconvenient times and at inopportune occasions.

MORALECHOS

D. W. Haskew

While on a trip of sight-seeing through a shirt factory, we stopped at a counter where shirts were being packed. Each shirt had to undergo close inspection. On seeing a shirt marked a "Second" I picked it up and looked it over. I failed to find a defect in its cloth or make up, and I called attention to its appearance as a first grade shirt. The man inspecting the shirts took it into his hand and ran over it with his trained eye and found a small hole in the cloth. Pointing to that small defect he said, "That is what makes the shirt a second." Just because of that one hole in the cloth that was not as large as a pea, the shirt was reduced a third. I thought to myself that is true in the making of character. A young man, a young woman may be fine in all respects, except in one and that one defect in character, greatly reduces them in value. You may be honest, punctual, energetic, loyal and yet you have a defect in drinking whiskey. That one bad habit takes you off the counter where the first class people go. A bad habit makes you a "Second" on the markets of the world.

One day Marshall Ney was seen to be looking down at his knees. They shaking so badly that they were striking together. All around him were men ready to follow him in a charge against the enemy. Shells burst and balls sung all around them. In all of this preparation and noise the Marshall was heard to address his knees in this way. "You may well shake; you would shake more if you knew where I was about to take you." That is what I call self-mastery. It takes pure grit for a man to say to his trembling knees, "You may shake, but I'm going to take you where you fear to go." The man who lets his trembling knees take him away from the duty that is calling, is the sad owner of knees that are bigger than he is. A big man, one who is worth while, will ride his trembling knees right up to the thing feared.

Walpole tells us of a gambler who fell from his chair of apoplexy and rolled into a knot under the table. Immediately the gamblers with him at the table posted stakes on his life and on his death. One man had a touch of the humane left and so he ran to the phone and called a doctor. When the physician arrived the gamblers stood him in the corner and held a pistol against his heart, saying that his attention to the patient would effect the outcome of their bets. When President Garfield was hanging between life and death, men bet heavily upon the outcome of the shots fired. The records show that they even went so far as to pool their bets on the issue of life and death. Gambling and whiskey are twin brothers and they know nothing but to lead men and women down to the very lowest.

Drop a stone down over a precipice. In the law of gravitation, will cause that stone to fall sixteen feet the first second, the second second it will fall forty eight feet. The third second it drops eighty feet; the fifth second it drops one hundred and forty feet. By the time the stone has fallen ten seconds it will be going down at the rate of three hundred and four feet per second. The longer it falls the faster it travels toward the bottom. Habit is like the falling stone, they are cumulative the longer they are with us. After each act of our lives we are not the same person we were before. We are better or we are worse, but not the same. Everything we do adds something to our worth, or it deducts something from the value of our character. The folly of the child becomes the vice of youth and the crime of middle life. What is it that makes a man twice, thrice a jail bird. It is the momentum of the past violation of law. The longer a bad habit is followed the faster it drops us toward the bottom of life.

It is sad of Carlyle that he believed in God until Cromwell died. Carlyle's faith seems to be the faith of today. Everywhere we look we can see folks who believe in God until something comes before them that they can not understand, or something comes up that is more attractive to them than this faith in God. There are those who believe in God and have respect for His Holy day, until the Bay front is warm and attractive. One modern policy is to go to church when there is no other place to go. If going to church is the best we can do under the circumstances, then go to church, but if the turf is green, or the surf is fine, then leave the church go hang. We have substituted the holiday for the Holy Day, recreation for reverence, games for godliness, Dissipation for devotion and highway murder for meditation in God's house. Shall we conclude that our Sabbath is not worth saving. We had better salvage all that remains of our Christian Sabbath and reincarnate our people with that age old law, "Remember the Sabbath day to keep it holy." Of many it can be said "They believe in God until the auto horn toots on Sunday."

"You know it took me ten years to discover that I had absolutely no talent for literature," explained the amiable visitor. "Oh, then you gave it up?" asked the sympathetic young thing. "No, it was impossible then. By that time my books had become too popular."

National Wood Chopping Champion Will Chop At Shoults Grocery September 9th

McLaren, who claims the wood chopping championship of America, will stage a log cutting contest demonstration at Crof Shoults Grocery on Thursday, September 9th, A.M.

This contest has been arranged by Shoults Grocery, Route 1, which will be congratulated for arranging the visit of this colorful champion, McLaren, whose wizardry with an axe carried him from a poor farm lad in Australia, to the peak of his professional chopping tours covering a score of years he has chopped before hundreds of thousands, both here and abroad. McLaren, who is nearly 50 years old, claims that outdoor chopping is a great physical developer. His condition bears out this claim.

The contest is open to any local man who has not previously competed at McLaren. A prize of fifty dollars will be paid to any contestant if he fails to chop through a log two-thirds of the time the contest takes.

The handicap gives all good choppers a sporting chance to win the money, as it is just like giving a hand in a hundred yard dash. The only restriction made is that a contestant be permitted to use a double axe. This is the only axe which McLaren himself ever uses, and he refuses to chop against a Plumb Axe and also allow the handicap.

Everyone is cordially invited to attend the demonstration. Choppers wishing to compete should bring their axes with them. It costs nothing to enter the contest.

● We're an old Southern family, the L & N. And it's just natural that we have real pride in our home. Guess that's why folks feel so at ease and comfortable traveling with us.

Somewhat everything seems familiar—the comfortable seats, so much like your own favorite chairs back home—the breakfast of Old Southern ham, hot biscuit, fresh golden-center eggs, steaming coffee—the dinners, tender juicy steaks, Southern fried chicken, real combread, Pompano or other seafoods fresh from the Gulf Coast—all become memories of haunting goodness.

And then, when that pleasant, sunny tiredness comes—crisp, clean sheets, soft plump pillows—and deep, dreamless, restful sleep.

These and more you'll find in your "Home Sweet Home on Rails"—a home completely air-conditioned (except locals)—a home as safe as your own—a home that costs only 1 1/2 to 3c a mile to enjoy. May we have the pleasure of your company soon—the whole family? Any ticket agent will assist you.

Clanton - R. F. D. No. 4 - Alabama

That's What I Think

Saul M. Goldstein

There's been a lot of excitement up Birmingham way recently over an article in the August issue of Harper's, which referred to Birmingham as a land of perpetual promise—but a promise that was never fulfilled. I haven't read Mr. Leighton's article, nor do I think it proper in this space to discuss it pro or con or both. The article serves my purpose in that it recalls to Alabama people right now the almost-miraculous growth of the cross-roads of 1871 to a city of 382,000 in 1937 (the figures are taken from a Chamber of Commerce advertisement).

That growth has been and is founded on underground wealth. You cannot strike a pick into Birmingham soil and turn up nuggets of gold; but you can dig deep into its mountainsides and find huge deposits of red iron ore. You cannot blast those hillsides and discover enormous diamonds; but you can dig deep and bring out into the open Nature's store of black diamonds—coal. Not wealth at a glance, it is true; but deprive this world today of all its gold and diamonds and we can go on living in a highly advanced civilization. Try depriving it of coal and iron, and see how many thousands of years you turn back the clock of civilization.

Sometimes we here in Chilton County pause to look at Birmingham and think: how grand it would be to rise with your community in an unparalleled rapidity of growth! What sweet visions of Clanton in 1975 as the major city of the South!

Perhaps that vision is a little far-fetched. Perhaps Clanton won't be the major city of the South in 1975; but it has possibilities of going ahead—much more rapidly than it has in the past—on just the same foundation on which Birmingham grew so rapidly—underground wealth.

Just east of Mountain Creek, men are striking their picks into the soil and bringing forth a dull, brownish rock—sometimes even purplish. That brown is brown iron ore, and the purplish tinge comes from manganese, one of the chemicals vitally necessary to the manufacture of steel which cannot be found in the Birmingham district. So every day, along about nine-thirty or ten in the morning, a north bound local freight train stops at Mountain Creek to hitch on a car or two of brown ore and take it off Birmingham.

Just a few miles east of Clanton, other men are also striking their picks into the soil and bringing forth the same dull brownish rock with the purplish tint. And in this particular section, the rock is almost directly on the surface; in fact, sometimes as you are driving and your car bumps over a big rock sticking out of the road (and you make mental notes to tell the Road Supervisor about it), you are bumping into some of the highest grade iron ore in the world. It runs directly under the highway, under cotton fields—
I saw it even surrounding a water-well on one farm. And if you go down to the L & N tracks one block south of Clanton station, you will find some men operating a crusher which breaks the pieces of rock and ore into smaller sections and loads them on a belt conveyor into the freight car.

The man behind this great development of Chilton County's underground wealth is O. T. Dickey. Coming here just fifteen months ago, Mr. Dickey has developed the business of mining iron ore until it stands high today among Chilton County's producers of wealth. Unless my figures are incorrect (and you can stop me if they are), the payroll of the O. T. Dickey Ore Company is second only to that of the Alabama Mills, in Chilton County. And it is growing!

Some of these days you will be driving over the local county highway and you may have to detour because some of Mr. Dickey's men are digging deep into the highway to uncover the brownish-and-purplish wealth that lies there waiting. When that happens, don't grumble—don't complain; just smile, for when that time comes, prosperity will be dumped right into Chilton County's lap.

At least, that's what I think.

Randolph News

Our barbecue last Saturday was a success. The Lord gave us a beautiful day. Exceptionally good was our speaker and his address, "To Whom Are We Indebted?" Many good things were said about Mr. Davis, our barbecue man, and the good job he did with our meat. Three very interesting baseball games were played and were enjoyed by six or eight hundred people. Around $400.00 will be realized from the barbecue. This will more than pay for the tiling of our school well and will go a good way toward the paying for our piano.

We want to thank everybody who assisted us in putting this program over. Especially do we want to thank the people of Randolph School community for their whole-hearted cooperation.

Our music school is going full blast with an enrollment of over sixty pupils. Those who will promise to pay by the 24th of October and who really want their child in school are welcomed to send them. The school will end August 13th. On that night we will have a concert at the school building. Admission will be ten cents straight for everybody over six years of age.

Miss Lou Olive Littlejohn is our accompanist and piano teacher. She has six or eight pupils. The total enrollment is expected to reach the seventy mark.

The words from Mr. Stone that the additional building would be done is very encouraging. We are expectantly looking forward.

J.C. EDWARDS WRITES

The law of the Lord is perfect, converting the soul. The commandments of the Lord are pure, enlightening the eyes. (Ps. 19:7-8). Guided by the perfect law of God the consecrated cannot go wrong. To be thus properly guided the man must have a pure heart that is, his heart must be right, free from selfishness and his motive or moving cause must be to serve God and his King because such is the right course to take. Therefore the Lord says to such: Keep thy heart with all diligence, for out of it are the issues of life. (Prov. 4:23). Not only must the motive be right when one begins to serve the Lord, but he must continue to keep his motive pure and his love set up on God. If one's motive to serve the Lord is selfish he is certain to fall and fall entirely away.

When Jehu said to Jonadab, "Is this heart right as my heart is?" Clearly he meant that only those who have and maintain a pure condition of heart can remain in God's organization. Those who love what is right may flee to the city of refuge which is God's organization and remain steadfastly there until the wrath of God is past. The lawless refuse to obey God's commandments and to follow His organization instruction. Many people today are not keeping themselves unspotted from the world. (Jas. 1:27). Those truly devoted to God rejoice to see the laborers working together.

COM. COURT LETTER

tion of the roads and bridges of our county compared with the amount of common labor which amounts are as follows:

For May and June:
Supervision, inspection and clerical help $2,582.35.

Common labor $927.05.

These figures do not include machine and equipment operators.

From the above statement you can readily see that we have some unnecessary expense in the supervision, clerical, and inspection of our roads and bridges. Therefore, being elected by the people we feel that it is our duty to take care of the taxpayers' money as far as possible. And if Mr. Arledge thinks we are in Russia because we are trying to look after and take care of the taxpayers' money, then in Russia we stay.

We do not know whom Mr. Arledge referred to "making false rumors and erroneous statements of those persons who are attempting to spoil a progressive movement," but we do know the statement he made as to the amount of money we were spending and the amount he is spending is not true. The records are the best evidence; they are public records and subject to inspection. The Commissioners have appropriated all the money available for road purposes, and we have no desire to mislead the people.

We believe that the citizens and taxpayers should have a voice when it comes to electing officials who have authority to spend their money. We were elected by the people and we want them to know that we are willing to carry out their wishes.

Yours very truly,

J. LEE SMITH,
Chairman, Commissioners Court;
J.P. BEAN,
Commissioner, 1st District;
H.R. ODEN,

R.L. OUSLEY,
Commissioner, 3rd District;
J.M. PARRISH,

CREDIT SYSTEM

and professional men have long felt a need for such a service but have not heretofore been able to find a system that they considered suitable for this locality. The results of the survey by the above organization have been very encouraging and a large majority of the representative business and professional men have signified their desire to cooperate in securing the credit rating service of the Merchants Mercantile Company.

This service should prove beneficial not only to the creditor but to the buying public as well. It makes it possible for the man who pays his bills promptly and regularly to strengthen his position with the merchant and professional man. It enables the business man and the doctor to tell at a moments notice the credit standing of the person who is requesting credit, thereby eliminating bad credit risks and making more good credit sales promptly and pleasantly. In other words it will enable the man who has a good credit still better and those who have not been doing the right thing will be exposed.

Retail credit rating has had a rapid growth during the short time that it has been used. After the Dun and the Bradstreet agencies had demonstrated their usefulness as a rating agency for the use of financial institutions and wholesale establishments it was apparent that the retail merchant needed the same thing to assist him in extending the courtesy of credit only to those who discharged their obligations as they should.

So rapid has been the growth of these services that today every city of any size and many medium sized and small towns have efficient and profitable credit services. The majority of those who do not have this service are anxious to find something that will fulfill their needs and yet be within the means of those who do a credit business in that district.

It seems to be the general consensus of opinion that the system furnished by the Merchants Mercantile Company is admirably adapted to the conditions in Chilton County. In order that the service may be countywide the information is placed in a Credit Rating Guide and this guide is placed in the office of each client of the organization. This eliminates the necessity of using a phone to inquire rating and at the same time makes it as easy for the merchant who is in the outlying district to use the service as those who have establishments in the principle business centers.

Letters To The Editor

MR. A. B. COX MAKES STATEMENT ABOUT COUNTY ROADS

Clanton, Ala., July 31, 1937.

I do not live in Chilton County at this time, I am living just over the line in Autauga County, but my wife and I still claim Chilton County as our home and vote at Cooper in Beat 10.

The road from Enterprise to the Autauga County line is in very bad condition and it is my best judgment there has not been a scrape on this road or any work done on this road this year. There is nothing to show that a road scrape has ever been on this road.

There was a ditch across this road about 100 yards this side of the Autauga County line, and there was a little bridge over this ditch and this bridge fell in and was allowed to remain in this condition for a period of two weeks or more, making a whole or ditch in the road about two and one-half feet wide and some 10 to 14 inches deep. About a week ago some of the road hands came and put a water box some 6 to 10 inches above the level of the road.

While this bridge over this ditch was broken in, I came over the road with my car and knew that the ditch was there and in trying to get over the ditch I broke the carter key in the end of the drive shaft allowing the nut and pendulum to run off, and tore the differential out of my car. I had my car fixed and it cost me $18.50 to fix it and I am expecting the County or someone who is responsible for this ditch to pay me my money back.

I feel that the roads in Chilton County should be in the hands of our Commissioners as once was and I know that we had better roads while in the hands of the Commissioners than we have now, and I am for one when I get a chance to vote for it to be back in the hands of the Commissioners, I shall cast my vote that way.

Mr. Lande, who buys the men's ready-to-wear, says that he has purchased men's suits that are absolutely the prettiest he has ever purchased, and in the newest patterns and styles. Mr. Lande says "The best is none too good for my customers."

"You will be astonished at the low prices at which these suits will sell. They will begin rolling in a hurry, and if you are wise, you will be among the first to make your selections." Other lines purchased consist of men's shirts, Sox, ties, and the latest in men's hats. And men's Star Brand dress and work shoes occupy a prominent place in his purchases, also Jarman Friendly dress shoes, known all over the world as the leader in men's $5.00 dress shoes.

The Landes conclude by saying "You must come in and see for yourself the many advantages of trading with The Lande."

STATE FAIR

ham for one day of the Fair, Thursday, when "Thrill Day" would be observed. The famous dare-devil, who has been booked through the Barnes-Carruthers organization, will stage his famous airplane wrecking feat on the infield immediately in front of the grandstand and will give a thrill show lasting all afternoon. He will be assisted by his state fair appearance by Tommy Delucca, Birmingham girl, who doesn't know what the word, "fear" means.

Besides "thrill day" which will be staged on Thursday, the State Fair management will also stage two auto race days this year, Tuesday and Saturday when a galaxy of the foremost race drivers of America will be brought to Birmingham to vie for the huge purses offered. Among the drivers who will compete on these two days will be Bud Gus Sharder, world's dirt track champion, Emory Collins, winner of the Gold Cup offered by I.M.C.A., and Buddy Callaway, the Cyclone of the South.

Monday, the opening day of the fair this year, will be celebrated as "Children's Day" when thousands of school kiddies from the Birmingham district and from the State at large, will be admitted free. So, with a grand opening day, two auto race days and thrill day already arranged for Manager Strieder has only two special days to work on from now until the beginning of the State's annual exposition to make the program complete and one of the most thrilling ever offered.

Royal American Shows with their 50 special car train will again furnish the midway attractions starting Monday, Sept. 27, and continuing throughout the week: Thearle-Duffield Fireworks Co., has again contracted to furnish the nightly fireworks display. This means that the amusement end of the fair will be as great as any State in the Union or any district in Canada will see for the 1937 fair season.

The live stock show is also to be a feature this year with only Alabama bred cattle eligible to vie for prizes, while addition has been made to this department with a mule and mule colt show, the entries confined exclusively to Alabama bred hybrids being shown. Two more counties than exhibited last year have already signed for the agricultural show and Mr. Strieder states that he feels sure many more counties will be represented by the time the Curtains close up on this year's production. The group plan of scoring will be in force this year.

With Mrs. W.W. Harman again in charge of the Woman's and Fine Arts Department, with Thomas Atchison in charge of the apiary show, with Raymond Quinn in charge of poultry and F.W. Burns and R.S. Suggs of the Auburn extension department in charge of the dairy cattle and beef cattle exhibits respectively, Mr. Strieder feels that the success of this year's show is assured.

LIQUOR

holic beverages bearing the stamp legally purchased, but which are illegally sold or kept for sale, are also liable used in transporting them, are condemned in either wet or dry counties. Rigid rules are laid down enforcement of the law by showing preventing the sale of either wet and legally purchased alcoholic beverages, or those unstamped, in dry counties, and for their seizure, also destruction where convictions are obtained.

How to Condemn

The opinion addressed to Mr. Jones: That unstamped or unalcoholic beverages, that is to alcoholic beverages not sold in accordance with the provisions of the bama alcoholic beverage control act, are subject to confiscation, and the provisions of Sections 1 and 35 of that same act, in dry wet or dry county, these provisions being applicable in all counties of the State.

2. Stamped or identified alcoholic beverages—those originally purchased in accordance with the provisions of the Alabama alcoholic beverage control act—which are being sold or kept for sale, as well as vehicles used for their transportation, such illegal purchases, should be condemned in accordance with the provisions of the appropriate sections of the Alabama code of 1923, in wet or dry county, these sections of the old prohibition laws not having been repealed in the respect to alcoholic beverage control act.

Free Hand For Sheriff. The opinion forwarded to the County sheriff goes even further clearly sets out that regardless of State beverage control law, in dry counties still have a right in enforcing both State and prohibitions laws.

The sheriff, apparently under the course of action he might sue and the liability he might incur in enforcing the law in dry counties, appealed to the attorney general for advice. He said these number of filling stations, night clubs in Clanton, none of which was exclusively used as a house, and at which there were no alcoholic beverages sold, and he had reason to believe that he might not be able to enforce the sale, either beer or whiskey.

He asked whether the possession of beer or whiskey under the circumstances outlined was prima facie evidence of whiskey or beer in a dry county. If he would be legally justified in seizing such beer or whiskey, and resting the proprietor of such a business on the charge of offering for sale, or illegally in possession prohibited liquor, beverages contrary to law. What if there was no conviction, he returned the beer or whiskey to the owner and, in such an event, he would be free from liability on his bond; also what disposition should be made of the beer or whiskey seized in such convictions.

Rules Laid Down
1. Possession of unstamped or identified alcoholic beverages, or liquor, that is to say alcoholic beverages not purchased in accordance with the provisions of the Alabama alcoholic beverage control act, anywhere in the State of Alabama, either a wet or dry county.

2. Possession of stamped or identified alcoholic beverages—those purchased in accordance with the provisions of the beverage control act, in a filling station, cafe or other place in a dry county "is prima facie evidence that the same are for sale or distribution with the intent to sell or distribute the same to law."

3. A sheriff of a dry county is justified in seizing stamped or identified alcoholic beverages purchased in accordance with the provisions of the beverage control act, which are being sold in a filling station, cafe or other place on a charge of offering to sell, or illegally in possession, alcoholic beverages contrary to law.

4. Where the sheriff in a dry county seizes the stamped and identified beverages in a filling station, night club and arrests the proprietor on the charge stated, the beer seized should, if there is no conviction, be returned by the sheriff to the person from whom they were seized; the sheriff would incur no liability on his official bond.

5. If there is a conviction in a case, however, the beverages should be disposed of in accordance with the provisions of the State's prohibition laws. In the opinion holds that the convictions amounts to a legal determination that the alcoholic beverages found in his possession and seized, though legally purchased, were illegally possessed for sale, distribution or illegally sold; and such legal determination should proceed to condemn and destroy the beverages.

The opinion sets out the procedure to be followed in the confiscation of both stamped and unstamped alcoholic beverages, that are illegally possessed or distributed or illegally sold.

"That's better," replied the man, "you can't fool me with that stuff."

PASSING FOOTPRINTS

Of The Times
— Billy Smith

A sudden outburst of this news this week with all the facts about Pitt Tyson Maner, of Alabama, as a candidate for the office of President of the Young Democratic Clubs of America is nothing new to you. But, the still remains that friend Maner is a most successful campaigner for the Democratic Party in Alabama; that he is private secretary to the Governor of Alabama; that one of the first organizers of the Democratic Clubs in Alabama; his advice is often sought, not only by Alabamians, but by residents of other states, regarding politics and winning of clean government; that one of the most far-seeing men of the state today and he would make a darned good President of the Young Democratic Clubs of America. They will do well to remember next week in Indianapolis.

Bad Idea
A general conversation with our Mayor Jones the other day, we were led to bring from him the information that the City Council had requested to pass an ordinance prohibiting the unnecessary loud volume of radios within city limits. In words some people want the right to pass a law prohibiting a man playing his radio so loud that it would entertain his neighbors, next door across the street or down the block. Well, they kind of have us believe you me. At any rate, it isn't a bad idea, and we can appreciate the position of the members of the City Council on a matter of that kind. So, folks, have a radio within the city limits, but remember that you are to tune your own entertainment and not with the intention of annoying your neighbors, who are fortunate enough to own a radio.

Wishes
Best wishes and heartiest congratulations to Miss Sara Sunday, who comes around we hope among those present when Miss becomes Mrs. Mullins and starts her career as one of Clanton's new wives. Reese is one of the last of the Clanton family to go to school. Clanton and we well remember him when he could A's and he couldn't. We still him for his ability to always right for himself.

To Pitt
We have just been advised that our Judge Lee Smith sends his best to Pitt Tyson Maner in his endeavor to become head of that all-important organization, The Young Democratic Clubs of America. Judge has always expressed a sincere interest in the welfare of the young of this county and we know that of luck to Pitt is sincere and the Young Democrats of Chilton have a friend in our own Progress.

Road Supervisor Offers $100 Reward In Road Controversy

(By T. J. Arledge, Road Supervisor)

There is quite a little dispute over various rumors and published statements as to what was spent by the Road Department during the months of May and June, 1937. Judge Smith and the very honorable members of his Court show that a total sum of $2,582.35 was spent for "clerical inspection and supervision" by the Road Department during the two months stated, in their statement published in last week's issue of the Chilton County News. The writer gives the following as the correct figure of such costs, which is taken from a copy of his Monthly Progress Report for those months, a report which is required by law to be filed with the Commissioner's Court, and through the courtesy of the Road Supervisor each Commissioner has been provided with a certified copy for their individual information. And I might state that the figures shown are a summation of the various sums indicated on all claims filed with the Court for payment during the two months in question. Therefore those claims, which are now recorded in the Claim Book of the Commissioner, (Continued to Back Page)

EDITORIAL

THE ROADS OF CHILTON COUNTY HAVE BEEN A POLITICAL FOOTBALL LONG ENOUGH

Continuous statements coming to The News during the past several months, purportedly in an effort to secure better service on the maintenance of the county's roads, and complaints about poor conditions of the roads, seem to outweigh those upholding the present system of road working and road building in this county. This condition has led The News into an investigation of the matter during past few months.

For sometime, citizens of the county have wanted The News to express its opinion in regard to the alleged negligence on the part of the Road Department in maintaining the roads and bridges of the county. The News has patiently, quietly and carefully listened and considered all these statements. We have contacted members of the Commissioners Court with questions; we have questioned the Road Department, and employees and have discussed the matter with citizens of the county, both those residing in the rural sections and in the towns, during the past few months.

Now—and not until now, has The News made a decision regarding this controversial matter of our county—a decision derived from careful consideration of all information at hand.

Of course, the News, like most everyone interested in the matter, knows definitely that something should and MUST be done. So far, no one has dared express publicly anything definite as to what will have to be done to place this county's road work on a paying basis with results that are to be expected from the spending of taxpayers money. The News dares express an opinion in behalf of the citizens and taxpayers of Chilton County regarding the present set-up of road maintenance.

The News, after careful consideration, has reached the conclusion that a change in the present arrangement of the Road Department will be a solution of the problem—if it is a problem. Some may say that the present Road Supervisor has not been given an opportunity to show what his office is worth to the county. Granting that may be true, The News feels that more than eighteen months is sufficient for such a Department. (Continued to Back Page)

MANY STATES HAVE PLEDGED VOTES TO ALABAMA CANDIDATE

Private Secretary To Alabama's Governor Is Leading Candidate For High Honor In Young Democratic Clubs Of America

Atlanta, Ga., Aug. 9.—Hundreds of delegates from Southern states will move northward to Indianapolis, Ind., Aug. 19 for the national convention of Young Democrats with hopes of bringing the national presidency southward.

A poll of state leaders revealed the Southerners did not plan a fight for inclusion of any particular planks in the national platform, although Kentucky wants convention voting based on state representation and not paid-up dues.

John Kohn, Alabama State president, said Pitt Tyson Maner, of Montgomery, was a "leading candidate" for the national presidency and that Alabama would refrain from debate on controversial question in its campaign to win the national post. Maner, private secretary to Gov. Graves, is a former State president of the Young Democrats, and secretary of the State Democratic Executive Committee.

He will receive Georgia's votes in his race, according to Kohn, former Governor of Savannah, State president. He said "I expect delegates to back Pitt Tyson Maner to the man."

From Kentucky came word that Thomas M. Logan, State president who lives at Covington, would be a candidate for the national presidency.

Logan said the Young Democrats would meet Aug. 14, at Louisville to complete their plans, which called for a delegation of 1,000 to attend, including Gov. A. B. Chandler and his staff.

The Kentucky delegation, Logan said, will offer a resolution asking that voting at the national convention be based on state representation and not paid-up dues. He said the present system gives Eastern states the advantage over the West and South.

Ed I. McKinley, Jr., of Little Rock, Ark., said that five Young Democrats would represent his State and "I understand that Mr. Pitt Tyson Maner, of Alabama, will receive strong support from Southern states for the presidency."

Thomas J. Ferguson, of Miami, president of Florida's Young Democrats, said he expected from 25 to 30 to attend the convention at Indianapolis, with the delegation unpledged as to the national presidency race.

Tennessee's Young Democrats, according to State President David P. Murray, of Jackson, will support President Roosevelt's wishes "100 per cent" at the convention.

He said the delegation of approximately 100 would hold a caucus at Indianapolis to determine which candidate would receive its support.

SHERIFF AND FORCES MAKE ACTIONS FELT

Strenuous Drive Is Put On In County To Clear Up Intoxicants

A strenuous drive went into last week by Sheriff Hardy and his deputies to keep Chilton County clear of the sale of beer and wine. As the wish of the majority of the people, Sheriff Hardy and his forces made several raids on Clanton places and nearby places in an effort to remove violators of the Alabama Liquor Control Act that "it must be done here" when it comes to selling beer and whiskey.

These raids became effective following a recent ruling of the Attorney General of Alabama on the new law and specifically setting out the duties of a sheriff in a "dry" county. Sheriff Hardy stated to the press Tuesday that it is his intention to enforce the letter of the law, and to the sale of beer and wine in this county. He also stated that he is able to ascertain who is successful in stopping this sale, but one place in Clanton.

Up-To-Date Merchants

The summer merchandising season is near its close. Already some merchants, those of the old school, are beginning to pack away the various assortments of summer merchandise where it must await in the darkness of a storage room for the arrival of another summer.

But other merchants, those who believe in the modern ideas of merchandising, are arranging clearance sales. They are preparing to move this summer goods by reducing the prices so low that people cannot afford to overlook the opportunities to effect big savings.

The merchants of this latter group, we maintain, are the ones who can give you better service season after season and year after year. First and of paramount significance is the assurance that next year they will offer you next year's merchandise. They do not believe that it is sound business to carry goods over from season to season. They realize that the citizens of Chilton County and of every other modern community are as familiar with style and fashion trends as the residents of Park Avenue New York or the Gold Coast of Chicago. And they are going to keep themselves in a position to meet the demand for up-to-date merchandising by clearing their shelves at the close of each season.

There is another phase to this subject which merits the consideration of the buying public. That lies in the matter of merchandising turn-over, in keeping the capital invested in merchandise stock busy throughout the year. The merchant who practices this policy, the policy of rapid turn-over, must satisfy himself with small profits on each sale and make his earnings on volume sales. Small profits, many sales, rapid turn-over, up-to-date merchandise—these are the elements of modern merchandising. These plus advertising, of course, the policy by which the merchant tells the public about his merchandise, his service, and his prices.

A Letter From Home

"It's just like a letter from home," they write, these subscribers of the News who now live hundreds or even thousands of miles away from our community. Year after year these friends retain their interest in the old home town, and it is always a pleasure to us to receive a friendly word from one of them.

Though the distribution of these extra papers is not profitable, it is always a source of pleasure. We like to know that there are people, and many of them, who retain a keen interest in Chilton County and its citizens and find every issue of our paper interesting.

To those friends far away we now wish to offer a suggestion. A letter from you to your friends back here in Clanton will be highly interesting. You cannot, of course, take the time to write to each one individually, but a letter to this paper will be reproduced in our columns and will reach all of your old friends here.

Tell us what you are doing, about how the country in which you now live is prospering, about the countless number of interesting things you would write to your individual friends if you had the time. You will thus bring a thrill of pleasure to every friend here in Chilton County and will help us make our paper a connecting link between the many people who fondly tell that Chilton County was their home.

We wonder how many men must be killed by bombs and guns before the Chinese and Japanese will acknowledge that a state of war exists.

The Department of State must be on guard constantly to keep from being drawn into any other peace conference.

Uncle Easy Mark

Need we wonder why most nations of the world regard Americans as "easy marks?" When we travel abroad we are noted for the generosity of our tips, and our readiness to pay two prices for everything we buy. When we help foreign nations in war we offer our best soldiers and our great wealth with a lavish hand, cancel voluntarily more than half the debts, and then calmly accept their refusal to pay the remaining obligation.

And then when their destitute citizens come to our shores we give them employment if possible, feed them if we can find no work for them, and permit them to form organizations to overthrow our institutions and demoralize our system of government. We also pay handsome fees to their notable citizens who come here to lecture on how America is lacking in culture.

But worst of all, in this writer's opinion, is our easy generosity toward aliens who have no intention or desire to become American citizens.

An active communistic party exists. Its avowed purpose is to overthrow all American institutions. But it is made up primarily of aliens and pursues an alien philosophy. Another organization supporting the Fascist doctrine exists in this country. Its membership consists largely of aliens.

Why need we tolerate all this? Why should we feed and care for every destitute alien who can get to our shores legally or illegally and then permit him to engage in an active program to undermine our institutions?

How long would Stalin, Hitler or Mussolini permit American citizens to engage in an active program of wrecking? What sort of welcome destitute Americans receive in those nations? Such questions are merely rhetorical. Americans are welcomed abroad only when they arrive with pockets well filled and a ready disposition to laud the country visited and to pay well for the privilege.

We are not hostile in any measure to American citizens of foreign extraction. It is our observation that persons of foreign birth who come here and take out citizenship papers are frequently our best citizens, because they appreciate the boundless opportunity, personal freedom and social equality which make America great.

But aliens who come here to overthrow our institutions and take advantage of our generosity fall within another category. Congress might well give some consideration to the problem they present.

Little Help, Much Criticism

A small group of loyal citizens meets in some office or store, on some evening when each would rather be somewhere else, and plans an event of value to the community. Each one regrets that others who received the invitation did not see fit to attend, but they all console themselves saying: "It's always only a few who must do the work, anyway."

Their effort bears results. The event they plan meets with success. Others who had no part in its projection reap equal benefits. Then come the comments.

And are these always favorable to the effort and thought of the small group of citizens who made the program possible? Not that you can notice. Usually every mistake that has been made is effectively exaggerated. Next it is charged that the trouble with this town is "a small clique is trying to run everything. Why don't they let us all in on their plans."

When such things occur, and they occur frequently, we always wonder what can be done with this cursed thing called human munity. The door is always open and the latch string is always out when some civic group plans an event of value to the community. Every committee of this type we ever knew about welcomes help and invites constructive criticism at the time it will do some good. But few of them ever get it until the job is done. Then there are plenty of citizens ready to tell how it should have been done.

The result of this lethargy and indifference among a vast proportion of our citizens. They feel that if their efforts will be rewarded with nothing but adverse criticism; that if their good intentions will receive little support, then what's the use. The result is community stagnation.

If we could but realize that a little praise will go a lot farther than reams of criticism; and if we would give credit where credit is due, it would not be difficult to secure cooperation and a spirit of civic enterprise which would carry our community far along the pathway of progress.

MORAL ECHOES.

D. W. Haskew

One day I stood on the banks of a swollen stream. Just below the river made a close curve. I observed that the water near the banks on the opposite side was running rapidly down stream, while the water at my feet was running slowly up stream. On one side of the river the water was running down stream, while on the other side it was running up stream. I thought to myself, what a lecture of life was before me. When we take our place beside the stream of life at any point and we can observe that it is a stream with a double flow. On one side of this stream of life the bad are flowing down toward lower levels of living, while on the other side, the side of the good, they are slowly pushing their way to higher and better conditions of living. On which side of this stream do we find you? Life is a stream with a double flow. Some are growing worse, while others are growing better.

The story is told of a knight who was going on a journey. He thought it wise to prepare himself against every emergency. He thought that he might be pestered with mice in the hotels and so he put a mouse trap in his traveling bags. He sure that mosquitoes would nibble on him and so he carried a mosquito net. He feared the heat so he put in an electric fan. He feared wild beasts and he carried his firearms. He knew that he would want to drink so he put in his drinking cup. Knowing that he would need food, he put in a supply of groceries and cooking utensils. When he had anticipated his needs of the journey, had prepared everything according to his needs, he discovered that he had bundled up more than he was able to carry. This is the problem of life. We burden ourselves with so many things that we think we must have until we find that our loads are too heavy to be carried with us. The most of us make life difficult and all because we load ourselves down with things that we do not need. The art of life is to be able to find the thing that you need, when you need it.

An English newspaper conducted a contest in an effort to get the right answer to the question: "Who are the happiest people on earth?" When all the answers were in the paper published the four winning prizes. I am copying for you these four answers: (1) "A workman whistling over a job well done." (2) "A little child building sand castles." (3) "A mother after a busy day." (4) "A doctor who has finished a difficult and dangerous operation and saved a human life." I want you to notice that in these four answers, there is not one single reference to money, fame, high rank or popularity. "The city of happiness is in the state of the mind!"

One day an old man was leisurely walking along the road when he came to a boy sitting on a log beside the road. The lad was making an effort to devour the last half of a large apple. It was evident to the old man that the boy was already too full of apple and so he remarked, "Too much apple isn't it Sonny?" The small boy, his mouth full of apple, replied, "No sir, Mister, not enough boy." When you see folks struggling under the burdens of life, just remember that it is not too much load, it is too little strength. When you see people going down under temptation, it is not that the temptations are too much, it is because there is not enough of will-power. It is not that life has too many burdens; it is that there is not enough man back of life.

While we were in Texas a brothe-in-law was erecting a windmill on his ranch. He had a Mexican helping him. Luke was high up on the frame adjusting the wheel of the mill, when there was a keen flash of lightning. The steel grew hot in his hand and Luke came down the steel post like a fireman. On reaching the ground he stood before the boss and in his broken English and with a trembling voice said, "Master Murphy, me catch a fright and me want to run home." To make the Mexican feel at ease Mr. Murray said, "Luke, me catch a fright and me want to run home too." Both men mounted their horses and rode away to shelter. There are times when it is normal nature "To catch a Fright," but the most of us catch a fright when we have not been well exposed. We flee when no man pursueth. If we "Catch a Fright" and run away from duty the task will never be done.

Not a White County Convict was certified to the State Convict Department last year from Bullock, Lowndes, Macon and Marengo counties, and not a negro convict from Cullman, DeKalb and Marion. The total number of County Convicts received by the convict department last year was 2,952. Of this number 1633 were negroes and 1319 were white.

At the close of the last fiscal year, September 30, there were 134 County Convicts in the State prison camps who could neither read nor write. Of the total number of county convicts on hand at that time 363 were employed at the time of their arrest and 303 were unemployed.

New Miracles Of The Photoelectric Cell

By James D. Purdy
Director, Schools of Electrical Engineering, International Correspondence Schools

PHOTOELECTRIC cells help to assure the safe operation of elevators in Rockefeller Center, New York City. Two beams of light falling on photoelectric cells cross elevator doorway—one beam at about the level of a man's waist, the other at about the level of his ankles. The car cannot start until the door is closed. The door can be closed only when the light beams are unintercepted and the doorway is clear.

A method for measuring the speed of artillery shells by firing them through invisible curtains of light has been developed at the National Research Laboratories, in Canada. The path of the shell is intersected every fifty feet by a beam of light falling upon a photoelectric cell connected with sensitive recording apparatus.

Expert egg candlers now have a rival in an ingenious device that grades eggs by the use of a photoelectric cell. Light from a 30-watt bulb passes through the egg to the photoelectric cell. A dial indicates the amount of light transmitted and the egg is graded accordingly.

Plant research scientists are employing the photoelectric cell to perform the difficult task of measuring the area of irregularly shaped leaves. A brilliant light is focused on a box with a ground glass top in which the light sensitive cell is enclosed. Placing the leaf on the ground glass cuts off light in proportion to its area. Measurement of the area is obtained by comparing the reading on a meter attached to the photoelectric cell, before and after placing the leaf in position.

Music School At Randolph Progresses

The music school is still progressing nicely and I hope it will continue to do so during the last week. My primary objective of this school is to teach boys and girls the simple rules of music so they will be able to appreciate it more and to know the thrill of self-indulgence. We have sixty-six pupils but we have seventy-six enrolled. The school will close Friday, August 13th. A concert will be sponsored by the school together with a few outsiders Friday night, August 13, at 8:00 p. m. Admission will be 10c. "Our Commissioner has promised to travel the drive in front of our building. If he can let me know beforehand, I can notify the patrons of the school and I hope all of them will come out and bring a pick or shovel and work a half-day. If they themselves cannot come probably they will send someone. I believe when a person does what he reasonably can to toward the advancement of his school, he should be given a proportionate voice in the administration of its affairs."

"Our school begins earlier this year than usual. I hope that each person, patron or otherwise will pray earnestly for the teachers and for a successful school year. Great good can be done."

Very truly yours,
J. HUDSON WILLIAMS.

LETTER OF APPRECIATION

Clanton, Ala., Aug. 10, 1937.
To The Trustees Life Assurance Society:

I wish to express my appreciation of the services rendered me by your doctors and nurses during my illness and operations, as I have had a very serious operation. I have been to the St. Vincent, the Birmingham Baptist and the Birmingham General and I must say I did not receive the attention there that I have in the Woodlawn Hospital, as I had three operations on one leg. I wish to thank Mr. J. H. Stephens and Dr. Sam Wallace for their faithful attention given my case. They are the most wonderful doctors in the world. In addition to the money they saved me on this hospital bill.

Sincerely,
MRS. EDD JACKS.

"The Man Who O-O"

ALTHOUGH Thomas Nast is usually credited with being the man who made the donkey one of the emblems of the Democratic party, the fact is that some other cartoonist, whose name is unknown, hung a bag labeled "Specie Currency-Circulating Medium." A ghost, labeled "Bankrupts of 1836," was causing the donkey to balk and its rider was belaboring it with a cane labeled "Veto." Behind the rider and his mount walked Van Buren saying "I shall follow the footsteps of my illustrious predecessor."

From that time on, during the disputes over the money question, the donkey frequently appeared in the cartoons and became the accepted symbol of the Democratic party. But it was the genius of Thomas Nast which made this symbol familiar to millions of Americans.

During the feud between President Andrew Johnson and Edwin M. Stanton, secretary of war, Nast was a strong ally of the latter. When Stanton died soon after President Grant had made him a Justice of the Supreme Court, the southern Democratic papers, continuing the feud, attacked Stanton even in their obituary notices of him.

On January 15, 1870 Nast drew his first donkey cartoon. It pictured Stanton as a dead lion being kicked by a donkey labeled "Copperhead press." Underneath it were the lines: "A Live Jackass kicking a dead Lion and such a Lion! and such a Jackass!" In later cartoons he also depicted the Democratic papers, especially James Gordon Bennett's New York Herald, as a donkey and after a while began applying the symbol to the Democratic party as well as its press.

"LEST WE FORGET"

EDITOR'S NOTE: In view of the inclination on almost everyone's part to apparently forget the financial status of the country, and particularly that of the farmers and business men of this section, during the years of 1929, 1930 to 1932, the following thoughts were given us by Hon. G. C. Walker, well-known attorney of Clanton. We feel indebted to Mr. Walker for these thoughts and reminders that we, as citizens of the United States, at one time faced a very depressing era and that now we have many things for which to be thankful.

There are those of our people who possibly do not remember the hard times during the years of 1931 and 1932, when our farmers could not sell their cotton for more than five cents per pound, and when the farmer would shell his corn and bring it to Clanton, he would be glad to get as much as twenty-five cents per bushel for it. The farmer could not pay the merchants, he could not pay the bankers, he could not pay the doctor. The merchant could not pay the wholesale dealer, nor could the doctor pay his drug bills. The banker was afraid to loan the money, not that the man to whom he would make the loan was dishonest and would not pay, but on the other hand, the banker was afraid the man to whom he WOULD loan the money could not pay.

Many people who had money in the banks withdrew it. Bank holidays were declared in many States of the Union, many banks failed, and people lost their money. After March 4, 1933, by an order of President Roosevelt and all banks were closed for a few days and examination made by the Government of the financial condition of the institutions. Later most all of the banks were permitted to re-open and go ahead with normal business. There were some of the banks that had to be helped by the Government, that is to say, the Government made loans to the bank and placed the bank in a safe and sound condition. After this was done the Congress of the United States passed a law wherein the Government of the United States guaranteed to each depositor his deposit up to $5,000.00. You can see very clearly and very easily just what this meant. Prior to March 4, 1933, when a bank closed its doors the depositors lost all or a major part of their deposit, today that is not true. Should a bank fail today, most every man would be able to get all the money he had on deposit in that bank, because there are very few of our citizens who at any time have more than $5,000.00 on deposit at any one time.

Now, there are those who will argue to you that President Roosevelt should have cooperated with President Hoover after the November election in 1932, in other words, that President Roosevelt should have taken charge after the November election in 1932, and should have told Mr. Hoover how to run his office. This, Roosevelt refused to do. It appears to me that he did right, because it is not fair and it is not right for one man to try to run and control a public office when another man has been elected to perform those duties. There are those who will tell you that the depression was just about over in the Spring of 1933, and that Mr. Roosevelt has done nothing to help our people.

You have heard it argued here in Chilton County that the President of the United States has nothing to do with the price of cotton, or the price of corn, or the price of livestock, that the price is always fixed, controlled by the law of supply and demand. This theory will never be believed you again.

Almost every farmer in Chilton County has received Government checks since the spring of 1933, and do you farmers remember any farmer who received a Government check prior to the spring of 1933? Is it not true that this is the first time in the history of our Republic that the farmer ever received one penny from the Government?

Old cars were being driven by a majority of our people in the spring of 1933, what is the condition now? Most everyone has a new car—the merchant, the banker, the farmer, the preacher, the lawyer, and even the very poorest of our citizens have an automobile. Everybody seems to be happy, money is easy, everyone wants work can get it, and you can talk most any man, who has an open mind, he will tell you that conditions now are more satisfactory to him than were conditions in 1931 and 1932.

It would be fine, it would be joyful, would mean much to our County, our State and Nation if every man owned his home. "For you have the poor always with you, and there should be some way devised some great mind, whereby every man should own his home. The home is the foundation of our American civilization. You hear much talk about farm problems when you take the mortgage off the neck of our American farmers you have a long way toward solving the farm problems and you have increased the peace and happiness of the fireside. A man can do very little with a load of debts hanging around his neck. Has anything been done in recent years to aid and assist the farmer in owning his home, and has anything been done, except in recent years, by the Government to aid and assist the farmer any citizen in owning his home?"

It is true that many of us are too forgetful, but had you rather have it like it is today or would you rather have it like it was in 1931 and 1932? We are now living in an airplane, automobile and radio age and it is difficult for many of us to remember these luxuries and at the same time the sufficient money left with which to maintain our homes and to pay for the actual necessities of life. We should all have confidence in a wise and just ruler—under a wise just ruler the people are happy, but the unwise or unjust or wicked ruler the people suffer. Look around about you, stock and find out for yourself what you are in better condition now than you were in 1931 and 1932. Know and understand the facts yourself without having to tell to someone who is afraid to admit the conditions, generally speaking are better than they were in 1931 and 1932.

Soil Conservation News

The control of erosion by the use of close-growing crops and other forms of vegetation with which farmers are familiar is becoming more and more important in the demonstration work in the Soil Conservation Service area near Clanton, according to James H. Wood, Superintendent.

Properly built terraces, contour cultivation and contour furrows in pastures are important phases of a complete program of soil and water conservation. Mr. Wood pointed out. But a large part of the protection can be accomplished by the use of vegetative cover which provides a return from the land.

Strips of close-growing crops planted between strips of clean-tilled crops such as cotton and corn, prevent excessive soil losses in eroded fields. The use of legumes in strip crops and strip rotations increases the fertility of the soil. Trees on the steeper slopes provide a variety of wood products.

Many gullies are now being stabilized by the simple process of seeding them to lespedeza or other suitable forms of vegetation and mulching to protect the new growth. Where dams are used in gullies they serve a temporary purpose by collecting silt in which vegetation can become established.

A change in the method of planting crops now grown on the farm will often do much to control erosion by giving the crops an opportunity to be of maximum benefit, when used in conjunction with mechanical aids such as terraces and contour furrows. But usually more close-growing crops are needed to provide effective vegetative control, Mr. Wood said.

Alabama Circular 157 on feeding dairy cows will assist you in computing satisfactory rations for dairy cows. This will be sent to anyone interested on request.

Dairy cows should be dry a month, and preferably six weeks, before freshening. Fall freshening cows will usually receive sufficient feed from pasture alone if good pasture is available.

Hot weather is the time when horse disease encephalomyelitis, sometimes called "blind staggers," fever," or "sleeping sickness," is likely to appear. Only a few of the causes of the disease have been reported in Alabama.

Chilton County Endorses Pitt Tyson Maner

The Choice Of The South For NATIONAL PRESIDENT of the YOUNG DEMOCRATIC CLUBS OF AMERICA

When delegates and others from over the nation gather in Indianapolis on August 19th to 21st for the national convention of the Young Democratic Clubs of America, Alabama will be more than well represented. Alabama will be there full strong to show its support for Pitt Tyson Maner, candidate for president of the Young Democratic Clubs of America.

Mr. Maner will and should be given this position. He is unusually well qualified for the place and to bring the presidency of the Clubs to the South would be to pay tribute to that group of States so strong for Democratic rights and principles.

Chilton County Young Democrats believe in Pitt Tyson Maner. They believe in him for those things he has already accomplished for the Democratic Party and the young people of Alabama and the nation. Brilliant, straightforward and progressive; he is the logical man to become head of such an organization as the Young Democratic Clubs of America.

Chilton County's votes and moral support will follow Mr. Maner to Indianapolis and will stand out as a sound principle of what the Young Democrats believe to be for the furtherance of the move throughout the nation to bring the Youth of America more into the forefront of government of the people, for the people and by the people.

The Young Democrats of the nation need a man of the calibre of Pitt Tyson Maner at the head of such an important organization with such outstanding and worthwhile objectives.

During the afternoon a beautiful musical program was presented by Mrs. W.L. Longshore, who played violin, Mrs. Percy Pitts, Mrs. Roberts, Miss Jane Roberts at piano and song solos by Mrs. Stanley, Miss Lois Thompson and Miss Janie McClure.

STATE AND FEDERAL AGENCIES FIGHTING ARGENTINE WEEVILS

Auburn, Ala.—State and Federal agricultural agencies have joined in an intensive campaign to keep the Argentine weevil from spreading from Covington County, Alabama, and Walton and Okaloosa Counties, Florida, into other parts of the state and nation.

The fight is being conducted in Alabama by the Alabama Department of Agriculture, Montgomery, the Department of Entomology of the Alabama Polytechnic Institute, Auburn and the United States Department of Agriculture, Washington. Hundreds of people are at work to control and eradicate the newly discovered pest.

Since its establishment in these counties it has damaged peanuts, cotton, corn, velvet beans, Irish potatoes, sweet potatoes, tomatoes, cabbage, collards, and other garden crops.

Very little is known about the life history of the new weevil or the best way to control it but state and federal entomologists are at present studying it to learn how best to control it.

In the infested areas they are picking and destroying the adults, are using various kinds of poisons and are digging trench barriers around infested fields.

"We wish to say that we thoroughly understand the possibilities of danger, and are taking every possible precaution; but on the other hand, we do not wish to create any feeling of unreasonable fear, because we believe that the problem will be handled to properly protect the people of our State and adjoining areas," says R. J. Goode, Commissioner of agriculture.

THREE FROM CHILTON ARE ATTENDING A. P. INSTITUTE

Among the one hundred and twenty-two teachers of vocational agriculture from all sections of Alabama who are now attending the Alabama Polytechnic Institute for an intensive three-week of graduate study, there are three from Chilton County.

They are A. L. Smith, Maplesville; H. H. Denison, Jewison; and J. H. Jackson, Clanton.

Teachers of vocational agriculture come to Auburn each summer for study toward the Master of Science degree, which five of them will receive on August 20 at the Summer commencement exercises. The short course for vocational teachers ends on August 7.

A course in problems of vocational instruction is taken by all of the teachers together with two of the elective courses in truck crop, poultry, crop production, livestock management, high school administration, and high school problems.

Detailed plans for instruction and project work for the coming year are worked out in daily conferences during the short course with R. E. Cammack, supervisor of vocational agriculture, and his staff.

The celebrity was placed next to a very talkative and inquisitive maiden lady, who bored him with her excessive questioning.

FACTS FROM THE RECORD

Written by F. G. Stephens, Publisher of The Southern Democrat, Ocala

The State Board of Administration under the law is charged with the responsibility of purchasing supplies and materials for all the State Departments, the sale of State-owned property, the execution of contracts involving the general business of the State, the administration of the State Insurance Fund, and the management and direction of the activities of the prisoners.

The annual report for the fiscal year ending September 30, 1936, shows that purchasing orders issued during the year amounted to $4,609,121.63. More than half of this amount ($2,956,180.67) was for the Highway Department. Of this amount $1,440,537.54 was used in highway construction. The three-way paving projects made it necessary for the State to purchase quite a bit of new machinery, materials and supplies.

One of the big problems of the Board is handling the Convicts and keeping them profitably employed. This report shows that during the year 10,550 prisoners were received and supervised and that there are now in the various prison camps and prisons 5,798 prisoners.

In order to supply food for these convicts five prison farms are operating. These farms are located at Atmore, Wetumpka, Spigener, Kilby and Prison Number Four.

About 1500 of these convicts are being used by the Highway Department in the construction and maintenance of roads. Road camps are maintained at Scottsboro, Hackleburg, Livick, Chelsea, Cropwell, Cleveland, Tuskegee, Wetumpka, Nantahala, Camden and Whistler. Some other small camps have been established since the beginning of the year.

The labor for convicts working on the roads is charged to the Highway Department at the rate of $25.00 per month per convict.

Space will not permit a detailed statement of what the convicts are doing. That will be more fully covered in another article.

BEST WOODS NAMED FOR MAKING FEED TROUGHS

Auburn, Ala.—Cypress, redwood, chestnut, and white oak are some of the best woods for use in making feed troughs, reports the Forest Products Laboratory, U. S. Forest Service, to Lyle Brown, forester of the Alabama Extension Service. Southern yellow pine will also stand rough treatment where the tendency to rot or decay is not too great.

No. 1 and No. 2 boards are ordinarily recommended in the softwoods for large troughs but a softwood grade as low as No. 4 can sometimes be used to advantage in troughs where the lumber is cut to short lengths. When hardwoods are used, the No. 2 common grade is most popular for longer troughs, but if the material is being cut to short lengths, No. 3 hardwood grade can sometimes be used satisfactorily.

"It's not so easy to drive a bargain nowadays," observed the fellow who had just purchased a $15 used car.

D. W. WAITE ATTENDS MEET OF LOAN ASSOCIATION

Mr. D. W. Waite, Secretary-Treasurer of the Chilton County national farm loan association attended the North Alabama district meeting of Secretary-treasurers at Birmingham Alabama, Friday. Sixty-eight national farm loan associations were represented at this meeting, which was held for the purpose of discussing plans of operation, the handling of real estate, and collection problems, according to Mr. Waite. The meetings were also attended by some of the officers and employees of the Federal Land Bank of New Orleans.

"Much of value to the association was gained at these meetings," Mr. Waite said. "The national farm loan associations are farmer-owned and farmer operated institutions which assist the farmers to reach the money markets of the nation through Federal land bank loans. For several years during the depression it was necessary for the Federal Land Bank to carry on the service direct through field representatives. Two years ago, however, the Federal Land Bank undertook to decentralize this service and return the operation of this operative farm mortgage system to the states of the Fifth District, which are Alabama, Louisiana and Mississippi. The associations are now concerned with the improvement and expansion of their service, and the meetings which are being held throughout the three states are part of a development program."

The associations in South Alabama held their meeting Thursday, and two districts of Louisiana will meet this week. The Mississippi meetings were completed week before last.

Young Democrats Grow Older

A Far-Seeing Article For Young And Old

Tyre Taylor, Founder and Honor-
President Young Democratic Clubs

The original thought behind the organization of the Young Democratic Clubs of America was simple enough: Young people—of whom about 10,000,000 attain voting age each four years—have a real, personal stake in the country's future. It is estimated, for example, that there are 5,000,000 young men and young women in America today who have never been able to find employment.

The steps—forward or back—which democracy takes are usually a result of the pressures applied to the machinery of government.

Consequently—and especially since and opportunity are increasingly affected by the policies of government—the young people of America should be an active, purposeful and somewhat independent part in politics and public affairs. They should do this as a matter of enlightened self-interest as well as patriotism.

This means organization, education and actual participation in the processes of popular government.

The practical methods by which youth might make its voice effective in national affairs were likewise originally conceived in rather simple terms:

There should be a self-governing youth organization of separate units, comprising of local and state units, and drawing its individual members principally from the 25,000,000 or more voters—men and women—between the ages of 21 and 35.

It was felt that, as a practical matter, any such political youth movement, to be effective, would necessarily have to be inaugurated and carried forward within a party which might have control of the government. The minorities of minorities—no matter how resounding—are, after all, pretty feeble. Only the votes of a governing majority can give actual substance to desired reform and place desirable legislation on the statute books.

In 1932 the Democratic party was not only obviously destined to win; it was the major party whose principles and traditions were most nearly in line with the legitimate political aspirations of youth. Founded by a young idealist and social philosopher, Thomas Jefferson, it had stood consistently through the years for an intelligent liberalism in economics and government. It should be inherently receptive to the needs of the young; it was felt, to the sort of organization and movement we had in mind: A national American political youth organization in which enthusiasm and idealism should go hand-in-hand with a keen realism and the desire actually to get something worthwhile and constructive accomplished.

The original plan was for the Young Democratic Clubs of America to formulate a definite program of their own—representing the interests and welfare of all youth, regardless of affiliation—and seek to have this program, or as much of it as possible incorporated in the program and platform of the Democratic party. It was further conceived in this connection that we might hold our conventions in rotation years in the same city in which the regular party was holding its convention, thereby facilitating the presentation of the Young Democratic program to the platform committee of the Democratic party.

In other words, it was deemed entirely appropriate and logical that the organized youth of the Democratic party should help shape its policies. Indeed, why not? A majority of members and voters of both parties are young people. They are necessarily interested in what goes into the making of the organization—as now—the most effective method by which youth can make an enduring contribution to good government is through education and actual participation in the processes of democracy. As therefore agreed that the most important service which this proposed organization could render would be to help its members keep informed on public issues and questions and to encourage them not only to vote, but actively to seek public office.

The foregoing brief description of the aims and methods may be said to present the Young Democratic movement as it was originally envisaged by perhaps a dozen young people scattered about over the country. In other words, this outline-summary represents the Young Democratic Clubs of America on paper. The difficulty came, of course, in actually getting the plan of the blue-print stage and in insulating what was, after all, no more than an idea into the tangible machinery of a national organization.

It was not until 1932 that the plan was actually put into effect. Details of the effort—extending from January, 1930, to March, 1932—went to getting the Young Democratic Clubs of America started. It must be said that by January, 1932, the Democratic National Committee, in Washington, had adopted a plan approving the idea in principle and prior to that—in August, Honorable Jouett Shouse had written a letter to the party leaders stating that it would be a good idea to encourage increased activity on the part of the younger members of the party. The Democratic National Committee strictly adhered to the correct position, however, that the Young Democrats, if they wished to form a national organization, should do so on their own initiative, and that the Committee could properly do no more than welcome such an organization and cooperate with it after it was formed. The National Committee made no financial contribution to the Young Democrats until April, 1932.

The organization has had a remarkable growth in membership—the total now numbering well over 3,000,000. It has also been reasonably successful in its effort to bring about a larger participation on the part of young people in politics and public affairs. Thousands of Young Democrats now hold responsible public position in every locality of the United States, and one of them—Ted Wingo—has taken a leading part in the establishment of the National Institution of Public Affairs. Those familiar with the present activities and plans of the organization (as, for example, assisting the Democratic National Committee in holding the Jackson Day Dinners this year) will perhaps concede that, from the standpoint of the Democratic party, the younger group has rendered useful service. We have not carried out everything called for in the original organization blue-print, but some modifications of the plan to meet unforeseen developments and difficulties were doubtless to have been expected. In general, we have succeeded in working in harmony with the senior group, and have conscientiously sought to preserve an accurate perspective on the position of the Young Democratic Clubs of America in the general party organization set-up. We have tried especially hard not to violate the late Dwight Morrow's famous "Rule Number 6"—which was "Don't take yourself too seriously." In other words—believing strongly in responsible party government and in the program and leadership of the Democratic party—the Young Democrats have willingly and even proudly entered upon their political and party apprenticeship.

On the other hand—and I am how of course speaking only for myself—I believe the Young Democrats have a responsibility to the party to the country, and to themselves which cannot be adequately discharged unless we redefine our objectives in terms of the real needs and aspirations of youth, and redirect our efforts into other than purely routine channels. As individuals and as an organization we are growing older. However, we are faced by problems which do not at all fit the old patterns of partisanship.

For one thing, I do not believe that we can continue indefinitely to interest modern young people in enlisting merely as party hacks and political errand boys. A growing number of this age group are wholly indifferent to partisanship as such, and the reason they don't give a hoot about the difference between a Democrat and a Republican is because they feel that no difference exists, which really makes sense, this is another way of saying that modern youth is more realistic than its predecessors and tends to look guidance to the substance of a program rather than the label of a party.

I think the Young Democratic Clubs of America should recognize this new trend and condition and boldly assume leadership of the millions of bewildered and discouraged young people who are otherwise yet become the flaming nucleus of a Fascist movement. They should adopt a program based upon the guiding principle, well stated by President Roosevelt, that "America cannot for long be a good place for any of us to live in unless it is a reasonable good place for all of us to live in." And there are some things on which I think we should work in the closest kind of cooperation with the Young Republicans. For example, helping to keep America out of war. After all, this is our country, and getting it straightened out—re-opening opportunity in the old sense—is the task of intelligent cooperation and mutual good will, not blind, destructive partisanship.

We are fortunate in our leaders. Mr. Frank Wickham and Lou Galleher are not only representative of the highest type of American youth; they are exceptionally able. Given half a chance, they can make this organization the recognized champion and mouthpiece of a clear majority of the young people of this country. Therefore, I say let's get our minds off our own immediate personal political advancement and set for our organization some new goals about which more of us can become really excited. After all, should not "Young Democrat" and "Young American" mean about the same thing?

These Three Couples Are Honored With "Master Farmer" Degree

THREE MASTER FARMERS NAMED

Alabama's three new Master Farmers, and their wives. Left above, are Mr. and Mrs. Paul Kaiser, Elberta; right, Mr. and Mrs. T. A. Morton, Newton; and, lower, Mr. and Mrs. G. Henry Caperton, Stevenson.

Alabamians Named Master Farmers

Auburn, Ala.—Three Alabama farmers and their wives—Mr. and Mrs. G. Henry Caperton, Stevenson, Jackson County; Mr. and Mrs. T. A. Morton, Newton, Dale County; and Mr. and Mrs. Paul Kaiser, Elberta, R. 1, Baldwin County—were this week named "Master Farmers" by Alabama Extension Service and Progressive Farmer-Ruralist.

The new master farmers carry out a well rounded crop, livestock, and live-at-home program. They also take a leading part in bettering their communities and in improving their own homes.

Mr. Morton owns and operates 500 acres of land; Mr. Kaiser, 480 acres; and Mr. Caperton, 1,500 acres. Mr. Morton has lived on his present farm all his life; Mr. Kaiser on his farm for 29 years; and Mr. Caperton on his for 30 years.

Mr. Kaiser received most of his income from Irish potatoes, sweet potatoes, beef cattle, hogs, green corn, and poultry, while Mr. Morton's income is derived principally from cotton and cotton seed, beef cattle, hogs, and peanuts. Mr. Caperton gets his income from cotton and cotton seed, beef cattle, hogs, corn, and lespedeza hay and seed.

The farmers were nominated for the master farmer honors by T. S. Morrow, county agent of Jackson County; W. D. Thomson, county agent of Dale County; and E. E. Hale, county agent of Baldwin County. They were finally scored and selected by representatives of the State Extension Service and of the Progressive Farmer-Ruralist.

Each farmer was awarded a gold medal and certificate at a special "Master Farmer" program in Auburn, Wednesday night, by P. O. Davis, Auburn, and Dr. Tait Butler, Memphis. About 700 farmers and farm women from throughout the State attended the meeting.

FARMERS URGED GROW LEGUMES THIS WINTER

Experiments show that one of the most economical ways for farmers to increase their corn and cotton yields is to plant winter legumes in September and October and let them grow during the winter months.

"This being true we are urging farmers to grow more vetch, Austrian winter peas and crimson clover this fall than ever before says P. O. Davis, director, Alabama Extension Service.

In an 11-year experiment the average annual production of corn following winter legumes has been 342 bushels per acre compared with only 77 bushels with no legumes, reports Dean M. J. Funchess, director of the Alabama Experiment Station, in emphasizing the importance of farmers growing more legumes.

For the same period the average production of cotton has been 1433 pounds of seed cotton following legumes compared with 432 pounds on adjoining plots without legumes.

In a 2-year rotation on the Sand Mountain and Tennessee Valley Substations the turning under of vetch ahead of corn has increased the corn yield 23.7 bushels per acre. It also increased the seed cotton yield the following year 248 pounds, reports Dr. J. W. Tidmore, head of the department of agronomy and soil.

Winter legumes—Austrian winter peas, hairy vetch, and crimson clover—should be planted the last half of September and the first half of October. However, now is a good time for farmers to make arrangements for their planting seed, inoculation and fertilizer.

Four months ago a forgetful passenger left an old suitcase on a Northern Indiana bus. Recently it was opened and was found to contain $2,000.

And Funnier Too

"Can you tell me who the man is who has written more nonsense in recent years than anyone else?"

"Oh, I suppose he's some newspaper columnist."

"No, he's the shorthand reporter for the Legislature."

During the first half of the coming hog marketing season, beginning October 1 the number of hogs slaughtered will be smaller than in the corresponding period of 1936-37, and hog prices next fall and winter probably will average as high or probably higher than in the fall of 1936-37, reports the Bureau of Agricultural Economics.

L & N Plans Novel Broadcast From A Moving Train; Second Program Today

A seasonal broadcast from a moving train from Cincinnati, Ohio, to New Orleans, La., with announcers, musicians, singers and other radio artists on the program, will be made over six radio stations in cooperation with the Louisville & Nashville Railroad on August 14 and 15. The program is being offered in commemoration of the 4th anniversary of the daily "Pan-American" broadcast.

One of the railroad's air-conditioned dining cars is being converted into a traveling studio for the event. Radio station WSM, Nashville, Tenn., is installing a short-wave transmitter on car which is known as Short Wave Station WBPA. The transmitter will be used during the entire trip.

Widespread interest is expected in the unique broadcast. WSM states the Federal Communication Commission advised it, when application was made for a permit for the installation of the special equipment, that no request for such a broadcast had ever before been made.

The broadcast will begin as The Pan-American, the road's ace passenger train, leaves Cincinnati Union Terminal at 10:00 a. m. (EST) Saturday, August 14. Station WCKY (1490 KC) will pick up the program on a short-wave receiver and broadcast it for 15 minutes. Talent from WCKY, Covington, Ky., will put on this program.

As the train approaches Louisville, Ky., WHAS (820 KC), located there, will similarly broadcast a 30-minute program commencing at 11:30 a. m. (CST). The rolling studio will be off the air then until 5:00 p. m. (CST) when WSM (650 KC) will pick it up and broadcast until 5:30 as the train speeds southward from Nashville, past that station's 787-foot tower 12 miles south of that city. An interview with the engineer in the locomotive cab will be a feature of this program.

At 9:00 p. m. (CST) WSGN (1310 KC), Birmingham, will take the torch and carry it as the train speeds out of that city, the program from WSGN ending at 9:15. Farther down the line, some miles north of Montgomery, Ala., WSFA (1410 KC), Montgomery, will continue the program, broadcasting from 11:00 to 11:30 p. m. (CST).

After the WSFA broadcast, the Pan-American "studio" will be silent until the following morning (Sunday, August 15) at 7:30 (CST), when WWL (850 KC) at New Orleans will send out a program from the train for 25 minutes before the train reaches the L & N station there. After the train arrives at New Orleans, its final destination, WWL will continue its broadcast, interviewing passengers and broadcasting a short talk by city officials of New Orleans.

Each of the six radio stations participating in the broadcast will have crack announcers and talent aboard the train. In addition, the L & N orchestra composed of employees of the road, will be on hand to furnish some of the music.

Jack Harris, announcer for WSM, will ride the traveling studio and be in general charge of the broadcasts throughout the trip. Two of Chief Engineer Jack DeWitt's assistants from WSM will look after the special short wave broadcasting transmitter on the car. Radio engineers from each of the stations participating will be in charge of Short Wave Station WBPA during the time their broadcasts are on the air.

The actual sound of The Pan-American is heard at 5:08 p. m., every week day over Station WSM as the engineer of the train whistles a greeting to thousands of radio and railroad fans.

ALABAMA FARM NEWS

The number of young chickens in farm flocks on July 1 this year was the smallest for that date in 11 years. Indications are that farmers will enjoy a good demand for their products during the next few months, reports the Bureau of Agricultural Economics.

Artificial manure may be produced on most Alabama farms by utilizing waste, such as straw, leaves, cotton stalks, low-grade hay, and weeds, reports D. G. Sturkie, agronomist of the Alabama Experiment Station.

Indications point to a more valuable situation for dairy producers in 1937-38 than in the past year.

Crimson clover seed are more plentiful, are moving faster, and are selling at lower prices this year than they did last year. At the same time, white clover seed production is smaller and grass seed production much larger.

Slaughter supplies of sheep and lambs probably will continue larger than a year earlier, until at least September.

Merchants Find New Credit Plan Aids Business

Growing enthusiasm is being evidenced by the laity as well as the business and professional men in the Retail Credit Service newly organized in this territory by the Merchants Mercantile Company of Washington, D.C.

The increasing demands for credit that prosperity brings in its wake makes it more necessary than ever that an efficient means of eliminating losses due to bad credit risks should be an integral part of every trade territory. The necessity of credit for the proper functioning of commerce is an accepted fact. Anything that assists in making credit more flexible and accessible is a direct asset to the district that it serves.

For these reasons the people of Chilton County are availing themselves of a time tried system that has proven its efficiency in every test.

Any credit service to be as effective as it should be must be simple and require of the clients a minimum of effort to secure the full benefits it supplies. Such is the service of the Merchants Mercantile Company.

The guide that is placed in the office of each member of this organization gives the actual ledger experience of all the business and professional men with those people who make up the losses in extending credit. It is submitted to the subscribers as a report of the secretary of the organization as to those people who have had this service as delinquents and the results are given dollar for dollar.

A NEW radio range system has been developed by United Air Lines to provide airplane pilots with positive identification of airport location. A local radio beam carrying identifying code signals intercepts the regular radio beam about 30 miles from the airport. The pilot follows the local beam until he is directly over the landing field. Voice transmission is not interfered with by the local beam.

In preparation for the proposed trans-Atlantic air service, a new radio station is being built at Rynanna, a seaplane base on the west coast of Ireland. The new station will be used to flash weather reports to the planes flying the route.

Pilots on Lake Michigan are aided in bringing their ships into the harbor at Ludington, Michigan, by checking the interval between the reception of a radio signal broadcast from the Ludington lighthouse, and the sound of the foghorn sounded simultaneously at the lighthouse. Sound travels at a constant speed of approximately a fifth of a mile a second. The pilot knows that if he hears the foghorn 10 seconds after the radio signal, he is two miles from the harbor.

Wooden control towers, equipped with telephones and short-wave radios, are being used to direct traffic on California highways. Providing a wide range of view and quick communication with patrol cars and police centers, the towers are proving highly effective in preventing the snarling of traffic on congested main routes.

Parasites, Germs and Worms Extract Enormous Farm Toll

Two Billion --- DOLLARS

American Farmers

A better place for this two billion dollars is in the farmer's pocketbook. Following a farm-tested sanitation program will put it there.

Two billion dollars wasted every year! That's the annual toll taken in the United States by worms, germs and parasites—more than is spent for automobiles. Unfortunately as it is the feeding of worms and parasites is fast becoming one of the nation's major industries.

"We've got to start cleaning up," says Grafton Lathrop, head of the Sanitation Department of Purina Mills. "A great part of the two billion dollar loss could be prevented if farmers would only perform the most basic sanitative precautions. A big percentage of the money that goes to bugs might just as well find its way into the farmer's pocketbook. Following a farm-tested program of sanitation brings more profits. Animals and fowls naturally do better in clean surroundings."

Sanitation Is Insurance
"Start with good stock. Provide good surroundings. Feed well. And keep everything sanitary. These are the four legs of profitable livestock and poultry production," the Purina sanitation expert points out. "The fourth leg is the farmer's insurance on his investment. A man can't get insurance after his house is burned. Neither can sanitation be effective after chicks and livestock are dead."

"That's why a sanitation program must be started early—before there is a chance to lose. Truly that old adage: an ounce of prevention is worth a pound of cure. Never cause nearer hitting the mark than it does when referring to sanitation."

"Every poultryman knows how delicate baby chicks are. It doesn't take many germs to destroy their little bodies. Many baby chick losses can be directly traced to disease and parasites. An ounce of prevention would have saved them. Every time a chick dies the owner loses. He loses not only the immediate value of the bird, and the feed that has gone into it, but also the potential value of the bird as a future money maker."

Scrub All Equipment
"Before chicks arrive, the brooder house and all equipment should be thoroughly scrubbed and cleaned." Lathrop advises. "To disinfect the walls, floors and ceilings, a solution of one-fourth pint of cre-sol-fec to every gallon of scrub water is an effective germ and parasite killer. Disease germs are rapidly destroyed through drinking fountains and troughs. Cough, bronchitis and broader pneumonia pass quickly from chick to chick so that every precaution must be taken. For general disinfecting, use Chlorox (one tablespoonful to each three gallons of water) makes a strong killing solution for disinfecting feed and drinking troughs. As a further precaution, one-half tablespoonful of Chlorox should be added to every gallon of drinking water. This accurate strength solution that can be depended upon to do the job. Two strong solutions will cut down the chicks' consumption of water, slow up growth. If the solution is weak it doesn't kill germs."

Profits From Cleanliness
"Health and condition are important factors in the production of pork, beef, milk, and wool. A producing these products means protection against the spread of disease parasites. Half-way measures won't do the job. It's a matter of clean up and disinfect." Lathrop says. "For general disinfecting, use Chlorox (one tablespoonful to each three gallons of water) makes a strong solution of cre-sol-fec and water. If disease is present, the strength of the solution should be increased. A more thorough cleaning job will cut down the chicks' consumption of water, slow up growth. If the solution is weak it doesn't kill germs."

"In raising livestock and poultry you are dealing with life—and life at its best is uncertain." Lathrop emphasizes. "The health of animals and fowls must be protected if profitable production is expected. Cre-sol-fec five times as strong as carbolic acid, and has the added advantage of being soapy, so that it does a better job of cutting through the dirt. Cre-sol-fec mixes readily with hot or cold water, stays mixed, and retains its strength. It is one of the government approved disinfectants for use in stock raising and on the premises for the eradication of bovine tuberculosis, cholera and other diseases."

they have neglected or ignored will be listed.

Each overdue account is listed and the amount of the account is placed opposite the person's name who owes the account. Should John Doe owe four accounts his name will appear in the guide four times and the amount of each of the four accounts will be placed opposite his name. The names are arranged alphabetically. This does not necessitate any creditor passing judgement on a debtor. The evidence is there and the representatives of the company have no choice when the accounts are audited. They are either overdue or they are not.

A Big Difference
"What is the difference between electricity and lightning," asked teacher. After a moment's pause the bright boy of the class answered, "You don't have to pay for lightning."

Vegetables To Plant During This Month

Ala. — By planting various vegetables during August, Alabama gardeners can have good fall and winter crops.

Potatoes, collards, cabbage, carrots, tomatoes, beans, lima beans, corn, peas, kale mustard, and pumpkins are some of the vegetables that may be started this month," says L. M. Ware of the Alabama Experiment Station.

For suggestions for farmers to observe in planting summer vegetables select if possible a moist but well-drained productive bottom land.

The land must be free of weeds, grass, however, deep preparation be avoided if undue drying of the soil is to be escaped. Therefore, plants should be done with the least possible disturbing of the soil if the land is full of weeds.

Double quantities of most seed should be planted in summer as the seed should be planted deep. The soil should be firmly packed about the seed and little loose soil left above the packed soil to prevent excessive loss of moisture and drying.

Seed planted during summer should usually be planted on beds or in shallow furrows rather than on high beds.

A very good fertilizer for most vegetables consists of 800 pounds per acre of a 6-8-4 grade supplemented with a 200-pound side application of urea. Fertilizers should be put in a row under the seed and well mixed with the soil. Seeds should never be in direct contact with fertilizers.

MISS SHEPHERD FINDS JAPAN IS A COUNTRY OF BEAUTY AND INTEREST

Clanton Young Lady Sends Word Picture Of World Tour To Home Folks

Continuing on her tour around the world, Miss Ruth Shepherd, charming daughter of Mrs. J. F. Shepherd, of Clanton, finds herself in Japan, a country of colorful beauty and quaint customs. In the following article, exclusive to The News, Miss Shepherd paints a word picture of her travels:

(By Ruth Shepherd)

Our first glimpse of Japan was in the seaport town of Yokohama. This city was not of much interest to us from an artistic or historic point of view. We got the feel of the Oriental atmosphere immediately however. There were streets and streets of little shops with big paper Japanese signs, thousands of bicycles, cars driving on the left, and nothing but Japanese in sight. I was amazed at seeing almost no Americans or Europeans on the streets the whole time we were in Japan.

Almost all of the women wore native costumes; kimonos, wooden sandals, and no covering over their elaborate hairdresses. The way the women fix their hair denotes whether they are young girls, brides, mothers of families, etc. About half the men were in European clothes, however. It was amusing to see how many of the rest of them, dressed in native costume otherwise, had on European straw hats.

Driving through the country, the most noticeable thing was the rice fields. They were divided off into small squares and oblongs and were standing several inches in water. The rice had been planted in corners of the little fields of months ago and had been transplanted to the rest of the fields in this, the rainy season. The farmers' houses, with sod roofs and grass growing on them, were interesting too.

Japan is a very full country. In the cities every inch is taken up with buildings. Every bit of the country side is covered either with small fields or thickly growing small trees. A sort of medium-dark green is the color that best describes Japan at this time of year. And everything is very beautiful and very clean.

We saw so much. In Japan in the way of temples and shrines and gardens that it would take far too many pages to describe them, so I'm afraid that I shall be able to mention a few of the more important ones.

Between Yokohama and Tokyo, we visited Kamakura. This is the site of the second largest Buddha in Japan, the Daibutsu. Four temples that have surrounded this great bronze image have been washed away by tidal waves, but it still stands there 12.89m. in height. It is a Buddha of Meditation. It has on its head the typical two small circles: the top for wisdom and the one on the forehead for mercy. At the gate approaching the image is a very interesting inscription "Stranger who-soever thou art and whatever by thy creed, when thou enterest this sanctuary, remember thou treadest on ground hallowed by the wisdom of ages. This is the temple of Buddha and of the Eternal and should therefore be entered with reverence."

After Kamakura, we took a train for Tokyo and reached the Imperial Hotel in time for lunch. I can say I mention here that I've never seen anything that compares with the hotels in Japan.

Our guide told us that Tokyo was the third largest city in the world. There seems to be some discussion on that point, but it is at least in the first five. The city itself reminded me of nothing so much as Washington, D. C., with its broad streets and many white government buildings.

As no one is permitted inside, we saw only the moats and wall and Japanese roof of the Imperial Palace. We couldn't even find postcards of it. One of the younger members of the Royal Family was in the hotel for lunch one day, however.

In the city of Tokyo we also saw the Shinto Shrine built in honor of Emperor Meiji, the most famous Japanese Emperor under whom the country became united and progressive. The gardens in this shrine are some of the most famous in Japan. The Art Gallery dedicated to him is very lovely, too. It has just recently been completed and is greatly prized by the Japanese. Every bit of the material and workmanship is native.

Next we saw Baron Iwasaki's garden, which became state property just two years ago. It is probably the most typical garden in Japan; an abundance of closely clipped grass and hedges, small trees, lakes, and bridges to small islands.

Walking down Theatre Street in Tokyo was great fun. I was surprised to see that about half of the pictures advertised were American ones. But I was more surprised to realize that we had a larger audience than the theatres. Crowds of people followed us down the street, and evidently we were even a little more curious sight to them than they were to us.

From Tokyo, we caught the train to Nikko. We were promised great sights there.

None of us were in the least disappointed in Nikko. This city is rightly named "the magnificent." It is the most beautiful place in Japan, up in the mountains with its great cryptomeria trees (resembling enormous cedars). There is an avenue of these trees (formed by twenty-five miles long, now fifteen) leading to Nikko. They were presented over three hundred years and at the time the gift was not appreciated.

Here we saw the Sacred Red Lacquer bridge, over which no one has ever been allowed to pass except the Emperor's processions. The honor of crossing over it has been offered to only one man, Grant, and he refused.

The most important thing in Nikko is Toshogu Shrine, built over three hundred years ago in honor of the founder of the great Tokugawa shogunate (1600-1868). It took 15,000 men 12 years to build it at a cost of 20,000,000 yen (Japanese dollars). It is particularly interesting because it is a combination of Buddhism (the religion of the Tokugawa Shogun) and Shintoism (National Japanese religion). It is the most exquisite thing of its sort in Japan, lavishly with bright Oriental lacquer and gold and wood carving.

We made a trip to Miyunoshita particularly to see the famous Mt. Fujiyama. We were fortunate in seeing at least a goodly portion of it; they say that eighty per cent of the people don't get to see it in this season. We drove far up in the mountains and the mist waited for an hour and a half for the clouds to clear off of Mt. Fuji across the valley. Our wait was rewarded, however; the sunlight on its snow-capped peak is truly a lovely sight.

In Kyoto we went through Nijo castle, the only Imperial Palace visitors even with special permission are allowed inside. In this ancient palace we saw reception halls and audience halls and old living quarters. There were very beautiful woodcarvings on the walls and paintings, and the ceilings with no furniture in the rooms in typical Japanese style. The floors were completely covered with rice straw mats, laid over an inch and a half of rice.

In this city also we saw the famous Hangwanji Temple with its image of the Amida Buddha, the Buddha of Enlightenment. The temple was originally built 500 years ago but was destroyed by fire in 1857. When rebuilding began, there were no ropes available strong enough to lift the enormous beams, so thousands of women sacrificed their hair to make ropes (the greatest sacrifice a Japanese woman of that time could make). We saw these hair ropes; the largest is fifteen feet and one-half inch around, 36 feet long, and weighs over a ton.

Another of the most interesting temples in Kyoto is Shanju Sangendo. The temple is dedicated to Kwannon, the Goddess of Mercy, and in it are 100 statues of her, each with many hands and faces, denoting an indefinite number of thousands of statues.

In Nara the most important places we visited were Kadogu Shrine, with its 3000 lanterns, and Todaiji Temple. The latter holds the world's largest Buddha, 53 feet high and of bronze. This was the most pleasing image of Buddha that I saw. The serenity of the image was extremely impressive.

In addition to all the sights we saw we had a awfully good time in Japan, too. Any number of amusing things happened to us.

There was the time, for instance, that Mandy got stuck, literally, going after good luck in one of the temples in Nara. At the base of one of the columns there was a hole a foot wide and about two feet high. If you could be pulled through this hole, it was supposed to bring you an enormous amount of luck. Mandy finally got her luck, but we were doubtful for a few minutes.

Then there was the time that we went to an Oriental night club in Tokyo and found that one of the orchestras was "The American Jazz Band"—Harlem Negroes. At eleven o'clock sharply the leader stepped to the microphone and gave us "Moon River."

Another time, I had a bit of a struggle with one of the sacred deer in Nara (there are about 900 in the town). These deer are very tame and the usual thing is to feed them rice cakes from your hand. Mine was not to be contented with cakes, however. He grabbed my notebook and ate nine pages of it before I could chase him down. I'd got much more, some of it I see would probably not have reached you. Then, too, I've been wondering how that sacred deer's health is!

Representatives And Motor Route Carriers Of The Birmingham News Are Entertained

A business meeting culminating in a brilliant banquet was the entertainment afforded motor route carriers and representatives of The Birmingham News in Clanton Tuesday at The Thomson Hotel.

The banquet program included several addresses, among which Mayor C. Fenn Jones made a welcome address and stressed the important part daily newspapers are playing in the lives of the residents of rural communities in this county. Mayor Jones stated he was glad to learn that more and more people of rural Chilton County are reading the daily newspapers.

Hon. Luther E. Little, county superintendent of education, spoke of the educational advantages of the newspaper and brought out many interesting facts in behalf of the newspaper and what it means to the residents of rural communities, as well as the business man.

The advantages of newspaper circulation service for rural districts was most intelligently discussed by J. A. Hayes, of Clanton, and one of the first motor route carriers in this section for The Birmingham News.

Speaking on the relationship of weekly newspapers and daily newspapers, Billy Smith, editor and publisher of the Chilton County News, brought out that weekly newspapers, as a whole, no longer consider daily newspapers as competitors, even though they are widely circulated in the territory covered by the weekly press. "Instead of finding them competitors, we have found the daily newspaper to be of advantage to us in their editorial, advertising and news columns. This get-together of representatives of The Birmingham News was the first ever to be held in Clanton. Managers of the seven large motor routes through the rural sections of the county were present with local agents.

The "Dumb Drum" Quartette, stars of radio Station WSGN, of Birmingham were on hand and rendered several vocal selections to intersperse the program.

Other speakers on the program included Don R. Davis, head of the Circulation Department of The Birmingham News, Charles H. French, circulation manager and John Hargrove, who is in charge of rural circulation in this section.

Those attending this affair were Mayor C. Fenn Jones, Luther E. Little, Billy Smith, of Clanton, E. M. McCullough, John G. Hargrove, C. H. French, Don R. Davis, Mr. and Mrs. F. R. McBee, Mr. and Mrs. M. J. Adams.

Mr. and Mrs. C. M. Acton, Mr. and Mrs. Grover Bice, Mr. and Mrs. M. C. Sutley, T. C. Williams, Mr. and Mrs. W. L. Morse, Mrs. W. L. Williams and W. G. Massengale. All of these are employees of The Birmingham News in this county, with their guests.

ELEVEN ARRESTS MADE IN COUNTY DURING THE WEEK

Records at the office of Sheriff Hardy this week show that eleven arrests were made during the past week. These include one for public drunkenness, 3 for grand larceny, 3 for driving while intoxicated, 1 for rape, 1 for assault with intent to murder, 1 for non-support and 1 for assault and battery.

SCHOOL TERMS

Interest in this connection was also made by Supt. Little, who stated that the schools of this county would open with assurance of a full seven months term for elementary schools and nine months term for high schools. This statement will be received with a great deal of satisfaction throughout the county.

Mr. Little also stated that the County Board of Education had inaugurated a definite program for the improvement of transportation of children to and from schools. The Board of Education has been studying this matter for sometime and have now made definite plans for this progressive step of safety for the school children of Chilton County.

Commissioner's Court stand as certified evidence of the fact:

Labor: May 1 to 31, 1937;
Supervision and Inspection $441.50
Transportation Expense, Supr. 88.00
Supervisor's Clerk 75.00
Skilled Labor, 110 days 275.00
Common Labor, 366 1/2 days 457.95
Total for the month $1,337.45
Labor: June 1 to 30, 1937;
Supervision and Inspection $441.50
Trans. Expense, Supr. 76.60
Supervisor's Clerk 75.00
Skilled Labor—107 days— 267.50
Common Labor—375 days— 469.10
Total for the month $1,329.70
Grand Total $2,667.15

From this it is evident that $883 was spent for actual inspection and supervision; $164.60 for transportation expense of the Supervisor only; $150 for clerical aid, making a total of $1,197.60. Adding in all skilled labor, which in this case are men working with tools the same as common labor though they are called foremen or "over-seers" they work under the direction of the district foremen or supervisors, in the sum of $542.50, gives a grand total of $1,740.10, a sum considerably less than the amount shown by the Commissioners Court. And the above is all that can legally be charged to the work on the public roads and bridges by the Road Department over that period because no other work of this nature was performed under authority of the Road Supervisor.

Judge Smith has challenged the people of Chilton County to see and examine the records for themselves; implying that his figures are true and correct and that the figures of the Road Supervisor are false. As an inducement for the people to accept his challenge and "see the records for themselves" the Road Supervisor will pay to any person, firm or corporation the sum of $100 in cash, who can show that his figures are false as charged by the Judge. See the claims filed by the Road Department; they are stamped with the approval of the Road Supervisor and carbon copies of all are on file in his office.

Since the beginning of this office of the Road Department, Judge Smith, in the name of his Court has done everything in his power to hinder and obstruct the progress of the organization. At the beginning he confined himself to little petty slurs and adverse criticisms mostly directed at the impeachment of the integrity of the Supervisor; later by open antagonism and slurring remarks about the Supervisor; again by three separate attempts to seek the removal of the Supervisor through impeachment proceedings and action by the Circuit Court. Failing in all this to force the Supervisor to resign or have him thrown out on fictitious charges promulgated by Judge Smith through malice and a malicious desire to injure, this same Judge of Probate, in the name of the Commissioners Court, wantonly attempted to cripple the road organization by the discharge of all supervisory employees. Again, failing to cause a suspension or shut down of the road work by this means, the Supervisor's clerk was discharged in a further and malicious attempt to cripple the organization that they would be unable to properly perform. The wages of these men are still withheld from payment by Judge Smith and his Court on the ground that they are "unnecessary employees."

The same body that name these men "unnecessary employees" and refuse to allow them pay for wages earned in service of Chilton County, are fully agreed that it is very necessary that their Clerk be paid out of County funds for doing work which the County is also paying Judge Smith to perform according to testimony given in a recent hearing before Judge Wilson in the suit against the Supervisor filed by this same Judge and is Court. Yet, the road workers must not have pay for serving the people on the roads.

Judge Smith and his Court say "we have no desire to mislead the people," that they "should have a voice when it comes to electing officials who have authority to spend their money." The Road Supervisor has no authority to spend your money, if he did he most certainly would pay those wages now held up by the so honorable gentlemen. The Commissioner's Court is the only authority in power who has the right to spend the County's money.

Judge Smith is constantly repeating "we are trying to save the people's money." Alright, Judge Smith! How about the two tractors bought last March, from J. D. Pittman Tractor Company? Was it saving "the people's money?" when you deliberately donated $1750.00 of their money when you could have gotten two other tractors just as good or even better had you bought according to the law of bidding and bought from the low bidder? How about the purchase of those new trucks? Had you bought according to the law on bidding and bought from the low bidder, who in this case was the Clanton Motor Co., you could have saved more than $300. How about paying $175 each for shovels when you could have gotten a more desirable shovel for $120? How about paying 16c per pound for grease when you could have gotten the same or better from the local dealers at a price of .06c and .07c. How about the seventy-two sets of grader blades bought last August, on which we donated close to $1400 above the price they could have been bought had they been properly advertised and bids taken?

"Saving the people's money!" How about it folks? Remember the Honorable Judge says: "the records are the best evidence." And I am offering $100.00 as an inducement for you to see "the records." Accept his challenge and look them over, and if I am wrong you win the $100.00.

And remember this! When it becomes necessary for Tom Arledge to lie or attempt to beguile the people in an effort to gain their confidence, friendship and support of his activities, then Tom Arledge does not want that kind of friendship, and the support that goes with such friendship would be to him absolutely worthless and undesirable. Tom Arledge is not playing politics or for political gain, he is trying to close the door for the purpose for which he was appointed to this office, and that is to build a better road system for the people of Chilton County. To date, he has had very little opportunity to do anything except devote almost two-thirds of his time in efforts to defend himself against an uncalled-for antagonism directed at his every effort by members of the honorable Commissioner's Court. He now has two cases in Circuit Court and is being forced to file other suits in an effort to secure payment of wages due members of the road workers. All of this is at his personal expense as well as the expense of seeing that those men under his office are sufficiently provided with funds that they may continue in their duties. It costs the Judge and his Court nothing to take matters into Court; they have the full resources of the County Treasurer to draw upon and they have the County paid Attorneys to carry-on the fight. Yet, they are "saving the people's money." We will carry-on.

T. J. ARLEDGE, Supervisor.

PASSING FOOTPRINTS

Of The Times

— Billy Smith

An Old Story
We read it in The Birmingham Post-Herald of Thursday, October 3rd, 1901—sixty-six years ago, it was printed. The story we read doesn't matter much as the fact that we have in possession this aged copy of a newspaper. It was brought to the News by our friend Mr. E. L. Klinger Furniture Company. Mr. Hosen found the paper in an old trunk at his home. While aged with age, the newspaper can be read and certainly shows a contrast with the newspaper of today with that of sixty-six years ago.

With a smile, our hat to Senator Hugo Black, of Alabama, for the farmer and his well-fighter for those things worth-while to bring the masses to the fore. The President made a splendid nomination in Senator Black for the Supreme Court of these United States. Back in the year 1861 Alabama was nominated to be a member of the Supreme Court. Indeed a singular honor for our state to have this occur again. Alabama will carry on for Senator Black.

Grace Returns
Those who are fortunate to be members of a Home Demonstration Club in Chilton County are also fortunate that they have in the person of Miss Grace, home demonstration agent, the qualities and training that make of such a movement an unending success. Unassuming, yet has brought much to the rural areas of our county. We are glad to see you back, Miss Grace.

To The Editor
We are indeed delighted that the people of the county are expressing their views on matters and taking advantage of the columns of the News. There has been several misstatements through their misreading of the correcting road signs. Possibly the loud volume of radios in the city limits.

Indianapolis
At this time those who must read cotton get to this point, we will almost half way to the National Convention of Young Democratic Clubs of America, in Indianapolis. In company of Dr. J. S. Gowan, prominent young dentist of Clanton, Mr. Elvin McCarty, outstanding statesman of Anniston, we feel we will be well cared for on our trip, and we are prepared to have a convention fully realize that down Alabama there is a fine county call.

Time
In the gins of the county will be a merry tune to the tune of bales of cotton, we are afraid. Less, when trucks and wagons rolling toward the gins, there is a feeling of satisfaction and on the faces of the farmers, merchants and bankers—and newspapermen.

Very Much
We extend our sincere thanks to those who cooperated with this paper last week in aiding us to get many photographs of citizens. We are now to be possessors of over one hundred photographs for use in The News from time to time.

Atlanta
I followed our friend Tom Little of the Ford place, into Atlanta other day—through his descriptive of Stope Mountain and other of interest he and Mrs. Little tied on a short trip there. Mr. Little is most impressed with Atlanta and rightly so.

THAT PURINA

Our friend, J. L. Ruffin, says that he doubts the ability of Purina feeds should drop by his store here and the proof for yourself.

Ruffin has some trial pullets at place that are only four months old yet there is one of these pullets that lays two eggs almost every day.

Home Makers

HUGO BLACK IS PLACED ON SUPREME COURT

Nomination Confirmed By Senate Later Tuesday
After Battle

Last week, President Roosevelt sent the name of Senator Hugo Black, of Alabama, to the Senate as nominee to fill a vacancy in the Supreme Court of the United States. Late Tuesday, the Senate confirmed the nomination by a vote of 63 to 16, and it will now be Justice Hugo Black, associate member of the Supreme Court.

The exact time he will surrender his senatorial toga had not been decided Tuesday night by Senator Black. He consulted Majority Leader Senator Barkley, Senator Bankhead and others in that regard immediately after the Senate confirmed his nomination to the Supreme Court.

With his resignation as senator submitted and his commission as a member of the Supreme Court received from the president who submitted his nomination last Thursday, the third Alabamian ever to receive Supreme Court appointment will present himself before a notary and subscribe to an oath to support the constitution, then registered with the appointment clerk of the Department of Justice. His $20,000 annual salary will begin the minute of that registration. But Mr. Black will not become a full-fledged associate justice of the U. S. Supreme Court until he takes a second oath of office when that court reconvenes the first Monday in October.

ATTEMPT MADE TO ENTER CLANTON CASH STORE MON

City Officers Plyer and Willis had the monotony of a quiet night interrupted Monday night, when they frightened away a man from the rear door of the Clanton Cash Store, while he was attempting to enter the place.

The officers found a saw blade and other tools the would-be intruder was using, and it is believed a car was taken from the used car lot of Clanton Motors by the burglar in which to make his get-away.

EDITORIAL

FOR THE PROTECTION OF ALL CONCERNED

Since last week's News was published with an editorial on the front page, captioned "The Roads of Chilton County Have Been A Political Football Long Enough," we have been literally swamped with thanks from those citizens of the county who are interested in the people of the county, their welfare and economy in county government. For this, The News is thankful.

However, last week's editorial apparently raised the ire of a few of our friends who fail to see "the handwriting on the wall," and who, through some reason or other, cannot understand that the people of Chilton County have had enough of the unnecessary controversy caused by uncalled-for attempts to "rule or ruin."

The News has no ax to grind with any man in this matter. We are simply of the definite opinion that the present operating arrangements of the Road Department of this county will not be satisfactory to the taxpayers of Chilton County if it continues. Not only that, but this present set-up is entirely too expensive and a change should be made.

The News believes in the age-old Democratic principle of allowing the people to have a voice in their government. Our present system, under the workings of the existing Road Department is not in keeping with these principles. That the present system which is now having much difficulty in operating, is too expensive to the county, not so much in dollars and cents, is very evident from records and from information gained "off the record" by The News.

Since last week's comment, The News has made strong attempts to prove the correctness of this opinion and bring about a solution to the controversy so that Chilton County will be able to derive from the expenditure of road and bridge funds, those results that the citizens of the county have a right to expect—and should receive.

We are still convinced that, for the protection of all concerned—and that includes the taxpayers of this county—the suggested change in the management of the Road Department should be made and made at the earliest possible moment.

We fully realize that the Road Department and the office of Road Supervisor of Chilton County is a law, written into the statutes. We realize it will remain a law until repealed by an Act of the Legislature of Alabama. The News grants that this plan may be working with splendid results in other counties. But, The News also realizes that for the plan to be a success in this county, a change must be made in the management of the office, and that when this change is made, all concerned will be benefitted.

The News, as stated last week, has carefully studied this matter. We know that somewhere there is unnecessary friction and that that friction can be eliminated. And, we are firm in our belief that, once the people are informed of this, they will instantly demand the change heretofore suggested by this newspaper.

As we have stated, we do not intend to condemn nor (Continued to Back Page)

"On June 4th, 1936, just one month and four days after Mr. Arledge assumed his duties as Road Supervisor of Chilton County, he published an article in the News to mislead and misrepresent the people against the Commissioners. He made the following erroneous statement in The Union-Banner, 'that we have a net savings of $49.00 on a day of operation under the new set-up on the supervision and equipment operator alone, and under the following plan of direct supervision of machine and equipment operations we can expect further savings and more efficient work done for every dollar spent!'"

"On June 11, 1936, I made the following statement through the local papers taken from the records in the Probate Office which showed instead of the net saving as per Mr. Arledge's statement that it cost the County $295.70 more per month than the last month cost under the old system on above two items. Mr. Arledge has since that date published several articles in the local papers in attempts to mislead the people, to which the Commissioners and I have answered in order that the people might be properly informed. I regret that Mr. Arledge has seen fit to slur me and your Commissioners and misrepresent the records of the Commissioners Court through the local papers."

Thoughts On Advertising

The business which can get along without advertising is the business which can use it most effectively. If the merchandise is right; if the service meets public approval; if the arrangement of the store is in accordance with modern practice; if the management is efficient and the prices are right, that business may be able to get along without advertising.

But it would do much better with an effective program of presenting its many advantages to the public.

Too many merchants believe that advertising can be used only when prices are slashed, and some special sales event is to be staged. They look upon advertising as an agency for moving merchandise that will not readily sell. In all this they are falling into a serious error.

Advertising should be employed to increase business in commodities that people want. "Advertise only the fast sellers," is the rule of one of the largest mercantile organizations in the country. Such advertising, it is argued, accomplishes two purposes. It gets results and increases the gross volume of business. It convinces the public that the store is up-to-date; first with the latest.

We do not argue that a store must advertise in order to stay in business. There are a few merchants who can get along without it. But it is our observation that the live-wire merchant who is familiar with modern merchandising technique finds advertising both natural and logical. He knows that he doesn't have to advertise, but he realizes that he can do more business and serve the public better if he uses this modern agency of keeping business in motion.

Islands Of Refuge

"Golf is the greatest game in the world," said an acquaintance the other day. "You might have a note falling due today. You might have no idea of how you are going to meet it. And you may be worrying yourself sick; but you can go out on a golf course much refreshed you may suddenly come upon a good idea which will help you through the emergency. That would never happen if you just sat in your office and worried."

Other friends of ours speak the same way about fishing, or hunting, or swimming, or sailing, or collecting stamps or studying birds. In other words many people find some good hobby essential as a nerve tonic. In these times of uncertainty and confusion every man needs what has been termed "an island of refuge is available for a frequent vacation, a place within your own consciousness where you can retire from everything that causes worry or distress."

Some of our readers will consider golf a silly game. Others will wonder how a man can sit in a boat and wait for a fish to bite. Still others will be mystified at how a man can call hunting any fun. But every person needs some such outside interest and hobby, and most of the healthy, optimistic, even tempered friends we have do enjoy some interest remote from business, a mental island of refuge. This island of refuge is available for a frequent vacation, a place within your own consciousness where you can retire from everything that causes worry or distress.

Some internationalists are interested in our role in foreign affairs. But Europeans are more interested in our bank roll.

It is our opinion if the people didn't have some great problem to worry about they would be quite miserable.

All that Japan wants now, it seems, is the rest of China, and a navy second to none in the world. These orientals do have ambition.

Recreation For the Many

A man who has followed sports for years charges that Americans are not a nation of athletes or gymnasts but rather a nation of bystanders. We assemble in vast audiences to watch two highly trained boxers or twenty-two proficient football players perform for our entertainment, but we do not play games ourselves to the extent that people in foreign nations do.

"Are his charges true here in Clanton?" Do a substantial majority of our citizens enjoy sports from the sidelines only, or are the majority active in minor sports themselves?

It is a rather significant question if we are to accept the belief that athletics and physical exercise build sturdy bodies and a wholesome outlook upon life.

When we observe that swimming pools and bathing beaches are gaining in popularity as the years go by; that amateur softball teams are more numerous than they were a few years ago; that golf courses seem to be doing a good business and that other forms of outdoor activity seem to appeal to more and more people each year we do not quite agree that Americans are a nation of spectators entirely. But it may be true that too many people are interested in watching sports and too few disposed to engage in them for the health and welfare of our citizens.

If this is the situation it would seem that each community should give thought and consideration to ways and means of encouraging sports and recreation for the many. Whether we like present trends or not, economic conditions are inevitably creating more and more leisure for the average citizen. There is no longer employment available for the young man during school vacations. There are shorter hours of work available for men in the prime of life. Forty hours a week in contrast to the old fifty and sixty hour work weeks give many of our citizens a considerable amount of new leisure. Effective use of that leisure in the years to come will mean much in determining the character of our citizens, both here in Clanton and in the nation as a whole.

Consideration of this subject is therefore something to which service clubs and civic organizations could devote some time and study. What can be done here in Clanton to provide wholesome and effective use of leisure time? We don't propose to supply the answer. It is merely one of the many civic problems to which we may well devote time and study.

We should never permit it to be said that ours is a community of spectators and bystanders.

Figures On Unemployment

Some enlightening figures came to our attention recently which present a new and significant view of this highly disturbing problem of relief and unemployment.

Today approximately 50 million people are gainfully employed. In 1928 and 1929 the years of the great boom, there were 49 million people on the payrolls of industry and business. When we make allowances for the increase in population we arrive at the figure of 52 million as full employment. So there are not really eight or ten million people unemployed, as many critics of the present order assert, but only two million. The other seven or eight million are those who never worked regularly and do not care to work now, but are quite willing to accept any bounty that a generous government has to offer.

It has also been pointed out that a depression actually creates unemployment which is far in excess of the number of people who desire work. The head of the family loses his job. That doesn't mean just one more person out of employment, but immediately creates two, three, or more job seekers. For each member of the family old enough to accept employment immediately goes in search of a job. When Dad gets his old job back again and the future is no longer uncertain, the other members of the family soon lose their desire for work and unemployment disappears rapidly.

As a civilized nation we should not begrudge relief for the unemployed. They must receive help. But now that the country is returning to normal, the time is approaching when we must study this entire problem carefully and decide on future policies. These are the times when relief costs should decline and the nation as a whole should begin to pay off old obligations and get the financial house in order.

The continuation of colossal relief expenditures when employment is almost at a normal stage is bad policy.

MORAL ECHOES

D. W. Haskew

History tells us of a ship that landed at a Chinese port and for days remained at dock taking on its cargo. At last the anchor was lifted and the ship went out to sea. Not many days out a host of Chinese pirates came out from their hiding places and took possession of the vessel. There was a great struggle on the vessel but the pirates mastered the captain and crew and the ship and its cargo became the property of the pirates. This is a picture of what takes place when we allow our souls to be taken possession of by evil. They hide away in the inner life until a suitable time and then they rush out to master us and to bring about our ruin. The voice of a ruffian within your inner life should frighten you. David carried pirates with him and at an unguarded moment they rushed out to take charge of David's heart and life. Beware of hiding pirates in your inner life.

Seamen who know the sea and the growth under water tell us that mussels and all forms of shell growth have what is known as a "growing edge." The edge of the shells grow and reach out slowly but surely toward the unknown. Not many years ago it was discovered by a physician that the delicate muscles of a human being can be taken from the body and that it, too, has what is known as a "growing edge." New tissues put out on the rim like the laying of brick in the construction of a wall, and thus these muscles grow out toward the unknown. This same thing is true of the soul. We never gather up the virtues of soul life in large numbers. The soul grows through a process of gradual accumulation. We add one virtue at a time and thus the unknown grows out and up toward the unknown. Deal gently, patiently, diligently with the "growing edge" of your inner life.

Rip Van Winkle tells us of a young man who had sworn off from ever touching another drop of whiskey. Weeks and months passed by and this brave young man fought a winning battle, but one day he said to himself: "I will drink just this one time and it will not count." That young man was never able to master himself again and died a drunkard. Many a young fellow says to himself: "I will tell this lie just this time and it will not count. I will violate the laws of virtue this one time and then give it up. I will take this sum of money just this time and never do so again," to find that he is never able to master himself and to shake off his sin committed. He goes on to die a liar, a libertine, a thief and all because he resumed the doing of things that he had sworn to give up. When you promise to give up a sin stick to it until death bells ring in your ears.

They grow watermelons at Graceville, Florida in large quantities. One day I was in the home of a farmer and he told me that his melons had quite a variety of flavors. He had several cut for his friends and invited us to taste around and see for ourselves what he was saying. We did so and no two melons had the same flavor. Some were mighty good, while others were disagreeable to the taste. Our host blamed the soil for the variety of flavors among his melons. Some of us suggested that maybe the difference in the food that he had fed his melons could have helped to produce the difference in flavor. He confessed that he had used several kinds of fertilizer. We all concluded that his melons were flavored from the soil, from the fertilizer and from the cultivation. When you see folks who are moral standards, it may be that their fineness can be traced back to the influences that were woven into their inner life when they were maturing. Home surroundings, home cultivation and home training have a lot to do with the flavor of human spirit. Parents, you can make or ruin your children by the flavor that you put into their personalities as they are maturing.

I saw two boys chasing a slowly moving truck. On overtaking the moving car one of the boys swung himself with one leap into the body of the truck and sat down to enjoy the ride. The other boy seemingly just had enough strength to overtake the car and seizing the rod on the end of the body he held one and ran along behind it. It took all of his strength to hold on and keep up. He did this until he ran his tongue out and had to drop back exhausted. We see two people joining the church at the same time. One of them has faith in God and leaps into the Divine embrace and is happy and contented in the fullness of God's salvation. The other one manages to lay his hand upon God's saving grace, but he is lacking in that power that enables him to swing himself into the everlasting arms and so he trots along after the plan of salvation for a few weeks and does nothing but hold on by main strength. He runs along after the church life for a short time and gets nothing out of it, and then he drops out. The last state of that man is worse than the first. If you want to get real joy out of traveling with God, get into His chariot and ride. Stop that holding on to God and running your tongue out after eternal life. Swing by faith into the old chariot and shout as you journey home.

County farm and home agents, assisted by state and local club leaders, Vistors days brought to the camps, and mothers who enjoyed seeing their boys and girls enter the spirit of and get the most out of training from their camps. F.H.A. Meeting Held At Montevallo

The Future Homemakers of Alabama held their third annual meeting at Alabama College August 6th and 7th. The attendance was nearly double of the preceding year and ten new girls were "among those in." Lera Dee Conway, Kelley Ruth Stockdale, Kate Kelley, Katherine Green received state degrees. Mrs. John L. Lowery (Muriel Ingworth), Annie Louise Spencer, Melba Patton were charter members. Lowery, state president, opened the meeting promptly at one-thirty o'clock with presentations of each chapter to the club.

This was followed by Dr. A. F. Harmon's welcome to the college. After "struggling" with the examinations of candidates for state degree, both the "candidates" and the club members were given an inspirational discussion of the "occupational opportunities in Home Projects and Hobbies," by Miss Katherine Forney. Some of Mrs. A. F. Harmon's lovely needlework was then examined by the club. Later in the afternoon the girls and home economic teachers present were honored with a delightful tea at the home of Mrs. Harmon.

There was barely time to rush 'home' and don slacks for supper at the college camp house. The evening's entertainment which consisted of games, stunts, dancing and eating, was greatly enjoyed by all. Kate Kelley won a "perfectly gorgeous" stick of peppermint for being the thirteenth to shake hands with a certain person. It is always hard to sleep away from home. The girls returned to the college too soon to be at all sleepy and had a grand time making noise and gossiping until exhaustion forced them to retire to the land of nod. Breakfast was served at 6:45 next morning. By some inexplicable miracle

Written by F. G. Stephens, Publisher of The Southern Democrat, Ontario

The State has five farms that it is operating with convicts. They are designated as Kilby Prison, Number Four Prison, Speigner Prison, Wetumpka Prison and Atmore Prison. These farms last year produced 1318 bales of cotton, 609 tons of cotton seed, 8 tons of broom corn, 155,000 bushels of corn, 10,600 bushels of cucumbers, 1,465 tons of hay, 35,000 pounds of lima beans, 25,373 bushels of oats, 2,000 pounds of onions, 5150 bushels of peas, 54,977 bushels of Irish potatoes, 19,200 pounds of sweet potatoes, 50,000 pounds of peanuts, 18,000 pounds of peaches, 10,545 bushels of peaches, 345,000 pounds of rice, 300 bushels of rye, 14,588 bushels of radishes, 58,500 gallons of syrup, and 100 tons of velvet beans. On these farms beef and hogs are being raised for prison consumption. Dairy herds are kept at Kilby and Atmore prisons to produce milk for the five main prisons, hotels, hospitals, and the tuberculosis hospital at Wetumpka. A poultry yard is maintained at Kilby which produces eggs for the prison hotels and hospitals as well as the tuberculosis hospital at Wetumpka.

These farms can hardly be expected to produce a profit when you figure the convict labor at $15.00 per person per month, even though many of the convicts are aged, crippled or diseased and otherwise incapacitated to do heavy work. However, the Kilby farm showed a net profit of $18,659.11. Speigner farm showed a net income of $44,231.45. Atmore farm showed a net expense of $11,018.28. Wetumpka farm was operated at a net loss of $9,194.48. Number Four Farm where most of the County Convicts are kept operated at a net loss of $40,312.8. The farms as a whole were operated at a net loss of $636.64. It will be noted that the heavy loss was at the farm where County Convicts were employed.

the girls were awake and dressed at that time. The first item of the second day program was an interesting and helpful talk by Dean T. H. Napier, who spoke on "The Part Home Economics Can Play in A Well Rounded Life." The Examination Committee reported that all candidates had "passed" and one could almost see the cloud of suspense rise and float away into the distance. Some interesting reports of chapter accomplishments were given by representatives. The initiation service, which was held in Palmer Hall soon after lunch was beautiful and impressive. Mrs. R. E. Cammack received an honorary membership in the club. Following the initiation ceremony a business meeting was held. The club insignia, designed by Miss Katherine Forney, was adopted by the members. New officers were elected for the coming year: Clara Belle Alexander, president; Lera Dee Conway, vice-president; Martha E. Edison, secretary and Miriam Harrison, treasurer. The meeting was closed with a tea held in the foyer of Palmer Hall after which each member left for home carrying newer ideas and delightful memories of a glorious week end.

One-fourth of all the motor vehicles registered last year were in the sixteen Southern States.

BAKER CLUB

The Baker Home Demonstration Club met at the home of Miss Pauline Sisk Tuesday, August 10, with eight members and two visitors present. The club was called to order by the president, Mrs. J.A. Marcus. Several beautiful songs were sung after which the roll was called by the secretary and the minutes of the last meeting were read and approved. The business of the club was attended to in order. We have one dollar and forty-five cents in the club treasury. After the business session was over an open discussion was given on the different kinds of canned foods by the club members and Miss Grace. A delicious recipe was given on how to make sweet pepper salts. Miss Grace also explained how she tested and learned to make milk from soybeans while she was in school, which was most interesting, also several other things were explained.

After the discussion of canned foods Miss Grace gave a lovely and most interesting talk on her recent trip to Washington where she was fortunate in visiting our State Senator Bankhead. A committee of three was appointed by the president to select members that they think will be suitable for the office for the coming year, after their selection they will go to each one that has been selected and see if they are willing to serve for the coming year. By doing this the electing of officials will be much easier. The committee appointed one as follows: Mrs. I.E. Edwards, Mrs. D. G. Baker, Mrs. Kate Smith.

The meeting adjourned late in the afternoon with the club pledge to meet in September with Mrs. Annie Baker.

MT. PLEASANT CLUB

The Mt. Pleasant Home Demonstration Club met Tuesday, August 3, at the home of Mrs. W.H. Kennedy. The meeting was called to order at 2:00 o'clock by the president, Mrs. Emmett Smith. The roll call and reading of the minutes by the secretary, Mrs. Stanley Kennedy were followed by the Bible reading; Psalms 133 by Mrs. Emmett Reid.

After the discussion of the club business we all picked up our chairs and moved out into the yard by the canning furnace where we were given a demonstration on Food Preservation by the leaders.

We are looking forward to the September meeting and the return of Miss Grace, and a report from her of the interesting things she learned while away.

The next meeting will be at the home of Mrs. Lloyd Mims, September 7, for the election of new officers. All old members are urged to attend this meeting.

MINOOKA CLUB

Minooka Home Demonstration Club met July 22, at the home of Mrs. Virginia with 15 members present and several visitors.

The club was called to order by the president, after roll call and old and new business attended to. A contribution was taken for incidental expenses.

The leaders then took charge and went into a canning demonstration. They did some beautiful canning of corn and beans.

Plans were made for the club picnic on Saturday the 24th.

Early Saturday morning about 20 club members and several visitors boarded Mr. Harmon Barefield's truck bound for Double Oak Park for a day of outing. We proceeded up the Birmingham-Montgomery Highway to Pelham where we left the highway and entered the park grounds over good but dusty roads and beautiful rustic bridges. After traveling over winding roads for miles we arrived at the top of the mountain where we found an open pavilion and the barbecue pit.

After resting in the pavilion a while some, who had the strongest hearts and limbs descended the mountain to view Peavine Falls, which is a small stream falling over a sheer precipice of rock some fifty or more feet high into a clear, limpid pool at the bottom.

Some of the stout-hearted climbed to the top over great gray rocks that looked like they had been piled up by the hand of some giant or tossed about by some great internal upheaval. The rocks are magnificent, great grey piles, one on top of another, with trees growing between.

After the climb back to the top of the mountain we took another course and rode miles over winding roads along which we could see the work of the CCC boys. Finally we came to a spring of clear, cold water and unloaded to eat a bounteous lunch under the shade of a large beech tree.

After eating and enjoying the cool spring water we took another route which ended at the rock quarry, where the rocks for building had been mined. We retraced our path and took another road that we thought might lead out of the park but we "reckoned without our host" for he knew where he was going. After miles and miles of lovely forest roads winding over hills we came to the principal part of the park where the buildings are going up—lovely little cabins in rows one above the other with sewer ditches dug down the hillside, and the mountain top capped by a fine recreation hall, not yet completed. On another hilltop is a lovely stone building going up. Not far away is another large building containing dining room, kitchenettes.

We arrived home safely about 8:00 o'clock, thanking Mr. Barefield for a happy day spent at Double Oak Park.

PLETCHER-ALPINE CLUB MET WITH MRS. JONES

The Pletcher-Alpine Club met July 27 at Mrs. Gladys Jones, with six members present. The President being absent the roll call and singing was omitted.

New Business—One new member was welcomed to the club. Officers and leaders were elected for the new year and it is planned for a bigger and better club with perfect attendance for another year. To let the Pletcher members know that we appreciate their letting Alpine Community join their club we are trying to plan a picnic for all the members and their husbands and "Oh, boy" what excitement to have Miss Grace meet all our men folk. We will also invite Mr. Ivey as we are proud of the work that he is doing with our 4-H Club boys. We feel sure he could entertain the men and we will let all interested know more about this later. Watch the papers.

Our demonstration was on Food Preservation, and the following products were canned: Carrots, corn and tomato juice.

We also had a dessert demonstration which was later served as refreshments as follows: lemon chiffon pie, angel food cake with peppermint filling and iced tea. Everyone enjoyed being together and the club adjourned to begin a new year's work in September.

ARE YOU SURE You are Always Welcome

NEIGHBORS can borrow things the best housewives run short of, and still remain friendly, but "may I use your telephone?" might be considered an imposition. If you had a neighbor who persisted in borrowing things and never returning them, you'd probably become impatient. When you borrow your neighbor's telephone, you are borrowing something you cannot repay.

It is easy to avoid embarrassment of this kind. Call the telephone business office and find out how little it costs to have a telephone of your own.

We Who Serve Chilton County THANK YOU!

This is the first chance that we, the Carriers of The Birmingham News and Age-Herald have had an opportunity to publicly thank the people of this county for their wholehearted support and co-operation during the past few years.

When the first motorized truck delivery of The News-Age-Herald was established, its services were considered a bit radical. It seemed improbable that folk living so far from The News plant would be able to get their papers within two hours or so from the time it left the press! People said we couldn't keep it up.

But we did. And they liked it. And they helped!

Now we have eight motor routes in the county... efficient enough to serve practically every Chilton County family with the same service subscribers get in the city of Birmingham.

To every Chilton Subscriber we offer our sincerest thanks for your fine cooperation in making this wide service possible, and pledge ourselves to continue to give day-in-and-day-out service that will make you proud of our newspapers.

That's What I Think

Saul M. Goldstein

Communities build up by various means; sometimes a spectacular discovery in natural resources brings on a boom of prosperity that attracts an increase in population; at other times an individual, public-spirited and enthusiastic, sets out to bring industry and fame to the community; and at still other times it is an organization.

The chief factor in building a community is its employment capacity. Over two years ago, Myer Freiman, head of the National Reemployment Service for the state of Kentucky, said to me: "Up to this time, and even now, cities advertise their populations. Big signs at the highway entrance to the city say 'Homeville greets you with 250,000 people' or 'Welcome to Mytown, a city of 100,000 people: the future sign of a great city will be, however, not how many people reside within its borders, but how many gainfully employed people live there. The proud city of the future will advertise itself: 'Homeville, home of 80,000 wage-earners.'"

So Clanton's growth is based on the number of people gainfully employed here. Clanton can and did exist and function as a trading center for a wide agricultural section, but in that respect its future growth is greatly limited. The arrival of the Alabama Mills plant, bringing hundreds of people to work and live in Clanton, did much to build the city. The erection of two dams within the county by the Alabama Power Company, with the arrival of people to work on them, is another important factor. Last week I pointed out the growing importance of the O. T. Dickey Ore Mining Company as a factor in the growth of Clanton.

Our federal government established a CCC camp here, and in conjunction with it began a tree-nursery. Under the able and enthusiastic direction of Crawford Young, a nursery with a capacity for growing from eight to ten million trees at a time is going ahead at full speed. The work of producing these trees requires an enormous amount of manual labor, the amount varying from time to time. The members of the CCC devote a good part of their time to this undertaking, but there are not enough of them to handle the job, and as a result, Mr. Young must hire other workers. The number of these workers varies from thirty to about ninety, from time to time, and (I believe my figures are correct) these workers receive two dollars a day each. If you stop to think about it, this is a pretty good-sized payroll and goes a long way to contribute to the growth of Clanton.

I have mentioned all this merely in preparation for an even broader undertaking. After all other efforts had failed, the Kiwanis Club, under the able leadership of the County Agent, John W. Fant, finally secured for Chilton County and Clanton, an even greater tree-nursery—what will in all probability turn out to be the largest in the South, and one of the largest in the country. It is expected to begin at once the cultivation of about thirty million trees; and if Mr. Young's project, about one-fourth the size, requires the employment of all the CCC boys plus an additional thirty to ninety men, it does not require a very great imagination to figure out what this new government project in this county will mean to the growth of Clanton.

These new employment projects whether they be government undertakings or private industry, are in turn directly or indirectly responsible for the bringing in of still more. I have mentioned the activity of Kiwanis in securing the latest feature. It is therefore, rather appropos at this point to mention that John Hollis, Sam Powers and Leonard Williams, of the Alabama Power Company, are all loyal Kiwanians; Homer Roberts, Superintendent of the Alabama Mills, is another; Jim Woods, head of the CCC camp; O. T. Dickey, of the Dickey Ore Mining Company. So don't be too surprised if this organization pops into print again with another project which means the employment of more people and the further growth of Clanton and Chilton County.

At least, that's what I think.

Poorly Nourished Women— They Just Can't Hold Up

Are you getting proper nourishment from your food, and restful sleep?

A poorly nourished body just can't hold up. And as for that run-down feeling, that nervous fatigue,—don't neglect it!

Cardul, for lack of appetite, poor digestion and nervous fatigue, has been recommended by mothers to daughters—women to women—for over fifty years. Try it! Thousands of women testify Cardul helped them. Of course, if it does not benefit you, consult a physician.

Mt. Carmel

The revival closed after a week of real soul-stirring messages, and we are thankful to the Lord for this meeting. Six were added to the church. There were four for baptism which was held Sunday morning.

Prof. Boswell and family from Cooper were visitors at B.Y.P.U. Sunday night, August 8.

There have been so many visitors from other places this week, the writer can't name them all. Among them were Mr. and Mrs. Lyman Foshee and children from Mars Hill, Mr. and Mrs. Carl Rollins, North Birmingham, Mr. and Mrs. Leon Seymore of Billingsley, Mr. and Mrs. Lee Sewell, Montgomery and a host of others. It is watermelon time, you see.

Mrs. S. C. Sewell has returned from a two-weeks visit with relatives and friends at the Capital City.

Messrs. Cecil Nummy and J. B. Thomas of Billingsley were callers at the home of J. D. Sanders the week end.

Miss Ruby Mae Higgins is spending this week in Montgomery. Miss Gladys Oden spent the week end with Miss Lona (daughter) of Isabella.

J. C. Scott is still peddling this and other.

Mr. Tom Foshee was carried to the hospital Sunday afternoon.

Mr. and Mrs. Lum Scott spent day with Mr. and Mrs. S. E. Elias.

Mr. Marvin Oden and Mr. C. Shoults of Shoults were visitors Saturday night.

Mrs. Rita Watley and children the Sunday visitors of Mr. C. Lenoir and family.

Interested Young Thing: "Oh, tell me about your parachute. What's the sensation when you 10,000 feet from the clouds."

Bored Flier: "Well er— just a sinking feeling."

KEEPING a home right up to the minute, modern and comfortable, is no easy job as you know—you women particularly. The living room furniture gets out-of-date—new curtains must be purchased—the kitchen needs a new refrigerator. Usually, however, three or four days in the Spring are enough to make everything spic and span.

But here, in your "Home Sweet Home on Rails" it's a different story. In order to give you clean, cool, modern travel comforts—and safe, dependable delivery of your every-day commodities, we can't let a day go by without replacing something.

Right now, we're sweeping out over five thousand freight cars, and buying over six million dollars worth of new ones just to give you better service. And we've just expended well over a million dollars to completely air-condition every main-line L & N train, except locals.

Yes, neighbor, when the home you keep is 8,000 miles long, spread over 13 states and is visited by millions of people who enjoy its genuine southern hospitality, well, Spring cleaning just has to go on right through the year. Yet with it all, it costs only 1½¢ to 3¢ a mile to be a guest in your "Home Sweet Home on Rails"—less than 1¢ a ton-mile on an average to use this safe, dependable freight transportation. Won't you think of the L & N, neighbor, when next you travel or plan a shipment?

Farmers Urged Save
Summer Legume Seed

Auburn, Ala.—The importance of Alabama farmers harvesting cowpeas and other summer legume seed this fall is emphasized by the fact that they may be used in improving the soil and in protecting the land from erosion, in supplying food for the farm home, in making a good hay crop, and in producing a seed crop that farmers can sell for cash.

"Farmers seldom have enough cowpeas and other valuable legume seed when planting time comes," said J.C. Lowery, extension agronomist, in calling farmers attention to the importance of saving legume seed this fall for planting next year.

HELD SUNDAY, AUGUST 15

On Sunday, August 15, the Hilyer reunion was held at the home of S. H. Hilyer, honoree, who will be 91 years old the first day of December.

The visitors we counted to be a hundred or over, which was most all relations. All the children were there, who are: Mr. J. D. Hilyer, Mr. T. J. Hilyer, Mrs. N. E. Lewis, Mr. S. H. Hilyer, Jr., Mrs. A. L. Farris, Mr. E. M. Hilyer.

There were also the five generations, Mr. S. H. Hilyer, Mr. J. D. Hilyer, Mr. Stephen Hilyer, Mr. Mat Hilyer and little Earl Waide Hilyer.

By eleven o'clock the family had all gathered and at 12:00 a lunch was spread under the great oak tree. Because of the rain that came we were a little late with the preaching and pictures that were taken. Mr. Scott from Scott's Studio of Clanton, made pictures about 1:30 o'clock. Then the Rev. J. T. Daniel preached a nice sermon at about 2:00 o'clock, which was enjoyed by all.

Everyone left about 4:00 o'clock wishing Mr. Hilyer many more happy days and hoping to meet here a year from today.

—One of The Family.

"See that lot over there," explained the citizen showing his visitor about the town. "It is now worth five thousand dollars, and last year I could have got it for a song."

Riley Candler of West Asheville, N. C., goes to bed with his radio on. "It runs all night, takes it to work with him, listens to it all day, and brings it home at night to repeat the routine."

Alabama bankers met in Auburn on Wednesday, August 18, and made plans for helping farmers of the State solve some of their major problems.

Clanton Methodist Church News

We hope you visitors, each and every one, to our church last Sunday enjoyed being there as much as we enjoyed having you. We hope you will hurry back to visit us again, or, if not already members of another congregation, we shall be happy to welcome you as members of our own.

We hope the splendid choir of the last two Sundays is but the beginning of a choir constantly increasing in voices rendering music teeming with religious fervor. Our pastor pleads for a good choir, because it gives him support which a good preacher desires and deserves, and if you heard Dr. Truett last Sunday, you know he is a mighty good preacher. Let's all be at church at our places whether in the audience or in the choir next Sunday.

Our Sunday school is going along more splendidly than some of us perhaps realize, and doing the fine work required of a good Sunday school, due to the diligence of the officers and the cooperation given them, but can always do better with more cooperation. Are we all doing our very best and being perfect cooperators?

The Men's Bible Class has been re-organized with a good teacher and a new president and seems to have taken on new life. May every member work with all his might to build this class to just what it should be.

Don't forget Sunday, August 22, 1937. Be at Sunday school at 9:45 and at the preaching service at 11 o'clock praying.

ALABAMA CLUB MEMBERS
VISITING MUSCLE SHOALS

Auburn, Ala.—Approximately 3,000 4-H club boys of 31 Alabama counties are making tours of the Muscle Shoals area, August 11 to August 28. Headquarters for the club boys has been established at Tusculum Fair grounds, and guides have been appointed to direct the county groups to Wilson Dam, through soil erosion demonstrations, to Wheeler Dam, and other interesting places in the Tennessee Valley.

The trips are giving club boys first-hand information on the soil conservation and soil building program being carried on by the Tennessee Valley Authority and the Alabama Extension Service, says L. L. Self, State boys 4-H club leader.

Montgomery is becoming a leading livestock market. More than $250,000 worth of cattle and calves and $30,000 worth of hogs were sold at the Union Stock Yards in Montgomery during July.

THE REPUBLICAN ELEPHANT

WHY is it that the Republican party, which has dominated the American government for 60 out of the 80 years it has been in existence, should be symbolized by a beast from the African jungles instead of some typical American animal? The answer is that a cartoonist once used a jungle scene to depict a political crisis and the figure of an elephant was so appropriate for what it was supposed to represent that its symbolism persisted for nearly a century. Itself had passed. The cartoonist was Thomas Nast of Harper's Weekly and the crisis was this:

In 1874 it seemed certain that President Grant was determined to run again in 1876. The principal opponent to the third term idea was James Gordon Bennett's Democratic newspaper, the New York Herald, which shrieked "Caesarism!" incessantly. Taking his tip how "An ass, having put on a lion's skin, roamed about the forest and amused himself by frightening all the foolish animals he met with in his wanderings," Nast drew a cartoon which he labelled "The Third Term Panic."

It showed the Herald as a donkey in a lion's skin, labelled "Caesarism," braying loudly and all the animals fleeing in alarm. The New York Tribune was represented as a giraffe, the World as an owl dropping an arithmetic book, the Times as a unicorn with a monocle. Near-by was a half-concealed fox labelled "Democratic party" but with features suggesting those of Samuel J. Tilden.

In the foreground was an elephant, labelled "The Republican Vote" on the verge of an abyss of "Chaos" barely hidden by broken planks marked "Inflation," "Repudiation," "Reform (Tammany)" and "Reconstruction." This cartoon was not only thrust out by the Herald but also a half-affectionate jab at Nast's own "huge but timorous" party, the Republicans.

Two weeks later Nast drew another cartoon showing an elephant tumbling down into the pit with the rotten planks and the rejoicing animals following it. This was called "Caught in a Trap—The Result of the Third Term Hoax." From that time on the elephant was the symbol of the Republican party.

DEATH OF MRS. RUBY GREEN

On August 1, 1937, God gave a beautiful blue-eyed boy to Mr. and Mrs. Robert Green and on August 3, God saw fit to take it's mother to that country from whose bounds no traveler returns.

At the time of her death she was only seventeen years old. She was a member of Friendship Baptist Church of Christ. She was loved by all who knew her.

It was so sad to give her up here on earth, but not as sad as those who have no hope. She was prepared to meet God in peace. She leaves to mourn her husband, Mr. Robert Green, and baby, mother, father, Mr. and Mrs. Charlie Seals; 7 half-brothers, 1 half-sister, Mrs. Edwin Lovelady; brothers are Jess, Sid, Lester, Comer, Erm, Dock and Bud Seals.

Funeral was conducted by Rev. E. H. Littlejohn. She was laid to rest in Mt. Olive cemetery with Matthews & Jones in charge. Pallbearers were Harmon Green, Edwin Lovelady, Charlie, Dock, Jess and Erm Seals. A great array of beautiful flowers bore testimony of the esteem in which she was held.

The funeral was attended by many of her sorrowing friends.

—A Friend, Mrs. Sadie Watson.

FARM MACHINERY SHOULD BE STORED FOR WINTER

Auburn, Ala.—Now is a good time for farmers to store the farm machinery used in making the present crop, says J. P. Wilson, agricultural engineer of the Alabama Extension Service, in advising that the machines be well cleaned, painted, greased and oiled before being stored.

"Clean all parts, both wood and metal, to prevent rusting and rotting through the chemical reaction of foreign matter left on surfaces," he suggests.

"Grease with cup grease or old motor oil all polished surfaces as plow shares and wings.

"Paint all surfaces that are exposed. This paint may be of any color desired, but be sure that it is of a good grade that will protect the surface.

"Store all machines out of the sun and rain. This will make paint and grease do a better job of protecting tools as well as prevent warping of wood sections."

A further advance in farm wage rates during the next 12 months is expected by the Bureau of Agricultural Economics.

Poultry breeders have tried to cross the turkey and chicken but no one seems ever to have succeeded in hatching the actual cross.

Randolph News

Even though the weather was not so favorable, a large number of people attended the concert at the close of our music school. I wish to thank the community for their splendid cooperation in helping "put over" the school. Forty-four dollars tuition is still due which I hope will be honored as a just debt. The following have contributed to our piano fund by paying their music school fees:

J. P. Waldrop, Brown Bolding, W. C. Houlditch, S. M. Lawley, M. E. Frith James Niswander, Ovid Merchant Flem Burnett, Archie Smitherman, C. S. McGee, George Smitherman, Charlie Riffe, L. L. Jackson, Edgar Lawley, Ella J. Gray, T. E. Payne, W. J. Henderson, Mrs. Ida Lawrence, Davis Smitherman, H. R. Smitherman, Duff Frith, Dalton Brown, Sidney Raybon, Armon Scott, Mrs. Hugh Smith and J. L. Kelly.

Those who have not paid will remember their pledge to pay on or before October 24, 1937.

Our commissioner has promised to let us know when his gravel trucks can haul gravel to surface the drive in front of our school building. I hope every patron will be interested enough to help at least a half-day. A gravelled drive will lendable buses to deliver the children to the door and thus avoid mud which cerates dust after is tracked into the building. As yet, we do not have a promise of N.Y.A. help to sweep our building, but we know that it is important to sweep daily.

We are sure the patrons of our school appreciate the action of our Superintendent and Board of Education in changing the opening date of our school to October 4th instead of September 6th.

"Tell me, won't you, what was your greatest ambition as a child, and have you attained it?" she asked.

The celebrity looked at her sadly and said, "Madam, I regret to say that I never attained my boyhood ambition."

"And what was it?"

"Madam, my great ambition was to throw an egg into an electric fan!"

Common labor, May and June $ 927.05
"Mr. Arledge would have you to believe that the officials you elected are liars, thieves, and are wasting your money, while their honesty and integrity are beyond question."
"Mr. Arledge stated that had made three separate attempts seeking the removal of the supervisor in and through impeachment proceedings. That statement is false. However, after evidence had been presented to the Commissioners Court that the supervisor had disposed of one of the County's Caterpillar Tractors without the authority or knowledge of the Commissioners Court, and contrary to law, and a claim had been filed through his office and the name of J. L. Easterling being forged to same, and money drawn out of the Treasury of your County for road work when this party had rendered no services on the road as per the claim filed, the Commissioners Court passed a resolution petitioning Hon. Arthur Glover, Judge of Circuit Court of Chilson County, Alabama, to call a special session of the Grand Jury to investigate the above and other matters.

"With reference to the two tractors which Mr. Arledge charged the Commissioners Court to deliberately donate $1750.00. This statement is not true.
These tractors were bought on competitive bids and all bids were recorded in the Minutes of the Commissioners Court and the original bids are on file in the Probate Office and are public records. Do you think you can mislead our people and have them believe that the Commissioners are so ignorant as to openly violate the law? Don't you know if your statements were correct that the Commissioners or their bonding company would have to pay this $1,750.00 which you speak of and the other items you referred to? The difference would be charged direct to the Commissioners and their bonds."

"With reference to the two cases in Circuit Court, I regret it was necessary for the Commissioners to file suit against you in order to recover the $1,750.00 from which you were charged with disposing of and illegal claims filed by your office. Now, Mr.
Arledge, with reference to your $100.00 reward, if you will place this money in the Bank you will have the pleasure of paying this reward, as the records will be produced.

"Yours very truly,
"J. LEE SMITH,
Judge of Probate."

Letters To The Editor

FOR SENATOR HUGO BLACK

Editor, Chilton County News:
Please allow space in your elegant journal for an expression of thanks and highest appreciation of one of Chilton County's colored citizens for the high honor conferred upon Alabama's favorite son and distinguished citizen by the President of the United States of America, a nation that occupies a front seat upon the platform of enlightenment for the nations of the world.

We refer to the appointment of the Honorable Hugo Lafayette Black to the Supreme Court of the United States, which occurred with bare mention of his name for the position.

This tells us that Senator Black had so distinguished himself as a worthy and able statesman that he needed no boosting, but his characteristics stood out as an isolated peak for the place.
This should be a stimulus to every citizen of Alabama to put forth the most strenuous efforts to attain a degree of highest eminence and proficiency. It should stimulate new interest in the true education of all our citizenry.

Hurrah for Senator Black! Hurrah for Clay County! Hurrah for Alabama.
Respectfully submitted,
C. H. ADAMS,
Verbena, Ala., Route 2.

About Loud Radios And Things

Clanton, Ala., August 14, 1937.
Editor, Chilton County News,
Clanton, Alabama.

Dear Sir:

Please allow me space in your dear paper to say a few words.

I noticed in this week's issue an article that was carried up before our Honorable Mayor, Mr. Jones. The article was based on loud volume of radios. Well, thanks lots for the committee that was interested in a quieter city, but what about the L & N Railroad here in our city running wild with their whistles day and night, just like there was someone on the track. Notice our neighbor city of Childersburg, Ala., which has a penalty on the use of whistles, except to save life or to avoid personal injury and is only in case of emergency, otherwise the city court of Childersburg collects fines on each occurrence. Back in the City of Clanton: What about the big cutouts on cars and trucks running through our city day and night. What about those big mufflers roaring like a big air condenser day and night through our city. What about the dogs barking and running and howling over our city at night. What about ice being sold over our city without scales. Can the men weigh ice with their hands? Many other things could be mentioned which comes under the public's notice, which if action was taken would find the most of us involved some way or other.
I feel like a city the size of Clanton should not do anything to discourage the public's interest, either socially or financially. I think our city is making wonderful headway into a bigger, better, safer and sounder city to live in, thanks lots for our city's advancement under its good management of our present officials.

I feel grateful for those who are willing to help you and me, but thanks lots.

These articles which I have mentioned are not commands, neither do I mean them to be taken up and handled by our city council. I merely mean to mention in our great paper to the friends here and elsewhere that I thank them so much and that I believe in living in the bounds of reason I hope I have not been bothering anyone with my radio. I usually retire about 8:00 P.M.

Notice that the few lines I have mentioned here do not mean that I have been bothered at any time by anything that has been mentioned. There are radios all around me. They play when they get ready, so do I, and if I am not pleasing you, tell me why.

Thanks lots for our great paper, the Chilton County News, also our many friends here and elsewhere, also our city.

Best wishes to all.

uphold any man, or group of men in our statement about this matter. We simply believe that for the be-interest of the county as a whole, the present Road Supervisor would make arrangements to bring about a solution to this controversy and at the same time endeavor himself to this county, for having been long enough and wise enough to effect this change.

We have watched with interest, the workings of our Commissioners Court and have been convinced that body of men is doing what it believes right and the best interest of the county. We find there a body men, duly elected by the people, trying to render service in such a manner they will not hesitate to answer to the voters when the time comes.

We have watched and studied, with interest, the workings of the Road Department of Chilton County.
There we find a group of men, working under the directions of one man and attempting to handle the ter-mendous task of managing the biggest business in the county—that of maintaining and building our county roads and bridges. The News is convinced that the preent system of handling the road matters of this county is entirely too expensive and should be changed immediately.

Keep His Friendship

We are all creatures of habit. We walk down the same side of the street day after day; and we usually seek the same parking place at the curb, and we follow a beaten path when we cut across corners.

This last tendency may often arouse dissatisfaction and outright antagonism among neighbors and acquaintances of which we are unaware. Our attention was called to the subject recently by an acquaintance who requested us to urge people to refrain from cutting across the lawns of neighbors.

At this season of the year it is especially difficult to maintain an attractive lawn. Citizens who are proud of the appearance of the grounds surrounding their homes spend much time in watering and tending lawns to pull them through the last few weeks of the summer season. It is especially disconcerting to these people to observe the friend's cutting across their lawns day after day, following a path that becomes more defined and more ugly as each week passes.

We suggest to our readers, therefore, that they refrain from cutting corners and crossing the lawn of a neighbor who may be especially proud of the appearance of his place. He may say nothing to you, but you can be sure he doesn't like it. Why risk the danger of losing a good friend and of marring the appearance of an attractive lawn merely to save a few seconds. Time may be valuable, but it is not worth such a price.

On Community Development

An industry of substantial size had developed over a period of years in a community like Clanton. The President of the company and principal stockholder was once asked: "How did you happen to select this town for your industry. Has it any particular advantages over other places in transportation, location with reference to materials or markets, or did you receive some special inducement to locate here?"

The executive pondered the question for a moment and then replied: "No such tangible reason as that comes to mind. I have lived here for many years, long before this business was started. I always liked the town and its people, and when I embarked in this enterprise it never occurred to me to go somewhere else."

"This community was always progressive, up-to-date and in every respect a desirable community in which to live. That's why this factory is here."

This particular incident, which was related to us long ago, merely made us consider the many intangible and indirect returns that may come to a live-wire community. Here was a town where the citizens were friendly, where effort was made to keep the community a desirable place in which to live, where good schools, churches and a pleasant social atmosphere proved to be a major asset.

When we desire to boost our community, therefore, we might consider ways and means to make it an attractive and desirable place in which to live. Who knows that some young man with a valuable idea may not now be planning an enterprise which will materially enlarge and improve the community in the years to come. That young man, who is unknown to us today, should be made to realize that Clanton is a desirable community in which to live. The way to make him feel that way is to keep our community in the vanguard of progress keeping always in mind those thousands of little things which make a town desirable as a permanent residence.

Anyway we'd rather have a treasury in the red than a red in the treasury.

Opportunity In Farming

If you were to offer absolutely free a tract of good land which had never been under cultivation and was without all improvements, under the sole condition that the one who received it must build a modern home and up-to-date barn, must put in good fencing provide all other present day improvements, it is highly probable that your gift would find no takers.

Because the shrewd person knows that he can buy a finished farm with good buildings and good fencing for less than it would cost to build the improvements on this free tract.

In other words farms are still on the bargain counter today. In our own locality farms are even now selling for less than the replacement value of the buildings, fences and other improvements. How long this condition will exist in an expanding country where the need for agricultural products is going to increase in the years to come is now unknown. But obviously this condition cannot and will not prevail indefinitely.

This leads us to the inescapable conclusion that farm property offers one of the best long term investments of the time. We do not mean an investment for the absentee owner. That never has been so, because farming requires too much experience and direct personal supervision to function well when the owner is far away. But for the man who is going to till the soil and operate his own farm, there is plenty of opportunity for good investment in the land.

We hear so much today about the lack of opportunity for young people of energy and ambition. Their lot is often unfavorably contrasted with that of the pioneer who went across the frontier and got his land for nothing.

But we doubt that what these orators say is true. All that the pioneer got was the land. All that he accumulated came in return for toil and thrift. The young people of today can get farms for no more than the replacement cost of improvements.

So figure it out for yourself. Farm property is on the bargain counter. It will not remain there indefinitely.

Hours And Wages

Legislation to establish minimum wages and maximum hours of labor is now with us. But it raises many a question and causes some of us to wonder just how it will work.

What's wrong with the law, as we see it, is the uncertainty of its application. Minimum pay may be as high as 70 cents an hour and maximum hours as low as 35 per week within the discretion of a five man labor statistics board within the region.

If Congress should say, for example, that 40 cents an hour is the minimum pay and 40 hours a week the maximum work period to preserve an American standard of living, business and industry would probably make adjustments. But what this labor statistics board may do when subjected to the pressure of various organizations, groups is something decidedly different. Until the policies of this board are determined, there will be a period of uncertainty, which will tend to cramp normal business expansion and bring no benefits either to business or labor.

We personally feel disposed to condemn the practice of granting large discretionary powers to boards and commissions which are not directly responsible to the people and are never forced to give an account of their stewardship to the voters. Congress itself, it would seem, should be amply qualified to establish standards and amend them as time and changing conditions warrant.

A friend who operates a small business explains that an excessively high minimum will force him to install one machine which will eliminate either two or three workers. If other business institutions both large and small adopt such apolicy, the purposes of the maximum hours and minimum wage law will be defeated.

A social leader observes that people are more fond of their homes than ever. Perhaps he believes in the old adage about absence making the heart grow fonder.

Right at this season the average citizen is much more concerned about the holiday debt than the debt holiday.

In spite of all remarks about the second rate boxes of the present day it must be admitted that most of them know the ropes.

MORAL ECHOES

D. W. Haskew

In a missionary book we read where a Persian baby had a convulsion and was carried to a Mohammedan priest by its parents. The priest told them that the baby was possessed of a devil and if she were to live that they would have to buy a prayer sheet as long as the baby and paste it to the back and limbs of the child. He had this prayer sheet and could sell it to them for a moderate sum of five dollars. The father and mother held a consultation over the proposition and decided that the child was only a girl baby and was not worth a sheet of paper as long as she was, and they informed the priest that they would return home and let her die. We fear that there are parents in this so called Christian country of ours who think that their children are not worth a prayer as long as the child and they never pray for them. We see children all around us who are having a convulsion in sinful living and we wonder if parents are praying for them.

One day we were crossing the Alabama river on a ferry boat. A little lad of three years stood by my side holding to my hand as he watched the water roll down stream. In his childish way he asked, "Papa, where does the river go when night comes on?" I saw at once that the question was big with the wonder of child life. He had seen men and women going home when the sun was going down. He had seen the fowls as they had gone to roost at the close of day. As a child he wondered if the river had a place to go for rest and sleep at night. I had to answer, "My son, the river runs on at night just the same as it runs during the day." Grown men are asking, "Where does the soul go when the day is over in this world?" The Man of Galilee would have us to cherish the faith that our soul goes on after death, just as it has moved on during life. We are flowing down the stream of life and when the shades of death shall gather, like the river, we will flow on throughout eternity.

When George Washington was a prosperous wheat grower, a brand of flour marked "G.W. Mount Vernon" was exempted from examination at a West Indies port. They had found it to be a waste of time to examine this flour for every sack was as marked. When Abe Lincoln was practicing in the courts any statement that he made was accepted at its face value by the judge, by the jury and by the opponents in the case, because all alike knew that Lincoln was honest, even at the expense of his own case. Never before have we needed George Washington and Abraham Lincoln more than we need them today. Nothing will so completely destroy an individual, or a company, than unreliability. Let the brand of your personality make your product good anywhere.

I like to study the human face. It is man's greatest expositor. No man can reach his fortieth year without having his past sculptured on his face. A greater sculptor than Roden, or an Angelo, is our thoughts. Day by day and year after year they chisel on our faces and bring out for view what is on the inside of us. What a man thinks in his heart he advertises in his face. Many a time have I looked into the face of men and women and had my blood to run cold, and all because I could see stamped on them the depravity that had crowded into their thinking and living. As we read human faces we are persuaded that not all of the criminals are in stripes. On many who walk the streets we can see stamped on their faces what it takes to be a criminal. We see many folks who have never been in court or behind prison bars and yet they carry about with them a face that tells of us low thinking and low living as ever appeared in stripes. Remember that your face speaks aloud of your character when your lips are closed. You cannot walk in sin and keep it hid, your very face tells it to the world.

I listened with interest to the story of two little boys as they related what they knew about a goat that had once belonged to them. It ran like this, "We bought us a nice little goat and gave two dollars for him. We had lots of fun with him for a long time, but our goat took up a habit of butting us down. He kept this up so much of the time that we could never be up when he was around and so we sold him for a dollar. The boy who bought him from us said that he could not stand that bad goat and he sold him for fifty cents. The boy who bought him for fifty cents said that he could not stand his butting so he gave him away. The boy to whom he gave the goat said that his whole family could not stand the goat, so they killed him and made him into goat hash. That was the beginning and end of a bad goat. He formed one bad habit that soon brought him into the hash pot. I knew a young man who had a good job but he formed the bad habit of drinking and he was fired. He took another job that had less than half his former salary. He continued to drink and was fired. He slid lower and lower and now that man is the hash of depraved society. One bad habit can rob any young man of the value in life and one bad habit can make him into rubbish. Why sensible fail to see this is more than I can understand.

McCormick-Deering Mowers Have Always Been Good and the No. 7 Enclosed Gear Mower Is the Best Yet

Come in and go over the entire mower. You'll agree that you have never seen anything like it.

WE are anxious to have all our friends see the new McCormick-Deering No. 7 Enclosed Gear Mower. We think it is one of the finest pieces of farm equipment we have ever sold!

For example: The entire operating mechanism, including drive gears, differential, and countershafts, is assembled compactly in an oil-tight gear housing and runs in a bath of oil. There are four high-grade roller bearings. Operation is so smooth and noiseless that you can scarcely hear the light hum of the axle!

Special oil seals at the ends of the main axle and fly-wheel shaft, and the oil-tight gear box prevent leakage and protect all working parts against the entrance of dirt and other abrasive materials. Floating action of cutter bar provides ample play without disturbing knife registration.

CHESTNUT GROVE

Mrs. Nannie Barnett died last Wednesday night at 11:30 o'clock, and was buried Thursday evening at 5 o'clock in the Montevale Cemetery.

Mr. Hubert Lucas was the Sunday guest of Mrs. Joseph Nabors. We have called Rev. Horace Nabors for our pastor for another year.

NITRATE OF SODA ADDS MORE BOLLS TO COTTON

The Isabella Chapter of F. F. A. is sponsoring a Chilean Nitrate Demonstration. The demonstration consists of two and one-half acres of cotton. All the cotton received the same fertilizer at planting. The two acres received, as side-dressing, 200 pounds Chilean Nitrate per acre at the first working. The one-half acre did not receive any nitrate. The cotton on the two acres averages 47 bolls per 12 stalks. Twelve stalks on the one-half acre average 27 bolls. The stalks on the two acres average 6 inches higher and it is enough broader that it laps in the middle. The other cotton does not lap.

In addition to the nitrate cotton being taller, broader, having more bolls and having a much better color—its bolls are noticeably larger. From observation you would say that they are at least one third larger. Of course the yield on the two acres will be more than on the one-half acre. It would be interesting to know just how much. At an early date a field meeting will be held at the demonstration for the purpose of giving you a chance to guess the difference. The demonstration is located on the farm of Mr. E. S. (Span) Jones which is on the road leading from Peps store on the Clanton-Selma highway to the Isabella high school.

State Farmers Advised Plant Winter Gardens

Farmers throughout Alabama are being advised to plant vegetables during August and September for use this winter.

Some of the vegetables that can still be planted are turnips, mustard, lettuce, kale, spinach, tendergreens and onions, advises Prof. L. M. Ware, head of the horticulture department, Alabama Polytechnic Institute.

"Planting of these vegetables may continue in North Alabama until September 10; in Central Alabama until September 20; and in South Alabama throughout October," he says.

Full information on how to succeed with winter gardens may be obtained from farm and home agents and vocational teachers. They have been sent bulletins on gardening in Alabama.

What's New in Radio?

By J. F. Witkowski

Principal, School of Radio, International Correspondence Schools; Associate Member, Institute of Radio Engineers

WHAT is said to be the most elaborate alarm system ever developed is installed in the vaults of the new United States mint at San Francisco. Controlled by an arrangement of detectors set to react to any type of sound disturbance, the alarms automatically call police and military authorities by short-wave radio, turn on floodlights, ring bells and spray tear gas.

Business men who find their recreation in cruising along the seashore can talk to their homes or to shore. Radio telephone equipment suitable for small craft is now available and telephone companies have established shore stations, enabling yachtsmen in the vicinity of Boston, New York, Miami, Seattle, San Francisco and Los Angeles to call any telephone subscriber on land.

It is reported that the U. S. Navy has developed a "radio spy" which can track down and locate enemy vessels over long distances, thus providing ample warning of their presence. It is believed that the basis of the device is the use of micro-waves which are reflected back by the distant warships.

Progress in the campaign for greater safety at sea is marked by the successful performance of a robot radio receiver designed to insure the receipt of distress signals by ships that have only one operator who may be off duty at the time. The receiver reacts to a special code signal. When such a signal is picked up it calls the operator by sounding an alarm bell and flashing warning lights.

WITH YOUR HOME Demonstration Agent CONDUCTED BY MISS META GRACE

BAKER CLUB

The Baker Home Demonstration club met at the home of Miss Pauline Sisk Tuesday August 10, with eight members and two visitors present. The club was called to order by the president, Mrs. J. A. Marcus. Several beautiful songs were sung after which the roll was called by the secretary and the minutes of the last meeting were read and approved. The business of the club was attended to in order. We have one dollar and forty-five cents in the club treasury. After the business session was over an informal discussion was given on the different kinds of canned foods by the club members and Miss Grace. A delicious recipe was given on how to make sweet pepper sauce. Miss Grace also explained how she tested and learned to make milk from soy beans while she was in school which was most interesting. Also several other things were explained.

After the discussion of canned foods Miss Grace gave a lovely and most interesting talk on her recent trip to Washington where she was fortunate in visiting our state senator, Bandhead. A committee of three was appointed by the president to select members that they think will be suitable for the office for the coming year, after their selection they will go to each one that has been selected and see if they are willing to serve for the coming year, by doing this the electing of officials will be much easier, the committee appointed one as follows. Mrs. L. E. Edwards, Mrs. D. G. Baker, Mrs. Kate Smith. The meeting adjourned late in the afternoon with the club pledge to meet in September, with Mrs. Annie Baker.

MISS PAULINE SISK.

MT. PLEASANT CLUB

The Mt. Pleasant Home Demonstration club met Tuesday, August 3, at the home of Mrs. W. H. Kennedy.

The meeting was called to order at 2:00 o'clock by the president, Mrs. Emmett Smith. The roll call and reading of the minutes, by the secretary, Mrs. Stanley Kennedy, were followed by the Bible reading, Psalms 133, by Mrs. Emmett Smith.

After the discussion of the club business we all picked up our chairs and moved out into the yard by the canning furnace where we were given a demonstration on Food Preservation by the leader.

We are looking forward to the September meeting and the return of Miss Grace, and a report from her of the interesting things she learned while away.

The next meeting will be at the home of Mrs. Lloyd Mims, September 7, for the election of new officers. All old members are urged to attend this meeting.

MINOOKA CLUB

Minooka Home Demonstration Club met July 22 at the home of Mrs. Virginia with 15 members present and several visitors.

The club was called to order by the president, after roll call and old and new business attended to, a contribution was taken for incidental expenses.

The leaders then took charge and went into a canning demonstration. They did some beautiful canning of corn and beans.

Plans were made for the club picnic on Saturday the 24th.

Early Saturday morning about 20 club members and several visitors boarded Mr. Harmon Barefield's truck bound for Double Oak park for a day outing. We proceeded up the Birmingham-Montgomery highway to Pelham where we left the highway and entered the park grounds over good but dusty roads and beautiful rustic bridges. After traveling over winding roads for miles, we arrived at the top of the mountain where we found an open pavilion and barbecue pit.

After resting in the pavilion a while, some, who had the hearts and limbs, descended the mountain to view Peavine Falls, which is a small stream falling over a sheer precipice of rock some fifty or more feet high, into a clear limpid pool at the bottom.

Some of the most stout-hearted climbed to the top over great granite rocks that look like they had gnawed by the hand of some giant, tossed about by some great internal upheaval. The rocks are magnificent great grey piles, one on top of another with trees growing between.

After the climb back to the top of the mountain, we took another road, and rode miles over winding roads, along which we could see the work of the CCC boys. Finally we came to a spring of clear cold water and unloaded to eat a bounteous lunch under the shade of a large beech tree.

After eating and enjoying the cool spring water we took another road, which ended at the rock quarry where the rocks for building had been moved. We retraced our paths and took another road that we thought might lead out of the park but we "reckoned wrong" out our host" for he knew where it was going.

After miles and miles of lovely forest roads, winding over the hills we came to the principal part of the park where the buildings are going up - lovely little cabins in rows on the hill side, and the mountain top capped by a fine recreation hall, yet completed. On another hill top a lovely stone building going up - far away is another large building containing diningroom kitchenette. We arrived home safely about 8 o'clock, thanking Mr. Barefield for a happy day spent at Double Oak park.

FEDERAL TAXES COSTING MOTORISTS MORE IN

Federal taxes on motor fuel lubricants costs motorists of Alabama a total of $1,063,000 in the first months of 1937, an increase of 168 cents in cost over the $910,000 federal gasoline and oil bill for the first 10 months of 1936, it was reported today by M. Hearn, Secretary of the Alabama Petroleum Industries Committee.

"I am reporting these figures to let the motorists of Alabama know how much federal taxes are costing them in addition to the gasoline sales taxes, registration fees, and other special additional levies they pay the state," said Mr. Hearn. "A 90 per cent of this federal tax of $1,063,000 represents federal receipts from the tax on gasoline, which duplicates the gasoline tax levied this State."

"This is the same tax which was imposed temporarily to help balance the budget about five years ago, and the tax which the legislatures of half the states have asked Congress to repeal. This is the tax which Congressional committees have recommended should be repealed. And it is the tax which was recently repealed by the present Congress for two years."

"Every gallon of gasoline our buyers is 1c more expensive because the federal treasury to be spent on these federal taxes are money out of this State that it could be used right here at home. It is time this injustice was ended the repeal of both of them."

That's What I Think

—O—O—O—

Saul M. Goldstein

Like a giant sleeping while pigmies hurry to perform the tasks about them, and then awaking with one fast sweep accomplishing more than they have done after long and arduous toil, Alabama has taken its place in the sun of the Federal government.

For decades one of the chief mainstays of the Democratic party, this state has seen natives of other sections rise to high positions in the nation's councils while it rested patiently. Once for a brief interval, an Alabamian sat in the Vice-President's chair; and thirteen years ago an anxious Alabama citizenry waited breathlessly while its governor fought hard to secure the Democratic Presidential nomination for the late Senator Underwood.

Today, however, the state basks in the sun. Speaker of the House, Justice of the Supreme Court, President of the Young Democrats of America, all these positions have come to Alabama.

Ordinarily, I am not inclined to wax political in these few inches of space every week; but no public-spirited citizen of this state can miss seeing the future of Alabama as a factor in the government of the United States with the sudden rise of its citizens during the present administration.

Theoretically, a man occupying a national position loses sight of sectional differentiation, and deals alike to all citizens of the nation. Practically speaking, it is well-nigh impossible to achieve that viewpoint. A man's life, thoughts and actions are necessarily colored by his environment; and it is only a natural result of that influence that his course of action will be guided accordingly.

The Hon. Mr. Bankhead breathed too much of the air and life of Alabama to disregard it entirely when any matter of national import comes up for discussion. His attitude on, say, a new taxing bill, must be by the natural course of events be affected by his relations with his neighbors at home, and by their attitude on the question. Mr. Justice Black cannot, in spite of all efforts he might exert to the contrary, avoid the effect of his long years spent in Alabama on the opinions he must soon render in matters of national importance. And Mr. Maner cannot overlook the welfare of Alabama, politically speaking, in guiding the destinies of the Young Democrats of America, because the factors of that welfare are as inbred in him as is his affection for the members of his immediate family.

And thus has come Alabama's time to express itself in the government of its country through the voices of its sons who have risen to high places. Alabama, we salute you!

He will use about ten men each day. I feel sure the people will appreciate these opportunities.

Joe Hall Johnson Returns From Six Weeks Tour Of Europe

Joe Hall Johnson, son of Mrs. Arthur Johnson of Clanton and Vanderbilt student, has just returned to his home here after a six weeks tour of Europe. Joe Hall, together with twenty-two other students of German John G. Frank, professor of German at Vanderbilt University, left New York on June 13, on the Steamship Hansa and after a tour of Germany, Austria, Belgium, Holland, France and England, returned on the steamship Bremen. They landed in New York on August 18th.

This tour was especially arranged by the University for students of German Landing first at Hamburg, Germany, the boys together with Professor Frank went to Berlin. The tour of Germany was made by bicycle, for the sake of convenience and in order that more of the country might be seen. According to Mr. Johnson, the most interesting sights in Berlin were the University of Berlin, Brandenburg Gate, and the German Government Buildings, which for the sake of easy identification were all painted yellow.

The itinerary for Germany included the following places: Potsdam, home of Frederick the Great, with its palace of Sans-Souci, modeled after the palace of Versailles near Paris; Wittenberg, Naumburg, Jena, Weimar, Leipzig, Neuremberg, Bamberg, Augsburg, Munich; and Kempen in the German Alps. A gigantic sports festival was in progress in Leipzig at the time of their arrival.

From Kempen Germany, Mr. Johnson, with the party, crossed the Austrian border. Not having visas for Austria, their passports were taken from them, together with their money. This was done by the Austrian authorities to insure speedy return. They returned to Germany and crossed into Switzerland.

A few days were spent at Arosa in Switzerland, almost halfway between Germany and Italy. From Arosa, Switzerland, the party crossed again into Germany and visited Friedrichshafen, home port of the recent giant German zeppelins. Mr. Johnson reports that they saw there another of the lighter-than-air craft being constructed.

From Friedrichshafen the tour took them to Baden-Baden, Heidelberg with its university, Mainz, by river steamer down the Rhine to Coblenz, Wurms and Cologne.

A short excursion took them from Aix-La-Chapelle to central Holland. Namur Belgium was visited next and an inspection was made of the museum built there on the ruins of the world war fort.

From there to Paris with a one-day stop at Cambrige, to view the spot where the Armistice was signed, completed their tour of the German countries.

From Paris, where several days were spent in sightseeing, the party took an excursion to Verdun to attend the dedication of the Battle Monuments at Montfaucon. General Pershing, together with numerous other American dignitaries, were speakers.

Returning to Paris on August 3 they crossed the channel from Boulogne, France to Folkestone England. Only a few days were spent in England. Among the sites visited were Canterbury Cathedral, Westminster Abbey, Stratford-On-Avon and Oxford University. The departure for America was made from Southampton on the Bremen on August 13. They landed in America on the 18th.

On being asked what of the many things he saw while in Europe was the most impressive, Mr. Johnson stated that to him the general spirit of friendliness, courtesy and cooperation of the German people was the most impressive. According to his statement the French people were nowhere as near as courteous and seemed to want the feel of American money too much to point of being exceptionally discourteous.

Joe Hall stated that as far as he could see, conditions in Germany are not as bad as the daily press in America would have us believe.

Mr. Johnson will return to Vanderbilt this fall to resume his studies there.

A LETTER FROM C. REESE MULLINS

Clanton, Ala., Aug. 23, '37.
Editor Chilton County News,

Dear Sir:

Please allow me just a small space in your paper this week to express to you and to the people of Chilton County, my profound disgust of the controversy which has been going on now in both of our county papers for some time between our road supervisor and our Probate Judge and Commissioners.

I would suggest this, that if our Supervisor has the only authority under the law to work our roads, that in my opinion he should have the support of not only the Probate Judge and our Commissioners, but every citizen of our county as well. Now if our Commissioners are to work our roads and to the people of Chilton County, they build the necessary bridges, then let them go to it, for there is plenty of work that is needed to be done. And the people, in my opinion, will soon demand action. I cannot think that any of our officers are liars, or that any of them would attempt to willfully misrepresent anything at all, but if this controversy goes on much longer what will the people think?

I think that real men, as I estimate all of these men to be, should be willing to give and take and get together on any matter, and especially one of so much importance to the people of our county as the working of our roads, and the keeping up of our bridges. Newspaper controversies I don't think will any longer be satisfactory, work is what we want. I would like to see our Democratic Administration be a success, nothing could give me more pleasure. I do not want to turn our county back over to the Republican party at all, but if we can't beat what we are doing and cooperate together, I think we had better turn it back over to the Indians. As I see it, we should abide by the law we are now under. Go ahead and work our roads and if it should prove to be unsatisfactory, then at the proper time repeat it.

United we stand, divided we fall
Yours most truly,
C. REESE MULLINS.

FOR ROAD CONDITIONS

Editor the News,
Dear Editor:

Recently I have had an opportunity to see some of the roads in Chilton County and contrary to the unjust criticism I found the roads and bridges in a commendable condition, judging from observation of these roads I believe that 80 per cent to 85 per cent are in good condition.

Yours truly,
JIM PARRISH.

State Farmers Want Simplified AAA Program

By J. W. Fant, County Agent

Alabama farmers want a simplified agricultural program that will limit the United States cotton crop to 30,000,000 acres in 1938, according to the opinions expressed at a program-planning meeting held in Auburn, August 12 and 13.

Bases for acreage, yield, and production for 1938 should be the average for the period 1933-37, which should apply to the states, counties, and individual farms, said another recommendation sent by the farmers to AAA officials in Washington.

The farmers also recommend that land drainage be given the same classification as terracing and that proper terrace maintenance be considered a soil-building practice. "Land terraced should be classed as soil conserving," the farmers said, "in which the terraces are built and the cash subsequent year crop is planted in the terraces which there are no cash crops planted on the level, and the recommendation is that the farmers be compensated for the terracing work."

for 1938. One proposal considered was by for simplification of the program for 1938. One proposal considered was for a uniform system for the United States that would set a payment to be earned by an individual farmer by balancing his crop plan along specified limits. Another proposal given consideration was based on an experimental plan now in use in Pulaski County, Arkansas, whereby certain farmers may earn a payment by matching the land diverted from cash crops with conserving crops of practices, while other farmers may earn a payment entirely by adopting soil conserving practices.

The report carrying all the recommendations has been sent to Washington for AAA officials to consider in formulating the 1938 program.

"Efforts are being made for details of the 1938 program to be announced by September 15," the AAA representatives told the conference. The meeting was called by Walter Rensselaer, Administrative Officer in Charge of the Agricultural Conservation Program in Alabama and was attended by 27 farmers from all sections of Alabama.

It Pays To Trade In Clanton!

CONCRETE . . . costs less

THE cost of concrete pavement is less than that of any other of equal load-carrying capacity!

Strong, rigid concrete pavement distributes the load over the subgrade as no other pavement of comparable cost can do. As a result—concrete withstands the punishment of a rapid succession of big buses and high speed trucks and trailers through summer heat and winter cold. Concrete can take it! As Henry Ford has said—the modern concrete highway is "unbeatable."

On great super-highways, as on 2-lane pavements—the first cost of concrete is less than that of any other pavement of equal load-carrying capacity—and of course upkeep is less—and driving costs are less and comfort and visibility and safety are greater.

Big Progress in Chick Care and Feeding Since 1900

Weight at Six Weeks Increased 150%; Livability Almost Doubled.

Tremendous progress has been made in poultry raising the past three decades. Both in chick feeding, and in chick management have new and important discoveries been made.

Before 1900, chicks hatched out into a world where bugs, worms, weed seeds, corn bread, rolled oats, table scraps and clabber were the chief starting feeds. Only the strongest had a chance to live. They were hatched and brooded under hens. More than half died before they were six weeks old and those that did live seldom weighed more than a pound at six weeks.

In 1900, commercial scratch feeds for chicks were first placed on the market. Chicks fed these feeds showed an improvement over those on the "bug-diet." In 1904, a leading feed manufacturer brought out a laying mash for hens, which many poultrymen used as a starting feed. Although not intended for them, chicks came through the six weeks starting period far more satisfactorily on his feed. Sixty-five per cent of them lived, with an average growth of three-quarters of a pound at six weeks.

Alfalfa Meal Added

The addition of alfalfa meal to the laying mash fed baby chicks was one of the important innovations of 1915. The same feed manufacturer who had brought out the first laying mash pioneered alfalfa meal, a vegetative source of minerals, vitamins and proteins.

Research workers now turned their attention to the problem of preventing rickets in young chicks. This leg weakness which sent many chicks to an early grave, could be prevented, it was found, if enough vitamin D was included in the starting ration. Good grades of cod liver oil provided this necessary vitamin. In 1922, cod liver oil became one of the standard ingredients in chick feed. The addition of cod liver oil greatly simplified brooding since an abundance of vitamin D in the starting feed eliminated the necessity of keeping chicks in the sunshine to absorb vitamin D from the sun's rays.

80% Livability With Startena

A red-letter year in chick history came when Startena, a special mash feed made to fit the nutritional needs of baby chicks, was put on the market. Although somewhat inadequate judged by the standards of 1937, Startena was a tremendous improvement over any feed up to that time. By feeding Startena, chick raisers found that livability could be stepped up to 80 per cent, and the weight at six weeks increased to an average of a pound—almost double what chicks had weighed previous to 1900.

But there were still other valuable discoveries to be made. In 1928, soybean meal, a rich source of protein, was added to checkerboard Startena, and chicks did even better than before.

The year 1930 saw the appearance of all-mash Startena, a complete, all-in-one starting feed that solved the problem of what to feed baby chicks. Almost every nutritional need of the chick was met in this new all-mash starter. Only ten per cent died, and at six weeks birds averaged one pound.

Disease Cut Down

Since 1930, progress has been even more rapid. Feeding, breeding, and management have been tremendously stepped up. Improved incubation has resulted in stronger chicks. Improved brooders have greatly helped livability. Chicks today have every opportunity to live, compared to the chicks of thirty years ago who chilled in drafty houses or followed their mothers around in damp grass. Efficient sanitation agents have been very helpful in keeping surroundings and drinking and feeding troughs clean. Disease and infection have been cut down.

Since 1931, all minerals that go into Startena have been carefully balanced so that chicks get exactly the right amounts for best development. Proteins were synchronized in 1932, and the texture improved. Since 1934, ingredients going into checkerboard Startena have been biologically tested for growth. The net results of balanced minerals, synchronized proteins, balanced texture and bio-testing of ingredients was 93 per cent livability, bigger bones and better feathering, and an average weight of one and one-eighth pounds at six weeks.

Purinate, Pro-Vitamin A, Added

What a feast grandmother's chicks would have on today's Startena! In 1935 one of the most sensational and important announcements in animal nutrition was made by Purina research workers. A rich pro-vitamin A concentrate called purinate, which it was found could be profitably utilized as an ingredient in poultry rations, was announced to the poultry world. The addition of purinate was found to produce smooth plumage and healthier pullets. Chicks fed on mashies fed with purinate are guaranteed all the vitamin A they need for bodily requirements. As a result, livability at the present has been stepped up to 95 per cent and the weight at six weeks to a pound and one-quarter. The addition of niacin (vitamin B) to chick feed means better and faster growth.

SCHOOL ATTENDANCE WORK IN CHILTON CO., DURING 1936-1937

Annual reports show that Mitchell Dam School had the highest percentage of attendance of any school in the county for the entire year; a percentage of 98.7. The next highest in attendance was had by New Cedron, having an attendance of 96.07. The teachers in these three schools, and others with good attendance, are to be congratulated for their efforts in keeping the children "coming to school."

At the close of the first month of school there were 433 children of school age as shown by the census still not in school. This number was reduced until at the close of the fourth month of school there were only 92 children not enrolled in some school. Of this number some were not enrolled due to absolute poverty, others filed doctor's statements that they were unable to attend school. Some had married since the census was taken, which exempts them from compulsory school attendance. But there were others out due to sheer indifference.

The attendance worker finds many and various reasons why children are not in school or why they do not attend regularly. But these can usually be summed up into one of the following five reasons: 1. Illness; 2. Weather conditions; 3. Poverty; 4. Work; 5. Indifference. Often times the last three reasons go hand in hand, and the first one along with them.

Each principal is required to make a report to the superintendent's office once a week of all the children who have been absent without excuse in his school that week. These families are visited by the attendance worker and the reason for absence investigated. In some cases legal action must be taken before the child, or children, will enter school. During the 1936-37 school year 8 legal notices were served by the attendance worker and court cases had to be made out of two of these notices served.

A total of 441 visits were made to 289 families in Chilton County by the attendance supervisor during the school year of 1936-37. 38 of these visits were made to negro families, while 403 were made to white families.

During the month of August every family visited during the past year will be contacted again. We hope that many of the problems of last year year will be worked out, such as lack of clothing or books, before the beginning of school and many children who were late entering last year, or who never enrolled at all, will be there the first day of school.

School Attendance Supervisor, Chilton County.

CCC To Enroll more Boys In October, 1937

The regular quarterly enrollment to take place in October, 1937, will be one of the most extensive which the Civilian Conservation Corps has faced, according to information received in the Chilton County Department of Public Welfare today.

The number of vacancies in the camp to be filled with be especially large in view of the fact that (1) under the recent National CCC law all members of the Corps who will have reached their twenty-fourth birthday on September 30, and all members who will have had more than eighteen months total service in the Corps on September 30, will not be eligible to reenroll, (2) all "Local Experienced Men" will not be eligible to reenroll, (3) September 30 will mark the end of an enrollment period and an undetermined number of eligible men will not wish to reenroll, although they may be eligible to do so, and (4) replacements will be needed to compensate for discharges for acceptance of employment for other reasons during the quarter ending September 30.

Other provisions of the CCC bill both limited and broadened eligibility regulations of applicants. The enrollees must be within the ages of 17 and 23, inclusive, must be unemployed and in need of employment. When the applicant has needy dependents at home, he is required to allot a substantial portion of his $30 monthly cash allowance to such dependents. If there are no needy dependents, the enrollee is allowed to deposit his allotment in camp for payment to him upon his discharge.

When a youth enrolls, he is expected to remain in camp for at least six months, unless some extraordinary circumstance arises. Otherwise he causes the Government excessive expenditure for clothing, transportation, and other items, and does not fulfill his part of the enrollment agreement.

Applications may be placed, and further information may be obtained from Chilton County Department of Public Welfare at Clanton, Alabama.

A number of boys have asked to be considered for enrollment and have been advised to wait until September to file application. These boys may return at any time now and the Department will be glad to accept their applications.

Clanton Methodist Church News

We are happy to have had a better attendance at the Men's Bible Class last Sunday. Suppose we try to have a bigger attendance next Sunday. All who did hear her, we hope will carry the message to the others and may this class, which has a good regular teacher, also increase in attendance and membership.

Do you have children who are not coming to Sunday School? If so, don't allow them to be deprived of the benefits of the Sunday School any longer. We are quite proud of the Children's Department, and it your child is that age and not in Sunday School bring him or her along at 9:45 next Sunday morning and let your child enjoy Sunday School together with the ones who now enjoy it. The leaders of the children's Division are doing excellent work and that division is "booming."

We would not forget the splendid work each division is doing, but space prevents the mention of all of them at this time. To whatever division you belong, come on and do your best, and let's have a record Sunday School. Remember, the best could be better with your help.

The pipe organ has been repaired and sounds mighty like new. Members of the choir, you are urged not to fail to back our preacher with all your might.

Our One Hope was shown to us in a stirring message from our pastor at the 11 o'clock service last Sunday. Let's show our pastor that we appreciate him and his messages by attending next Sunday. It would be truly wonderful if every Methodist in Clanton would attend these services. Unalloyed blessings are bestowed with the hearing of these messages.

Will you be there next Sunday at 11 o'clock?

Simple Attachment Helps Cut Kudzu Hay

Auburn, Ala.—E. G. Disker, assistant agricultural engineer of the Alabama Experiment Station, has developed a mower attachment which thoroughly separates the long kudzu vines and enables one man to do a good job of cutting kudzu hay without assistance.

The attachment is very simple and can be made by most farmers or any blacksmith. Mr. Disker used these materials in making the attachment: (1) an iron bar 3-8 inch thick, 2 inches wide, and 3 1/2 feet long; (2) an iron bar 1/2 inch thick, 1 1/2 inches wide, and 13 inches long; and (3) a small rod 1/4 inch in diameter and 19 inches long. Any farmer desiring to make an attachment may obtain full instructions free by writing Mr. Disker, Auburn, Ala.

New Miracles Of The Photoelectric Cell
By James D. Purdy.
Director, Schools of Electrical Engineering, International Correspondence Schools

A METHOD of transmitting news bulletins by television has been developed by a New York inventor. At the transmitting station an electric typewriter types the bulletin on transparent tape. A light beam passes through the tape to a photoelectric cell which transforms the variations in light intensity into electric impulses that are sent out by short-wave radio. The receiving apparatus re-transforms the impulses into light of varying intensity and projects the original letters or numbers onto a screen.

The photoelectric cell and a light beam from a standard automobile headlight, from which all visible rays of the light spectrum have been filtered, are employed in the latest protective device against burglars or other intruders. By a system of mirrors the invisible light beam is reflected back and forth throughout the area to be protected. Energy released by any interference between the beam and a photoelectric cell or cells can be used to sound a bell or siren, or even to transmit an alarm by telephone.

Automobile headlights can now be tested by a photoelectric cell meter. When the device is placed against the lens of the headlight a dial reading gives the volume and intensity of light. Another device based on the use of the photoelectric cell has been developed to grade milk. The device measures the degree to which various samples of milk transmit light, and grades them accordingly.

The dangerous curve on the Montgomery highway, just north of Verbena which is rapidly becoming known as "Dead Man's Curve" will soon be completely eliminated, according to a statement given the News yesterday by Representative C. This curve is also one of the worst between Clanton and Montgomery and many serious accidents have been caused at both places. Just when the work will start was not given out.

Proof Of Age Of Pupils Entering First Grade To Be Required By Board Of Education

Approximately 500 new pupils will enter the first grades of Chilton County schools this year according to County Superintendent Luther E. Little. This means that 500 boys and girls will begin upon a new stage of their lives; a stage in which they will leave to some extent the constant care they have had at home for the first six years of their lives, and will begin learning to "make their own way," which is such an important part of their education. How very much greater will be their chances of success if they are free from physical defects! A little money invested in a pair of glasses, or in having decayed teeth repaired, or in having tonsils removed, may mean the difference between success and failure in their school life. Many parents realize this and are having necessary physical defects corrected. All parents should.

Must Prove Age

Attention. Obedience to the resolution recently passed by the County Board of Education requiring proof of a child's age upon entering the first grade. This proof can be furnished in either of two ways. The Birth Registration Notification sent out by the State Bureau of Vital Statistics when a child is about six months old is acceptable, and if the parents have this notification it should be sent or carried to the teacher. Information from it will be copied and the certificate returned. If the certificate is not available, application may be made on a blank furnished by the County Health Unit, or by the teacher and a School Age Card will be issued by the State Bureau of Vital Statistics.

Taxpayers of Chilton County are again reminded of the new Alabama law of the Homestead Exemption plan of taxes, according to Tax Collector T. L. McKee, who issued the following statement to the News this week for the taxpayers of this county: "To the Taxpayers of Chilton County: As you all know, the Legislature passed an Act to give you Homestead Exemption, which we all very much appreciate. I would like to insist that it is every taxpayer's duty to apply for this before October 1st, as you know that it is the beginning of another tax year and it will be compulsory for you to have this certificate before you pay your taxes. I do not know of any greater loss than that which is caused by neglect of doing your duty, and it is a duty that you owe to yourself and your family to get your certificate before October 1st.

Yours very truly,

Radio Hook-Up Of Police Cars Over State Is The Plan Of Alabama Highway Patrol

Highway Patrolmen Earl Henley and Wallace Waites, stationed in this county reported eleven arrests during the past few days in this county. These included two for failure to use flags or flares, 1 for having no clearance lights on truck, 2 for speeding, 2 for public drunkenness and 1 for no drivers license.

They also issued a warning to drivers of trucks to watch their speed on Alabama's highways and not to exceed 35 miles per hour. Trainers are also warned to display flags in the day and flares at night according to law when they park on the highways.

All vehicle drivers are cautioned to watch the passing of other vehicles on the highway while on hills or curves. This is also a violation of the law. It was also announced this week that the Alabama Highway Patrol plans the installation of radios in patrol cars and on patrol motorcycles throughout the state, within the next two weeks. Police calls of highway patrolmen will be made from Birmingham, Montgomery and Mobile. Patrolmen Waites and Henley will have arranged a place at the Thorsby Garage in Thorsby, for telephone service day and night.
